Oak Dale Tree Farm's long history in Bradley County

Special to The Eagle

On Bradley County Road 8 North stands a homemade green sign with four others attached. Each is a little different, but they all tell the story of the Reaves family, which started in the late 1700s.

William Reaves started his thriving plantation in Wayne County, North Carolina, sometime in the latter part of the 18th century. His will, dated October 30, 1790, showed he had ten living children at the time: Adam, John, Jesse, William, Laddy, Stephen, Elizabeth, Peggy, Lovett, and Lee.

One of his children, Lovett, eventually moved his family near the forks of the Coosa and Tallapoosa Rivers in northern Montgomery County, Alabama. Land transactions between him and other individuals provide a look into what he was doing in the area. He owned several hundred acres, and his children followed suit by purchasing land in the area and adjoining counties.

Eventually, Lovett Reaves, Sr. visited what we now know as Bradley County, Arkansas. What he found was fertile, rich land suitable for farming. Wishing to bring his family to this new area, Lovett traveled back to Alabama to prepare. He, unfortunately died in 1835 before he could see his wish fulfilled.

Despite his passing, Lovett's widow, Eleanor Jane, also known as "Milley," along with five of her ten children, Matthew, Joseph, Reuben, Lovett, and Fannie Jane, traveled with other families and settled in the Warren, Arkansas area near the Saline River in 1836.

Lovett Reaves, Jr. carried on his father's work, buying and selling many acres of land, according to Bradley County Court House records. He and another man established a tanning yard in 1847 as a source of income. Due to the coveted nature of tanned leather, some say this was one of Warren's first industries.

Lovett would go on to marry Julia Caroline Evans in Bradley County. His family would continue to care for the land their family found so beautiful centuries ago. Many stated in Bradley County and the surrounding area. Richard Lovett Reaves became a successful farmer in the community. His son, Larry Reaves and his daughter JoAnne Reaves Myres, now own that property.

The Oak Dale Farm was recently recognized as a Century Farm and a Centennial Family Forest, as denoted by two of their four signs. The gold Tree Farm sign shows their commitment to sustainably managing the land as it marks the farm has been certified with the organization for 50 years or more.

The Reaves family story isn't over just yet. It may have taken over 200 years to get to where they are today, but they plan to keep this forest a family forest for many more years to come.

Warren business owner arrested for property theft

According to the Warren Police Department, local business owner Daniel R. (Danny) Cook was arrested on two counts of theft of property. Cook is the owner and operator of Cook's Heating and Air in Warren and is the former publisher of The Eagle Democrat.

Tuesday, August 2 the Warren Police Department requested a hearing in front of Judge Crews Puryear for probable cause of alleged felony theft of property by Cook. Judge Puryear found probable cause and issued an arrest warrant.

On Wednesday, August 3, another probable cause hearing was held before Judge Robert Gibson for another alleged theft of property. Judge Gibson also issued an arrest warrant based on probable cause.

Cook was arrested Wednesday morning at approximately 10:45 a.m. for both warrants. Cook is accused of stealing two air conditioning units from local businesses in Warren. Cook's first appearance hearing was set before Judge Gibson. Cook's commercial bond was set at $7,500.

According to investigators, Cook has bonded out of jail.

Cook's attorney, Robert Bridwell of Lake Village told the Eagle Tuesday that he was still gathering information and at some point in the future he would be able to comment on the case.

No formal charges have been filed at this time.

According to the WPD the case is still under investigation and the Bradley County Circuit Clerk's office and the WPD stated they were unable to release any further records.

New school route mapped

Beginning Wednesday, August 10, 2022, please be cautious of the new traffic flow that will be in effect for the Warren School District School Campuses. Below is a diagram that gives a visual of how traffic will flow for ABC Preschool, Brunson, Middle School, and High School. This is in preparation for additional traffic when the new Elementary building opens. Please be patient and pay attention as this is a new process of entering and exiting these access points. Traffic is usually heavier and more congested the first few weeks of school, so be aware and proceed with caution.

Chamber of Commerce discuss food trucks, Make Warren Shine dissolves

By Zach Killian

With food trucks becoming popular in Warren, the Bradley County Chamber of Commerce discussed membership rates for local food truck businesses at the chamber meeting on Monday.

Chamber of Commerce Director Terri White said food truck owners did not want to join the chamber due to the membership price being high for them. She suggested giving food truck owners a special membership rate of $100 to join the chamber of commerce, instead of the $180 membership fee. Some of the members said the special rate might cause issues with other restaurant owners wanting to join. After some discussion, there was no action taken.

