West family named Farm Family of the Year

By Zach Killian

Jason West, along with his wife Laura and two daughters Landen, 19, and Paisley, 13, were named the Bradley County Farm Family of the Year. The family runs West Oak Farms.

Laura comes from a line of farm families. Her grandparents Mary and Eugene Hamilton and her father Terry Don Pritchard were past farm families.

The West family has been farming and ranching for five years when they broke ground on their first chicken houses.

Jason was not raised on a farm, but he worked for tomato and cattle farmers as a teenager. His wife Laura, however, was raised on a cattle and tomato farm. Jason and Laura married in 2002.

After getting married, Jason grew a love for farming. During that time, he worked for AT&T for over 13 years. On the weekends, he would spend time working on cows with Laura's family on their farm. Eventually, Jason purchased Laura's family farm as a gift to her for Christmas. They were able to turn the family farm into a poultry and cattle farm.

Laura resigned from her job before the breeder houses were built so she could run the farm. Jason said it was always a dream of his to one day be able to come home and become a full-time farmer. He said he wanted to give his full attention to the farm and his family. After many prayers, Jason said he had the opportunity to leave his AT&T job to focus on farming, so he left in 2020 to become a fulltime poultry and cattle farmer.

Stay Away From Church?

Sooner or later we all face the same temptation. The same problems of human life reoccur in every generation.

Psalms 73 records the experiences of a good man, who in an evil hour was sorely tempted to call it quits. He felt heaven terribly mistreated the person who was trying to do the right thing. The "bad guy" seemed to be winning.

Church is a necessity. Without it, we will be misled. Without it, our lives can be tied to the wrong answer. Without worship, the unbeliever always seems to have the best of it. The "bad guy" is always the winner. But seen from God's point of view, the interpretation is entirely different. When you see it God's way, you are amazed that you could have ever felt as you did.

We cannot afford to have our thinking twisted. That is what will happen if you give up the church habit. Yes, it will! You will begin to believe that wrong is right and that losers are winners.

The church service gives you an opportunity to think. Yes! Sit in that pew and think. Better to sit there for an hour on Sunday morning and think, than to sit in hell for eternity and think.

Think how much older you are and how much closer to the end you are. Think what you have done with your life so far. Think about the record that will be revealed when you face judgment. Think about your influence as a parent. Think about the lies you have told. You are foolish to imagine that these things do not exist in your life just because you keep so busy you have no time to think about them.

The church service gives you an opportunity to hear the message on how to get to heaven. Come, now! Use your common sense. You need to know how to get to heaven and what is needed to get you there.

Of course, if you are not interested- if you do not really care what happens to you or where you will spend eternity- that is your business- Stay away from church! Sleep and lounge all day, Sunday. We will tell your neighbors who attend your funeral that you did not know where you were going, and what is more, you did not care.

Perhaps you do care. That is why you have church service scheduled in your community. Get to it!

Ran into Attorney David Hargis, middle son of Noma Watkins and the late James Von Hargis, at a social event in Little Rock the other day.

Mrs. Watkins was left with three little boys under age six when she became a widow at the age of 23.

"She sure is ambitious for those boys", a fellow teacher, Vernell Doss, told us once, in apparent amazement.

"She's planning on those boys being lawyers and stuff like that," said Vernell.

Her eldest is Warren's last graduate of West Point: her youngest, a teacher in Camden.

And her beautiful daughter, at 5-10, is the wife of a physician in Arkadelphia.

She must have, as you would deduce, been doing something right.

We decided a good while ago that our Schnauzer, Schnapps, was "too fat."

Consequently, we take her along on mile-long walks after breakfast. She likes the walks better than we do and won't permit walkin' time to go by without all of us hittin' the pavement. Those mile-long walks should be longer than that.

Maybe we can screw down our energy and get that done soon.

West Oak Farms has 80 acres of hay where they yield 10 per acre. The farm has 44,000 breeder hens per year, 5,000 breeder roosters per year and over 550,000 dozen hatching eggs per year. They have four production units. The family farm has one commercial Brahman Bull and three Commercial Brahman

West Oak Farms is contracted through the International Poultry Breeders located in Rison. Their contract consists of breeder houses that supply and hatch eggs. They also supply hay, which is sold to other farmers in the area. The hav is given to the livestock to ensure they are fed through the winter months. Litter is also produced because of the poultry houses. The litter is used to fertilize our farm land, so that it will grow strong and healthy. It is also sold to local and delta farmers to fertilize their fields and land for crops and livestock.

