SCORPIO

You'll speak freely, saying aloud what others keep to themselves. You may even write a poem or a powerful phrase that earns you global recognition.

ASK THE MOTOR MEDICS®

Automotive Advice from the Under The Hood® Show

Dear Motor Medics,

I'm a mechanic and my co-workers battle over fuel. Our pump octane is 88 to 93 and that's ethanol free for the 93.

The guys say they get better fuel mileage using 93 octane fuel in their Older 1990s trucks vs using the 88-90. I think they are nuts. These are stock trucks with only air filters and exhaust upgrades. I just don't think it's possible. I drive a modified 2000 Chevy truck with a higher compression 454 and it requires using the high-octane fuel to prevent damage. I have to pay more for it, but it is worth the protection for my engine. I only use the cheaper 88 in my 2020 Suburban. What are your thoughts?

Thank you,
Dave in Diana Texas

Dear Dave,

It's all about octane if we are talking about regular fuel with no ethanol in it so let's start with that. For the sake of this conversation let's talk about a 1998 Chevy truck with a 350 engine and we can throw a 2005 Buick Lesabre into the mix because they are basically the same for this conversation. If you burn 87 octane in these, your mileage may be slightly less than using 89-91 but if you compare 89-91 to using the high priced 93 it usually makes no difference. That's because you have more octane than needed. The cars computers can only make use of so much octane and then they max out. The bottom line is use the most your car can but no more to save the most cash.

Take care,
the Motor Medics

Dear Motor Medics,

Hi guys, I'm a full time RV traveler and have been for about five years. My wife and I have been very active sports people riding our bikes and motorcycles everywhere we go once we park so we have never had a car with us. We keep the bikes on a trailer behind the bus. We are going to start towing a 2020 Jeep Wrangler behind the bus and have heard many stories and opinions about how to tow and want to know what is best. If you had a choice, what would you do, trailer tow or dingy tow with the wheels on the ground?

Thank you,
Chance in Ogden Utah

Dear Chance,

Th RV life sounds fun. This question comes our way a lot. Our thoughts are to get the vehicle off the ground if you are going to put a lot of miles on but if the miles are short you can tow on the ground. The difference is that on a trailer there is zero wear and tear on the vehicle behind you. Being rolled on the ground the same tire wear is present and ball joint wear and bearing wear, etc. If you tow 50k miles you have added 50k to the vehicle even if the engine and transmission have not been on. That's something to think about.

Take care,
the Motor Medics

Dear Motor Medics,

I have been pulling a new boat this year and its about 3000 pounds heavier than my last one. This one is 26 feet long and weighs about 10k pounds. I pull the boat with my 2011 Ford F150 Eco boost which they say is rated to pull over 11k pounds. It pulls hard, but I think that is just because it is close to its load limit. My transmission temp gauge reads about 225 after a half hour of driving and a little more on hills but the engine stays under 230. Is there anything I should do to lower the temps and make it pull easier or is it ok the way it is? I do not use overdrive and keep the RPM at about 2000 rpm just like It would read if I were at a higher speed in overdrive without the boat.

Thank you,
Lewis in Canby MN

Dear Lewis,

That's some good info for us to give you some helpful advice. Sell the truck and buy one properly equipped or get a smaller boat. No other way to get around this one. You may see some listings for your truck showing over 11k pound tow ratings but that is only with the proper gears and tow package otherwise it's much less. The readings you give are high and the rpm description does not indicate the lowest towing gears. Verify with the manufacturer for sure how your truck is equipped before towing again.

Take care,
the Motor Medics

Dear Motor Medics,

On a trip across country for the holidays this year I had a coolant leak. I purchased a gallon of coolant and made it only 50 miles before the low coolant light came on again. This time I bought 3 gallons of coolant and made it about 100 miles before the light came on, so we stopped for the day, and had it checked out where they found a leaking radiator. The engine also became hot a few times, getting into the red and displaying a message that read stop engine now. Is there any chance of engine damage? It seems to run ok. What are you supposed to do when you are on the road with the family with no place to stop and you have a leak?

Thank you,
Brad in Liberal Kansas

Dear Brad,

Some engines have a better time with overheating than others, but it is never a good thing. The hotter the engine the bigger the chance of damage to it. At this point monitor the engines running and see how it is acting. If it starts to use coolant or runs poorly it may have a problem. When you do have a coolant leak you should stop the engine as soon as possible and tow if needed. KSeal added to a cool engine can help get you to the repair shop but don't forget to carry spare coolant. It won't stop every kind of leak but can be helpful.

Take care,
the Motor Medics