White announced the organization Make Warren Shine would dissolve. The organization plans to use the rest of the funds until it runs out.

BCMC updates hospital security policies

By Zach Killian

The Bradley County Medical Center (BCMC) has updated their security and safety policies for staff and patients.

The BCMC contracted with Handley Investigations and Security Services (H.I.S.S.) to provide trained and armed security officers. Officers will be on the premises from 5 p.m. to 5 a.m. Monday through Thursday and 5 p.m. to Monday at 5 a.m. The officers' goal is to "protect life and property of all persons on hospital premises and patrols hospital buildings and grounds to deter crime, prohibited activities, and unruly behavior." Officers will also respond to the security needs of the hospital staff, patients, and visitors and greet and screen patients and visitors upon arrival.

According to the BCMC building safety report, the mission and functions of the security officers include: assisting to create a safe work environment for employees and an effective protection service for patients and visitors; to prevent crime and protect property; to provide an appropriate and immediate response to requests for assistance; to liaise with police and other law enforcement agencies; to advise the administration or nurse manager out of hours, of any serious incidents immediately; to complete a record of incidents occurring; to assist in the management of security issues that arise in the event of any external disaster, bomb threat, or fire emergency.

The BCMC also made changes to the ER entrance. The entrance for patients that arrive by ambulance and other patients will still enter through the sliding glass doors. The glass doors will no longer open automatically but will require a name tag or ringing of the doorbell to be let in. All others will enter at the ramp where security will be posted to screen visitors. Visitors are asked to use the entrance at the registration office. Visitors will follow normal screening procedures upon entering the hospital.

The front door of the hospital on Bradley Street remains closed to the public.

Passin' the Faith Along

IS GOD TRYING TO SPEAK TO YOU?
I awoke recently during the night to the sound of rain. After all the very hot and dry weather we have been experiencing, it sounded wonderful. I was reminded of a time of a great drought during the days of Elijah and Ahab. Elijah said something very interesting about the sound of rain. It's recorded in I Kings 18:41 "And Elijah said to Ahab, get thee up, eat and drink; for there is a sound of abundance of rain."

Now the rain had not even a cloud in sight. But Elijah is listening to God rather than all the people who are complaining about the drought. Ahab believed and acted on the report of Elijah.

Sometimes all the voices around us are speaking gloom and doom and it is easy to get so caught up in the sound of their words that we can't hear what God is saying.

My advice...turn off the complainers and naysayers and listen to God. In the middle of all the other voices around us, God is trying to speak comfort and assurance. Be an Elijah... be an Ahab...turn off the voices of gloom and doom and hear what God has to say.

THE ILLUSTRATED BIBLE

Then you will call,
and the Lord will answer;
you will cry for help,
and He will say:
Here am I.

Reminiscing from the past . . .

Oldtimer's Notebook
By Robert L. Newton

The publishers of The Eagle Democrat have chosen to publish articles from the past Oldtimer's Notebook in memory of Robert L. Newton. This article was first published June 21, 2000.

My parents had the little house at 305 West Pine Street built in the middle 1920's.

The late Johnnie Kight (his wife was Ruth Pennington Kight, a teacher) built the house on a turnkey job for under $3,000.

The price included Mr. Kight's personally finishing the oak floors...by hand.

My father had saved enough money to pay for the house by teaching school, working in the El Dorado and Smackover oil fields in the summertime, later running the YMCA, where his salary never topped $200 monthly (he was making $150 a month when he died, at 51, in 1942...I thought he was an old man).

In The Old Days, when young men married, they were supposed to have saved enough money to build a house: my father did that on his school teacher, oil field roustabout, and YMCA leader funding.

The Lawrence Derbys senior had built at 307 West Pine, next to their parents, the S.B. Meeks: my folks bought the lot at 305.

The house had (has) two bedrooms with what the oldtimers called a "sleeping porch" on the back side.

One bath, of course: my parents enhanced their income in the 'thirties by renting the "guest room" to young teachers like Joel Dean Cunningham Hedrick, Mary Louise Holland Reaves, and the late Lib Steward Weiss.

How we all got in and out of that one bathroom I can no longer imagine...but we did.

My father had given my mother a 1922 coupe of the Model T make bought from J.P. Lambert, predecessor to the late Garland Blankinship as Ford dealer here.