Jason said on their farm, they truly believe protecting the environment and believe it is very important. They strive to respect the environment as much as they can. On the farm, they recycle their poultry litter and use it to fertilize their own fields for hay to ensure that the livestock will receive the best nutrients. They purchase, replace, and maintain new cool cells each year to help with electric bills. It also helps with conserving energy while cooling down poultry houses. ### Arkansas History Minute

by Dr. Kenneth Bridges

"A public office is a public trust," President Grover Cleveland once declared. Though it is often the opposite that usually gains attention, many men and women have served in various offices with dignity, integrity, and competence. Arkansas has had several such figures. One such figure was Kaneaster Hodges, Jr., a U. S. Senator for Arkansas for just 13 months in the Hodges was born in Newport in August 1938, the second of six children. His father was a respected local attorney. His father encouraged public service and faith. The younger Hodges would eventually become an Eagle Scout; but instead of a law career, he was drawn to a career in ministry instead.

He graduated from Princeton University in 1960. After marrying his high school sweetheart Ruth Williams, he enrolled at the Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University in Dallas. After his ordination, he and his wife were sent to a series of Methodist churches in Massachusetts in 1963. In 1964, he took a position as a chaplain at the notorious Riker's Island prison in New York City. After a short time, Hodges decided to go to law school. He returned to Arkansas and enrolled at the University of Arkansas Law School and graduated in 1967. He returned to Newport and joined his father and brother at their law firm.

Hodges bought his own farm while working as an attorney and also served as a deputy prosecutor for Jackson County. In 1974, he was appointed to the Arkansas Natural Heritage Commission. In 1975, he was named legislative secretary for Gov. David Pryor, helping steer his ambitious agenda. In 1976, he was named to the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission. In November 1977, longtime U. S. Senator John L. McClellan died. Pryor, under his powers as governor, appointed Hodges to fill the remainder of McClellan's term.

This thrust Hodges unexpectedly to national prominence. Under Arkansas law, no one appointed to fill the remainder of a term of an elected office can run for a full term in the next election. Hodges knew this would only be for a short time, but he made the most of it.

His term, which started on December 10, would last only a little more than a year. However, in that time, several important laws were advanced with Hodges's support. The Inspector General Act created the office of inspector general for several large agencies to investigate corruption and malfeasance and became an important effort at reigning in corruption at lower levels of government in the wake of the Watergate scandal earlier in the decade. The Ethics in Government Act required disclosure of finances and employment history for federal employees, and the Civil Service Reform Act created the Office of Personnel Management to help oversee hiring and personnel

He also supported the Pregnancy Discrimination Act, the first federal legislation to protect the employment rights of pregnant women. Legislation supporting research into solar power was passed as well as legislation supporting energy conservation and even bankruptcy reform. Legislation was also passed with Hodges's support putting Susan B. Anthony on the silver dollar starting in 1979, the first woman to be depicted on an American coin.

Some controversial legislation was also passed during 1978. Airlines were deregulated, lifting federal controls on pricing and airline routes. The Panama Canal Treaty was ratified after years of negotiation between the U.S. and Panama, which returned control of the canal territory to Panama by 1999. Though the treaty had been negotiated through both Republican and Democratic administrations and ratified with bipartisan support, the return of the canal territory prompted sharp criticisms.

Pryor was elected to the seat in November 1978 and would serve until 1997. After Hodges's short time in the Senate ended on January 3, 1979, he quietly returned to Newport. Only 40 years old when he left the Senate, Hodges still had a lot of work to do. He continued to work as a lawyer and farmer and also worked to raise money for charitable causes across the state. A reading room was named at the University of Arkansas in honor of his fundraising work for the university. He continued to be a familiar face in church pulpits across the region in the ensuing decades, happy to step in when a guest preacher was needed to fill in. Hodges died in Little Rock in March at the age of 83, widely mourned across Northeast Arkansas.

Arkansas's education system greatly depends on our ability to attract and retain teachers. We need to make sure the pay reflects the importance of their job and our respect for their role in shaping the lives of the next generation of leaders.

When the pandemic impacted the world, our schools were heavily burdened. Education could not waiver even during a time when things felt so uncertain.

Arkansas was one of the few states that kept schools open thanks to the amazing teachers in our state. In fact, Arkansas ranked #2 in the nation for days of in-classroom instruction during the pandemic. That puts us in front

When is the right age to that it depends on the ability of your child to understand the concepts. I know of very young children that are able to understand the concept of owning a small amount of McDonald's in what is called a stock. If you are interested in your children getting a head start on finance and investing, just ask them. If they show any interest, then you can expand on their understanding as they grow. My first stock was 10 shares of Wendy's that cost around $25.
