~ THE FALL ~

America has been blessed greatly by God. There's no other nation that can compare from that of Israel to how God has established this country. But America is not Israel. God has made a different covenant even though there are some similarities of the two. Both have experienced God's great blessings and punishment. Israel has real experience with this and now America is in line.

No one likes to talk about punishment, disasters to come, the loss of position, the fall from being great to losing most everything. Some won't accept the facts. Others know what is true but choose to ignore what is coming hoping it won't affect them. All of this happens because many of the gatekeepers which is the people of God haven't held the line of God's ways. They compromise and over time more of unrighteous living has gained more ground.

Today the problems and growing issues, America is caught up in will eventually cause the fall from God's blessings and removal of His protection and favor because so many of God's people love the world more than they do God. And now today we all are experiencing the uneasiness, the unrest of what is causing our country's crumbling ways to pile up around us.

Our hope, and only hope, is found still in God and our position with His Son, Jesus, who is the only Savior of the world. There is no other antidote, no other vaccine, nor special person that can help any of us but Jesus. Look to Him there's no other help that can save us from what is coming.

ASK THE MOTOR MEDICS®

Automotive Advice from the Under The Hood® Show

Dear Motor Medics,

My vehicles heater has been losing its ability to heat gradually over the past few years and it has reached the point of almost no heat and my wife says it's time to get it fixed or else. She's steamed and I'm freezing. I had it flushed a couple times and it seemed to work better for a short time but when I had it done this year it made no difference. The vehicle is a 2001 Dodge Caravan. Can you help me cool down my wife and heat up the van?

Thank you,
Terry in Sioux Falls South Dakota

Dear Terry,

Your problem is most common when the cooling system has not been flushed according to scheduled service times, but if it has been they may have not serviced the core. When we flush a cooling system we flush everything, not just the radiator. We remove the hoses to the core and rinse them with clean water and then connect our machine and completely flush the system. We also use a cleaner in the system before we flush it. These simple things can mean the difference between a heater core that goes the distance or one that fails prematurely. If your core has become so clogged that it can't be flushed enough to give proper heat then it will need to be replaced. Replacement can be very expensive so if it is determined that a new core is needed check around for prices.

Take care,
the Motor Medics

Dear Motor Medics,

I'm mad at my mechanic. I had my vehicle in for an engine replacement and it took a week longer than promised and after five days it developed an oil leak. I have a warranty and they did reimburse me for some rental car charges but have not gone back for repairs because I'm so frustrated with the problems. My wife says I should have them fix it since we paid the money. Then go elsewhere. What should we do?

Thank you,
Darrel in Arlington Texas

Dear Darrel,

I don't know what business you're in, but it must be one where there are never any problems, or your customers just don't care about them. I can tell you that any business has a main objective of keeping happy customers. We don't always hit our mark even in our own shop, but we try, and we make it right no matter what. Often a major job has unforeseen parts needs that can take an extra week or more. It's just unavoidable in rare cases. They did reimburse you for rental charges and that was not required. As for the leak I'm sure they don't like it any more than you and it was not there when it left their shop. It's the nature of mechanical things. If this shop knows your vehicle well and is honest it's smart for you to stick with them. If you don't go back, they can't help you. Call them.

Take care,
the Motor Medics

Dear Motor Medics,

My check engine light has been illuminated on my car for almost a year. When it first came on, I was alarmed so I had my mechanic check it out, they said it was due to a failed catalytic convertor and that it would be expensive to fix but since it would not harm the engine I could keep driving it that way and ignore the light. After about six months the engine started to run rough so I went back, and they told me I now had several other codes that needed immediate repair otherwise severe engine damage could occur. I don't want to spend the money on a convertor but how can I tell if something is failing if the light is already on for something else? My car is a 2008 Pontiac Grand Prix with 75k miles.

Thank you,
Ellen in Madison Wisconsin

Dear Ellen,

You can't tell if the light is already on. You need to repair the issue with the convertor in addition to the other system as well. I know many shops tell their customers a failed convertor won't hurt the engine so you can drive it but there are always side effects. In this case you can't tell what other problems may be in the system. This car may still be covered by an eight-year 80k mile federal emissions warranty that may cover the convertor. Check with a GM dealership to see if this is so.

Take care,
the Motor Medics

Dear Motor Medics,

I have a 2008 Chevy Silverado with an in-dash cd player and for about a year the cds have not been ejecting well. Now I have three stuck in the unit and one belongs to the library. The others I basically store in the unit to save space in the console. Is there any way I can remove them myself? I have tried to use a screwdriver to open the door but can't see much inside the unit.

Thank you,
Tom in Martinsville

Dear Tom,

Stop! Don't ever try to use anything to pull a cd from an in-dash unit. These units are extremely delicate and doing so can damage the unit. Even the act of pushing a cd into the unit instead of letting the unit pull it in slowly by itself can damage the delicate mechanism. The unit may have failed just because it is aging but it may also be due to the cds used in the unit. An in-dash changer like yours is even more sensitive to cd quality than single disc players and it is extremely important to only use cds that are perfectly flat without any kind of stick-on labels; anything else is prone to getting stuck. A radio repair shop may be able to remove the disc then fix the unit, but the cost often exceeds the price of a similar replacement. You may want to check with the library for the cost of a replacement CD.

Take care,
the Motor Medics