They had a tiny garage built southwest of the house: later the garaged housed, successively, a 1933 Plymouth, a 1937 Plymouth, a 1947 Ford, a 1949 Plymouth, a 1960 Simca Aronde (of the French make) and finally a 1959 Chevrolet we gave to Mary K. Dearden, mother's caretaker at The End, when the move was made to the excellent care of Sue Sims Wagnon, RN, plus her staff, then at what we called "Pine Lodge".

The little Chevy II was sold to somebody who resides in the Willoughby neighborhood: still runs, tho' it has crash wounds of various kinds, put there when my mother would gently side-swipe people parked at Dr. Marsh's office on North Main and not-so-gently back into people at the Kroger lot.

The house at 305 West Pine, like everybody else's at the time, was heated either by a wood stove or a fireplace. We had wood stacked in the backyard: one of the chores was to carry in wood and put it on the back porch.

During the Depression, homeless men would come

Gregg Reep is officially on the November ballot as a candidate for Mayor of Warren after turning in his signature petition Wednesday, August 3, 2022. to our back door and ask for something to eat: mother always obliged them but insisted they carry in one or two armloads of wood to "earn their dinner".

She would give them a loaded plate on the backporch: she said she was touched once when a man bowed and said grace over the plate, unbeknownst she was watching.

Later, they built the big natural gas pipeline from the Sterlington, La., area to St. Louis.

It goes through Wilmar; Warren customers were given a chance to have a line put in.

That gave us a little gas stove in the bathroom and a rig in the kitchen that would produce hot water if you lit a fire half an hour before. We still heated the hose with what was called a "heatrola" in the hall.

Later, Mother got her beloved floor furnace in the hall...and gas logs in the living room.

House was comfortable in the winter.

Spring and fall, too.

Summer was a different matter.

Mother wouldn't agree to the installation of an attic fan, insisting the devices, which sucked in air from the outside, also sucked in dust and dirt.

My parents bought a little Emerson electric fan in the summer of 1929 when they expected the arrival of their first (and only) child.

They'd run the fan a little while at bedtime, wafting the air around just a little (not a lot).

Fan was faithful: we still have it...it's now 71 years old. Still runs, still oscillates.

Windows were all open at night, of course.

You'd hear the town clock striking off the hours, the W&OV cranking up for business at about 4 a.m., plus surely the mill whistles at 5:30 a.m., summoning workmen to shifts that began at seven.

If the wind was right, you'd get the aroma of freshly-cut pine and oak: if your screens didn't have perforations, you could keep the mosquitoes out...if not, they buzzed around your head as you sought gentle rest in the arms of Morpheus.

Occasionally, the fire siren on top of the city hall would sound: we'd all jump up and go either out back or out front to see if we could see a tell-tale glow of somebody's property being consumed by the flames.

Warren then had one firetruck, of the Dodge make, a 1930 model: it was profoundly-piloted by Cab Tucker, grandfather to Pat Tucker and Rusty Rowell.

Too, sometimes the mill whistles would sound in that panicky "toot toot toot" cadence that meant there was a fire on the plant: we still remember it when Southern's whistle keened in the late evening, telling workmen to come fast to the plant: we still remember it when Southern's whistle keened in the late evening, telling workmen to come fast to the plant where they would discover the dry kiln area in flames.

Fire just about put Southern out of business, but Southern's owners were smart enough to get a young Minnesotan named W.R. (Dick) Warner to come down and see what could be done.

Six decades later, Southern remains.

This was in the days of "front porch sittin'".

Our front porch was too small for many chairs, so we had three or four canvas lawn chairs set up in the shade of a giant oak tree in our front yard.

We'd sit out there in the "cool of the evening", as the book of Genesis says (if there happened to be any "cool of the evening" in sultry July and August sunset times).

We'd watch flying squirrels sail out of trees in the Derby yard, next to S.B. Meek's, and glide downward to our own big tree (killed, later, by a lightning strike).

People who could afford the dime or fifteen cents it cost then to go to the Pastime or Avalonn theaters would go there on summer nights "to keep cool" before repairing to Wayne's or some other watering hole for a nickel Coke.

There was not a whole lot of riding around in cars, tho' the natural regular route involved going south on Main, doing a U-turn in front of the post office, thense back north on Main for a U-turn at the present site of Kroger and Union Bank and Trust.

Asoline cost only 20 cents and could be gotten on occasion for 19.9 cents, but folks just didn't have the cash.

