Potential plans shown for EMS building

By Zach Killian
Editor

The Bradley County Quorum Court heard from architects Blakeley Dunn and Matthew Roberts, of CADM Architecture in El Dorado on Tuesday, February 21 about a $2.1 million emergency services building. The county received funding through the American Rescue Plan. The building would be built on the land that was donated to the county by First Assembly of God in Warren on U.S. Highway 63. The building can also be used as a multi-purpose facility.

It is important to note this was a preliminary presentation and was not representative of the final product.

The planned facility would have 6,200 square feet of conditioned space and 1,800 square feet of unconditioned space. The facility would have an emergency operations area of 50 feet by 80 feet. There would also be a kitchen and break room, supplies storage room, conference room, and restrooms with a shower. The parking lot would hold 80 parking spots.

Bradley County Judge Klay McKinney and the quorum court members discussed the issues with the jail. The judge commented the county will have to have a serious discussion about the jail situation. It costs the county about $30,000 a month to keep up with jails.

Judge McKinney reported there were three wooden bridges left in the county. The bridges would be replaced with concrete ones by Southern States Construction, who won the bid for $49,500.

The judge also reported the recent ice storm caused $250,000 in damages throughout the county. He said most of the work was moving limbs and trees out of the roads.

The county received a grant to construct a shed for the solid waste department to put their equipment in. The grant cost $17,000. The total cost of the building construction is $36,000.

Bradley County Medical Center CEO Leslie Huitt presented her monthly report to the quorum court.

The next quorum court meeting will be at 6 p.m. on Monday, 20 at the courthouse courtroom.

BCMC discusses roofing issues

Growing maintenance issues was a big topic of discussion at the Bradley County Medical Center Board meeting on Thursday. BMCB Maintenance Director Tim Saunders shared the infrastructure issues that need to be repaired including the roof, the generator, and plumbing. The board members said the repairs needed to be fixed.

Board member Joe Don Greenwood said the roof should be fixed first.

"We need to make good decisions," said Greenwood talking about the funding and the repairs that are needed.

Saunders said most of the leaks from the roof were from the 1950 addition of the hospital.

The hospital bid out roof repairs and were waiting for more to come in.

The board members discussed the master plan that was presented to them at the previous meeting, with some expressing their disappointment in it and the lack of information on what needed to be done now.

The topic of building a new hospital was touched upon. BMCB CEO Leslie Huitt said they would need to be transparent to the public and that the decision needed to be a community decision.

The board listened to a presentation by the Delta Region Community Health Systems Development Program about a three-year grant participation program that was awarded to the hospital.

It was reported that hospital visits were up from the previous month in January.

Vice President of Support Services Marilyn Johnson said they applied for a grant from the USDA, but after they applied it was reported the funds from the grant were depleted.

Johnson said repairs were being made at Kids First after the building flooded.

The Bradley County Health Foundation will have fundraiser on May 5 and plans to feature Lumberjack Coach Bo Hembree and former Lumberjack, Razorback, and NFL player Jarius Wright.

The next board meeting will be on Thursday, March 23.

Brandon Baker was awarded Firefighter of the Year at the annual Fireman's Ball on Saturday. Michael Standfield was awarded Rookie of the Year and Clint Horn was named Officer of the Year.

Passin' the Faith Along

By REV. JIM BALES
Pastor - First Assembly of God
Sponsored by Merchants & Planters Agency

FAITH IS THE CAPACITY TO TRUST GOD WHILE NOT BEING ABLE TO MAKE SENSE OUT OF EVERYTHING

"For in the time of trouble He shall hide me in His pavilion: in the secret of His tabernacle shall He hide me; He shall set me up upon a rock." Psalm 27:5

"We need to run some tests." Those are words you never want to hear from a doctor. Our first inclination is to expect the worst.

Especially intimidating are the machines used to diagnose our disorders. The Magnetic Resonance Imager (MRI), with its on-so-narrow magnetic metal tunnel, can bring out the claustrophobia in all of us.

A test like this causes a real break in our daily routine. (Have you noticed that most of them are scheduled in the morning?) While we might never reach the point where we look forward to such "breaks" we can do what one woman did to use the time constructively.

Once inside the tube, she found herself on the verge of panic. Then she remembered some advice her pastor had given her. "When things are going badly for you, pray for someone else."

To simplify things, she decided to pray alphabetically. Several friends whose names began with A immediately came to mind. She prayed for Albert's sore knee, Amy's decision about work, and Andrew's upcoming final exams. She moved on to B and continued through the alphabet. By the letter D she was totally oblivious to her environment.

Thirty minutes later, she was only halfway through the alphabet, and the test was done. A day later, she used a short "break" in her doctor's office to complete her prayers while she waited for the test results, which showed no abnormalities.

