Civil Service Title: Administrative Project Manager	Level: NM
Title Code No: 8300B	Salary: $53,702 / $61,757 - $118,412
Title Classification: Competitive
Business Title: Project Executive	Work Location: 30-30 Thomson Avenue, LIC, NY 11101
Division/Work Unit: Borough Based Jails (BBJ)	Number of Positions: 1
Job ID: 568529	Hours/Shift: 35 Hours

Job Description

Only candidates who are permanent in the Administrative Project Manager title or those who are reachable on the Promotional List (Exam #8529), or the Open-Competitive List (Exam #8042) may apply. Please indicate a copy of your Notice of Result card or indicate if you are already permanent in the title. If you do not meet the previously mentioned civil service criteria, you will not be considered for an interview.

The NYC Department of Design and Construction, Borough Based Jails (BBJ) Program, seeks a Project Executive (Design). The selected candidate will oversee design management for a multi-billion-dollar Design-Build program, including planning, scheduling, cost, design, and construction administration. The Project Executive will be responsible for management of all aspects of design and construction administration related to the City's BBJ program, including oversight of the Program Management Consultant. In addition, the candidate will be responsible for overseeing the development and execution of strategies to facilitate implementation and efficiently expedite this high-profile program through the various regulatory agencies, in close collaboration with several Sponsor Agencies and project stakeholders; reviewing and implementing research and development initiatives, including development of design/construction documentation/specification, vendor and Design-Builder payment processing; developing strategies for stakeholder communication which include social media, on-site mock-ups, media updates, work structure and community planning. The candidate will update the BBJ team on all project-related updates and issues; and liaise with sponsor agencies and all project stakeholders to review design, contract procurement, community concerns, and construction-related issues; manage a team consisting of engineers, architects, design-builders, project management consulting and administrative personnel; and participate in various agency task forces relating to relevant initiatives.

Minimum Qualification Requirements

1. A baccalaureate degree from an accredited college in engineering, architecture, landscape architecture, business administration, or public administration, and five years of full-time satisfactory experience in the planning, administering, or expediting of engineering design, and/or construction, or coordinating a very large engineering project, two years of which must have been in an administrative, managerial, executive, or supervisory capacity; or

2. A four- year high school diploma or its educational equivalent and nine years of experience as described in "1" above; two years of which must have been in an administrative, managerial, executive, or supervisory capacity; or

3. Education and/or experience equivalent to "1" or "2" above. An accredited master's degree in one of the disciplines described in "1" above, a law degree, or a valid New York State license as a Professional Engineer or Registered Architect or Landscape Architect may be substituted for one year of the required experience. However, all candidates must have the two years of the administrative, managerial, executive, or supervisory experience as described in "1" above.

Preferred Skills

Candidates should possess at least ten years of experience in management, project management, administration, and/or supervisory work; possess excellent verbal and written skills; and have knowledge of the City's infrastructure and public buildings system.

Residency Requirement

New York City residency is not required for this position.

Adams signs e-bike bills

BY DUNCAN FREEMAN
dfreeman@thechiefleader.com

Following a number of fires caused by exploding lithium-ion batteries that power the increasingly ubiquitous e-bikes and scooters, Mayor Eric Adams signed five bills this week tightening regulations on the sale of micro-mobility vehicles powered by the devices and mandating that the FDNY and Department of Consumer and Worker Protection conduct more outreach and education on how to use the devices safely.

“New Yorkers deserve access to safe devices and batteries, and this plan commits to designing a safe environment access program that will help New Yorkers transition away from the illegal mopeds and uncertified bikes and batteries to safe legal devices and batteries,” Adams said during a Monday morning event at which he signed the legislation.

“New York City is leading the way and raising this issue, and we hope that by acting today, that the state and federal government will follow suit.”

Fires caused by the exploding batteries resulted in 10 deaths and 226 injuries in 2021 and 2022, and in two deaths and 40 injuries through February of this year, according to the administration. The press conference, attended by Council members, state and federal representatives, FDNY officials and workers who use electric bikes, exemplified the broad coalition of New Yorkers seeking to stem the growing tide of fires attributable to the devices.

“I’m very proud to be standing here talking with so many important folks in the administration about this critical legislation that we were able to get passed, which will make a huge difference in tackling e-bikes and e-scooters and lithium-ion battery safety,” said FDNY Commissioner Laura Kavanagh, who has overseen a department reacting to the rapidly growing number of fires caused by the batteries, many of which are counterfeit and not certified by testing labs.