So help me.

The chamber board discussed the upcoming annual meeting. The nominating committee was chosen to nominate board members. The committee will consist of Warren Mayor Denisa Pennington, Kim Forrest, and Ron St. John. The meeting date was not set. James Wells told the chamber the old KFC building was being worked on and the owner told him it was going to be a tobacco vape shop and it will also sell fried chicken. The board discussed upcoming events in December. No dates were confirmed. The Bradley County Sheriff's Office submitted a donation request to the chamber for the National Child Safety Council. The organization produces materials on child safety, bullying, and drug education. The chamber voted to donate $187.50. The chamber will receive a $5,000 grant from FY23. The chamber has to meet certain criteria to receive the grant. COSL announces Bradley County tax auction results

The recent auction of tax-delinquent properties in Bradley County raised over $50,000, the Commissioner of State Lands announced. The auction drew 22 bidders, who purchased 12 of the 46 available parcels for a total of $50,464.53 for county and state government. The Land Commissioner's office holds one auction in each county each year to return tax-delinquent property to active status. Since Covid-19 forced the cancellation of 2020 auctions and delayed 2021 auctions, this year's auctions offer two years' worth of properties. "Just a small portion of property certified to our office goes to auction," Commissioner Tommy Land said. "The vast majority of owners redeem their property by paying the delinquent taxes. Of course, we always prefer that property be redeemed, but it is vital that the parcels return to the county's active tax rolls." The COSL office forwards taxes and interest to the county, whether that money is collected through redemption or sale. "Last year, this office sent more than $16 million to school districts and county governments," Land said. "Of that, $72,204.29 went to Bradley County, helping fund everything from roads to schools." Property owners have 10 business days to redeem parcels that were sold at auction. This can be done online at www.cosl.org, using a credit or debit card, or owners can call 501-324-9422 to request a Petition to Redeem. If a parcel is not redeemed within 10 business days of being auctioned, the COSL will issue a Limited Warranty Deed to the buyer. Property that did not sell at the public auction will be available after 30 days and can be purchased through an online auction by viewing the Post-Auction Sales List at www.cosl.org.

Retired teachers and school employees meet

Special to The Eagle
Members of the Bradley County Retired Teachers and Employees Association met Monday, August 1, in the First United Methodist Church in Warren with 36 present from Warren and Hermitage. ENJOY YOUR "RETIRE-MINT" was the theme of the meeting and was carried out throughout the meeting. Jonalyn Reep serves as president of the group. Retirees in the last few years from hermitage and Warren were recognized. Each retiree received a crystal candy dish filled with assorted mints.

Tables were centered with mini-pots of mint plants in MENTOS boxes with Mentos and mints at each place setting. Every person received a mint plant to take home; the potted mint plants were given by Pastor Castillo and Dinora, his wife. Retirement honorees included Tommy Howsen, Marilyn Johnson, Deborah Jones, Linda McDiarmid, LaDonna Marsh, Judy Moring, Susan Scott, Joyce Smith, Linda Thompson, and Colleen Watkins. Joy Stewart, treasurer, reported that the Silent Auction held in the May meeting netted over $1700, which is designated for a scholarship to a Bradley County student, who is a sophomore or above majoring in education. Lorin Mc-Loud shared his experience from writing a former teacher. Bobye Anne Bryant shared her experience in teaching a "chubby ninth grader in Hot Springs who would now be called a nerd" (by the name of Bill Clinton) and emphasized that a teacher must respect every student and that one never knows the future of a student. BCRTEA meets the first Monday in August, September, and October and March, April, and May.

The Garden Bug Gloxinia

It's easy to see why this Brazil native has become popular in nurseries, flower shops and garden centers around the world. Gloxinia has bell-shaped, upright flowers that come in a range of striking, cheery colors. It likes bright, indirect light and should be planted in loose, well-draining, slightly-acidic soil. Feed your gloxinia once a month with houseplant fertilizer diluted to half strength, and keep its soil evenly moist, but not soggy.

Arkansas History Minute

by
Dr. Kenneth Bridges

During World War II, submarines provided an invaluable service for the United States as they silently patrolled the depths of the seas, protecting ships and shore alike. Among the many distinguished subs serving in the war and afterward was the USS Razorback, which is now docked in the Arkansas River in North Little Rock. Among its many adventures since its 1944 launch, perhaps its most curious journey is how a submarine with no connection to Arkansas became a mascot to the state and became the centerpiece of a naval museum deep inside a landlocked state.