When you find yourself taking a break that would not be your chosen activity, turn it over to your Father God and watch Him transform it into a special time for the two of you.

Oldtimer's Notebook

By Robert L. Newton

The publishers of The Eagle Democrat have chosen to publish articles from the past Oldtimer's Notebook in memory of Robert L. Newton. This article was first published January 24, 2001.

"Now is the winter of our discontent made summer by this sun of York," declaimed one of Shakespeare's heroes in the 400-year old play.

This has surely been one of those "winters of our discontent" in Bradley and adjoining counties, nothing like the ghastliness visited on folks in Little Rock, Hot Springs, Conway, and the like.

At Hot Springs, even the city water department nose-dived.

You couldn't flush a toilet, in other words.

Misery magnatum!
We need to think about all this next summer when we're griping about the heat.

Mr. Hank Binns died the other day.

Oldsters like me and some of the middle-aged too remember his bakery at the corner of Elm and Main, across from Hammons Undertakers.

Mr. Binns and his wife made wonderful finger rolls people just had to have here for parties: their doughnuts and jelly rolls were something to pick up at seven or so of a morning for breakfast.

Mrs. Binns was a sister to James R. Moseley, who worked at THE EAGLE DEMOCRAT over half a century (your scribe, the elderly onetime editor was there/ here but 45).

One of the Binns sons, Charles, worked at THE EAGLE DEMOCRAT for awhile.

Mr. Binns was also agent, for a time, for the distribution of the lamented ARKANSAS GAZETTE in Warren.

This was after the time when THE GAZETTE would come into Warren at midmorning on the W&OV (from Tinsman and the Rock Island line to Little Rock) and would be placed on sale, for a nickel, at Wilbur Glasgow's emporium on North Main, next to the current location of Warren Printing.

Passing of time should also note the loss to the community of the Rev. Dr. Frank Bradley, a pillar in the Bradley County community for many years.

Dr. Bradley was 84 (Mrs. Binns 91) and had resided in California many years.

But he came home as does many a Bradley Countian.

Dr. Bradley always had a cordial greeting: "You are lookin' good", he'd intone and it would always make you feel better, even if you were in the bank to cover an unexpected overdraft.

(As for overdrafts, they must drive bankers nuts: there seem to be three kinds of depositors in fiscal institutions. Included are the elderly, who always have lots of money in a checkin' account; some of the middle-aged, who know exactly how much money they have in the bank; and a third youthful group that thinks that, as long as they have checks, they have money. Not so, of course.)

You don't replace folk like Dr. Bradley, and surely not the gentle, hard-working Hank Binns.

Got a nice note at Yuletide from the Rev. Dr. L.W. Latham and his beautiful wife, Sandra, in far-away Tulsa.

Their son, Christian

Sophia Joy, daughter of Victor and Michelle Mendez, was diagnosed with a brain tumor on January 2, 2023. She was taken to the Arkansas Children's Hospital in Little Rock on January 3, 2023 where she underwent surgery to remove the tumor.

After surgery, the tumor was tested and found to be cancer. She remained in the ICU for about a month. She has now been moved to a regular room and must have daily radiation treatments for about six to eight weeks.

Her mother, Michelle, has not left her side. Even after they come home there will be a need for a night nurse for an undetermined time.

Michelle and Victor are determined to do whatever necessary to help Sophia Joy. There are those of us who know them that want to help do something.

An account has been opened at Union Bank in Warren. The account is under the "Sophie Joy Mendez Donation Account". If you would like to make a contribution, make your donation at Union Bank in Warren.

were summer "employees" of Bradley Lumber Company of Arkansas, under the direction of Gordon Harrison and several of his subordinates, including Ben Reep, John Woodall, Royce Poole, and especially Roy Creed, who died the other day.

Roy was "shipping clerk", directing a bunch of us in loading bundles of hardwood flooring into boxcars.

It was labor intensive, to say the least...and very hot work.

Roy was always kind to us: born here in Warren in 1911, he was just at the right (or wrong) age to hit the Great Depression when he was 18.

He told us once he wanted to be a physician...a goal made impossible by the economic realities of the time.

So, like many, he went to work at the sawmill, rising into supervisory ranks, marrying the lovely Ruth Gresham of Thornton in Calhoun County, who worked at First State Bank many years.

Toward the end, and in retirement, Roy lost both his legs.

But he had his little pickup truck rigged up so he could drive anyway: Roy and Ruth were familiar sights to friends on Warren streets.

Roy's mother was Mrs. Mary Creed, who had been a Wood, and who resided across Central from the Carl Hollis'.

Warren High School one of schools named outstanding by EAST program

Special to The Eagle

Five EAST programs from Arkansas and one from Oklahoma have been named as this year's Founder's and Cornerstone Award winners, EAST President and CEO Matt Dozier announced today. The schools will be honored during the EAST Initiative's annual conference in Hot Springs.