The FDNY issued 11 summonses, 14 violation orders and six criminal summonses during a joint operation Feb. 23 following a spate of fires caused by the exploding lithium-ion being poorly charged and stored. The Mayor this week signed legislation regulating the sale of lithium-ion batteries sold in the city.

Kavanagh has been calling for more city, state and federal regulations for months as her department battled e-bike fires, distributed education materials and also raided facilities where dozens of lithium-ion batteries are being illegally and dangerously stored.

Also present were Gustavo Ajche and Antonio Solis, co-founders of Los Deliveristas Unidos, the delivery workers’ organization which represents thousands of app-based delivery workers who rely on electric bikes and scooters for their demanding deliveries. “We are proud to stand with you, Mr. Mayor Adams,” Ajche said in Spanish at the bill signing. “Thank you for your commitment for building the first street deliverista hubs and for now delivering electrical mobility and safe battery charging action plan to keep New Yorkers like me, who depend on these batteries, safe.”

In addition to signing the bills, Adams announced the “Charge Safe, Ride Safe: New York City’s Electric Micromobility Action Plan,” a four-pronged approach to increase education and outreach, bolster regulations, help New Yorkers switch to UL-certified batteries and improve bike-lane and bike-parking infrastructure.

“The plan builds on the work we are doing, including piloting outdoor and e-micromobility storage, and charging areas at NYCHA properties and our deliveristas’ hubs. E-bikes and these scooters are here. You might as well get used to them,” Adams said at the close of his remarks. “Now we must make sure that they’re incorporated in our everyday lives in a safe and efficient manner.”

FDNY: Short 500 firefighters

additional engines be staffed by five firefighters rather than the typical four.

The Uniformed Firefighters Association has been pushing for fifth firefighters to be reinstated to engine companies across the city since they were removed in 1988 during a series of budget cuts, the union’s president, Andy Ansbro, said in an interview. Due to a Bloomberg-era agreement, 20 of the city’s busiest fire engine companies are staffed with five firefighters but several Council members and the UFA want that number increased in all companies.

Ansbro also noted his concern regarding the vacancy rate among firefighters, calling it a safety risk. He argued that the “sticking point” with hiring is attributable to the Department of Citywide Administrative Services’ inability to quickly fill positions. “They can’t process the applicants fast enough to fill the classes and that is really causing a danger to residents of the firehouses,” Ansbro said.

The union leader also said that with the increased overtime cap, the FDNY should end their policy of closing every fire company for eight days a year to allow firefighters to attend medical appointments or education seminars. Ansbro said the periodic closures can affect a response to fires, including earlier this month when the closest company to a Staten Island fire that injured 22 firefighters was closed.

“They should keep those companies open by staffing them with members’ overtime because it’s a danger to the public and firefighters alike,” he said. Ansbro, though, is optimistic that the vacancies will eventually be filled, and is eyeing broadening firefighting ranks and opening new firehouses. “It’s my hope that as the staffing levels increase and the overtime numbers come down, we can have a serious conversation about increasing the staffing of engine companies and opening new companies,” he said.

Short mechanics too

The committee’s report also sounded a note of concern regarding a decreasing number of dispatchers. The FDNY has 199 dispatchers on its rolls, according to the report, 30 percent below the department’s allotted headcount, which it noted is “causing a major strain within the Dispatching Unit.” The report blames increasing response times on these vacancy issues. The lack of dispatchers “places both the public and the personnel in increased danger,” Barzilay told The Chief.

And a shortage of mechanics has affected the department’s ability to maintain its equipment, delaying necessary repairs on ambulances and some fire engines. Ambulance response times climbed during a four-month period ending in October 2022, and the FDNY continues to remove ambulances from their roster, Barzilay said, despite the rise in calls.

Kavanagh blamed the equipment shortage on issues with the global supply chain and told the committee that the FDNY is currently using 25 fire trucks that were supposed to be taken out of service but haven’t yet because the department lacks replacements. The commissioner said she’s written to the city’s supplier on several occasions to resolve the issue, but shipping delays continue to stymie the department’s efforts.

Despite the department’s vacancy issues, Council members lauded the FDNY, with committee Chair Joann Ariola saying, “No matter how low your staffing is, you really do get the job done.”