Construction on the Razorback began in September 1943 at the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard on the Maine-New Hampshire border. It would be one of 120 Balao-class submarines, a 311-foot vessel powered by a diesel-electric engine. Typically, a submarine of this type had a crew of 85, including ten officers.

The submarine was not named for the famed Razorback hog but rather the Finback Whale, sometimes also called the Razorback Whale. The Finback Whale is a common type of whale seen in oceans across the world, including along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts of the United States. It is thin and up to 90 feet long. A sleek, razor-shaped fin on its back gives this species of whale the nickname "razorback."

The Razorback was launched on January 27, 1944, and was formally commissioned on April 3. It was sent to the Pacific where it supported efforts to retake The Philippines from Japan later that year, and the sub saw considerable combat. In December 1944, the Razorback damaged two Japanese freighters and sank a destroyer in separate incidents. While patrolling the East China Sea in February 1945, it sank four Japanese patrol boats. In two separate incidents, the Razorback helped rescue American airmen who crashed into the sea. After Japan surrendered, the Razorback was part of the American flotilla taking part in the surrender ceremonies in Tokyo Bay on September 2.

In the 1950s, the ship was refit with more modern equipment and served as part of anti-submarine training exercises in the Pacific in addition to its usual patrols. In 1962, the sub served in an observational role for Operation Swordfish, a nuclear test detonation at sea. In the mid-to-late 1960s, the sub periodically patrolled the South China Sea near Vietnam.

On November 30, 1970, the navy decommissioned the Razorback and sold it to Turkey, a NATO ally. The Turkish navy rechristened the vessel the Muratreis, after a former Turkish admiral, and put it into their service in early 1971. It would serve for 30 years in the Turkish fleet. In all, the vessel saw nearly 54 years of service, one of the longest careers of any submarine still surviving.

Though the submarine was named for a whale, it won a warm place in the hearts of Arkansans for invoking the name of the beloved Razorback mascot of the University of Arkansas. When news came that the Turkish navy was decommissioning the sub in 2001, Arkansans rallied to give it a final home in the Natural State.

Officials in North Little Rock as well as veterans groups worked with the Turkish government to purchase the Razorback and bring it to Arkansas. Turkey agreed to sell it to North Little Rock in March 2004 for $37,500, all of which came from private donations. The unpowered sub was towed that summer from Turkey to New Orleans, a voyage that took six weeks. Afterward, the Razorback was towed up the Mississippi River. However, just as it entered the Arkansas River, its progress was stopped over fears of low river levels that threatened the sub running aground. Two barges were arranged to lift the sub a few feet higher in the river, and it was brought to the Port of Little Rock without incident by August 29. The total cost of the voyage was reportedly more than $500,000.

The Arkansas Inland Maritime Museum was dedicated in March 2005 in part to tell the story of the famed sub and offer tours of the vessel. Today, the Razorback continues to be a popular destination for tourists in North Little Rock.

When it meets in special session the legislature will consider a $50 million grant program for school safety measures.

The governor proposed making grants available for schools that need financial help to implement recommendations made recently by the Arkansas School Safety Commission. Although its final report isn't due until October 1, the commission has already released a preliminary report with a long list of recommendations.

The governor reinstated the commission after the school shooting in Uvalde, Texas. It was originally formed in 2018 after the school shooting in Parkland, Florida.

The recommendations

this year include providing more access to mental health treatment for students, more training in mental health treatment for staff and the creation of behavioral threat assessment teams. The teams would be composed of staff who are trained to recognize potentially violent responses when students get bullied or stressed.

A school resources officer who is armed should be on campus at all times. The commission specified that if financially practicable there should be an armed presence in each building.

In a 2019 survey, 79 percent of Arkansas school districts reported having an armed officer. However, only 20 percent had an officer on every campus within the district.

The commission suggested that schools have an agreement with local law enforcement agencies to clarify the roles that school officers would have in the event of a shooting. School officers should receive specialized training, since their duties would bring them into constant contact with young people.

Another recommendation is that schools should keep their doors locked all day. Doors that are frequently used should be equipped with electronic access controls. Schools should have a master key to provide law enforcement in the event of a critical incident. Teachers and staff should be able to lock classroom doors from the inside, with access only for authorized personnel.

Visitors to the school should come and go from only one entrance, and schools should have a procedure for escorting visitors.

Schools should have security cameras that can be monitored by designated personnel and local law enforcement.

During emergencies, staff and teachers should have access to reliable communications such as intercoms, cell phones and two-way radios. Radio systems should connect with local law enforcement.

The commission also plans to recommend setting up a statewide hotline for receiving confidential tips about potential threats.

State government has a budget surplus of about $1.6 billion. The main issue during the special session will be a plan to accelerate the reduction of income taxes previously approved. When the tax cuts take full effect, they will save Arkansas families and businesses about $700 million a year.

A grant program can provide quick help with school safety measures that require money, such as electronic access controls on doors.

The commission's list of recommendations must be approved by the legislature to take effect. Also, the legislature will determine the rules for applying for grants.

Since 1997 Arkansas has had six students and one teacher killed in school shootings. Also, 13 students, staff and teachers have been wounded.

High prices at the pump, increasing costs at the grocery store and excessive monthly energy bills are all devastating for the hardworking Arkansans trying to make ends meet. For at least one northeast Arkansas resident, rising expenses made it too difficult to continue running his contracting business, so he closed the doors. We need policies that support small businesses, decrease the cost of fuel and food, and help grow paychecks. Instead, President Biden and congressional Democrats are on a reckless tax-and-spending spree. More spending and tax hikes are not the answer.

While we're experiencing a 41-year high inflation rate, the president and his allies are pursuing a plan out of touch with the priorities of the American people. In June, Arkansans spent an additional $577 as a result of inflation. This legislation fails deliver the relief Americans are demanding.

Far-fetched claims about the Biden plan reducing inflation were almost immediately debunked by the Penn Wharton Budget Model. Instead, it found the tax-and-spending bill will actually increase inflation over the next two years and then have no measurable positive long-term impact.

Not only does the Biden plan fail to tackle the current economic crisis, but it would also raise taxes on low- and middle-income earners. A tax increase is not just what I think would happen, but it is what an analysis by the non-partisan Joint Committee on Taxation determined.

The president is proposing job-killing tax hikes, enhanced IRS enforcement and Green New Deal policies that could worsen energy security and food security concerns while pushing us further into a recession.

After we've just been reminded of the importance of domestic production, the National Association of Manufacturers worries this bill could reduce our national output by $68.5 billion and result in more than 218,000 fewer workers in the economy.

Its tax on American manufacturers is a backdoor attempt by the president and his party to impose a rate increase on companies and penalize workers, ultimately making them less competitive globally and encouraging job offshoring.

If that's not bad enough, this reckless plan would funnel an additional $80 billion to the IRS to hire another 87,000 agents for enforcement of noncompliance by all taxpayers regardless of income.

This is extremely troublesome given the IRS's history of targeting faith-based organizations. The Biden administration wants to arm the IRS with more authority and manpower to pay for its far-left wish list, including imposing extreme environmental policies. Further attacking American-made energy will continue to drive up the costs to heat and cool our homes and operate our vehicles.

When it comes to agriculture policy, this bill sets a particularly bad precedent for farm bill programs.

As the lead Republican on the Senate agriculture committee, I'm alarmed this backroom, partisan approach eliminates input from farmers, ranchers and producers. It's their farm bill too and they must have a say on it.

By extending conservation programs until 2031, well beyond the life of the next two farm bills, the tax-and-spending bill deliberately takes away our ability to change and adjust these farm programs to meet the future needs of our nation.

Arkansans are already suffering the consequences of the Biden administration's spending spree. My bottom line is I won't support this Biden plan and risk raising our taxes.

He was born September 7, 1939 to the late Barney Lee "Dutch" Hargis and Willie Belle Adams Hargis. He was preceded in death by his parents and an infant daughter Denisa Kay Hargis. He was a 1957 graduate of the Banks High School. He later enlisted in the Marine Corp in 1962 and later transferred to the Army National Guard Reserves where he was honorably discharged in 1968.

Larry was a lifetime farmer. In his younger years he and Virginia raised many acres of tomatoes along with a cattle farm. He sold his tomatoes at the Warren Tomato Auction and to many personal customers who returned year after year for their Bradley tomatoes. When he wasn't raising tomatoes, he worked as a millwright for the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners Union Local 216 where he was a 60+ year member.

Larry loved to hunt, fish, raise a garden and watch the Arkansas Razorbacks. He enjoyed sharing the produce from his garden with family and friends. He raised a garden to the very end and although he couldn't tend to it, his family all helped. Additionally, he was a 19 year survivor of lung cancer.