This year also marks a new milestone for the EAST community – the first time a school from Oklahoma has been named to this distinguished group. The six programs to be recognized are:

- Northeast Tech – Claremore, Oklahoma
- Sonora Middle School (Springdale, Ark.)
- Warren High School (Warren, Ark.)
- Douglas MacArthur Junior High School (Jonesboro, Ark.)
- Westwood Elementary School (Springdale, Ark.)

International Studies Magnet School (Jonesboro, Ark.)

EAST Conference 2023 will be held March 14-16 at the Hot Springs Convention Center. Additional detail on these projects can be found below.

"These awards recognize programs and students who become engrained in their communities through service and by working with community organizations to help solve complex problems," Dozier said. "They exemplify the core principles of EAST."

Built on the cornerstones of project sophistication and innovation, student growth and engagement, and community and collaboration, EAST provides students in 257 programs across Arkansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and Pennsylvania the opportunities to think critically and innovate change in their communities.

"EAST creates the foundation for these students' passion inside the classroom while pushing them outside of their comfort zones through their innovative, community-based projects," Dozier said, noting the projects submitted for judging by these schools were as diverse as the schools themselves.

Forty-two schools submitted content for judging, which is a record-high number, Alicia Humbar, EAST's Senior Director of Program Services, said. 249 programs will fully participate in Conference this year.

On February 13-14, EAST hosted 59 students for a Leadership Retreat at the 4-H Center in Little Rock with the goal of training these students – who ranged from middle school to seniors in high school – to take on key roles at the organization's annual conference. Humbar noted that EAST expects more than 2,500 students alone to be on hand for three-day event, so having the extra hands from these student leaders is crucial to the event's success.

"Working with our Leadership Team is such a blast. Their potential is limitless," Humbar said. "With grit and tenacity, they take on challenges and find the possibility in the seemingly impossible. I appreciate how they push each other and the staff to make Conference better each year. It's cool seeing student growth and collaboration happen in action."

Raven Harris, a student at Warren High School was named as one of the chosen student leadership team members for the annual conference.

Arkansas History Minute

by
Dr. Kenneth Bridges

World War II was a time in which America had not a man to spare. It was a war that required all of the nation's resources, manpower, innovation, and courage. Aviation played a vital role. One Arkansan served as one of the first African-American flight instructors in history. Through his efforts, Milton Crenshaw, as part of the famed Tuskegee Airmen, helped train hundreds of pilots who helped turn the tide toward victory for the United States.

Milton Pitts Crenshaw was born in Little Rock in 1919, less than two months after the end of World War I. His father, Rev. Joseph Crenshaw, was a respected minister, tailor, and long-time civil rights leader in the city. The younger Crenshaw attended local schools, graduating from the segregated Dunbar High School in 1936. He received a teaching certificate in automotive mechanics from Dunbar Junior College before heading to Alabama to further his education.

By the late 1930s, war was growing ominously close to the United States. The importance of air power became clear to military strategists long before the war began. The ability of aircraft to deliver more precise reconnaissance, to transport troops to and from battlefields, and the ability to attack targets over a great range gave militaries with strong aerial components a distinct advantage.

African-Americans were not allowed to serve as pilots during World War I, but recognizing the shortage of pilots the nation faced, President Franklin D. Roosevelt pushed to have African-Americans trained as pilots in 1939. As pilots were all officers, a college education was required. As a result, Tuskegee University in Tuskegee, Alabama, soon became the heart of the African-American pilot training program. First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt, after a flight with the head of the Tuskegee flight program in March 1941, made sure that the airmen had the airport facilities they needed.

Crenshaw arrived at the university and began studying mechanical engineering and soon began participating in the Civilian Pilot Training Program, an Army Air Corps program that trained civilian pilots in possible preparation for future military service. He earned his license in August 1941 and began working as a flight instructor. He was the first known African-American from Arkansas to earn a license and one of the first Tuskegee flight instructors.

After the United States entered World War II after the attack on Pearl Harbor, training at Tuskegee intensified. In 1942, he became a supervising squadron member as he showed the young pilots all the intricate details of handling an aircraft in all types of weather and all types of maneuvers. While the scholastic aspects were handled at the university, the actual flight training took place at nearby Moton Field. Ultimately, Crenshaw trained hundreds of pilots at Tuskegee. Most of the Tuskegee Airmen served in Europe in the latter years of World War II, often as bomber escorts protecting American servicemen and ensuring the success of vital wartime missions. The Tuskegee Airmen, thanks to the training they received from Crenshaw and the other instructors, became some of the most decorated pilots of the war.

Inspired by his wartime experiences, Crenshaw wanted to extend the growing opportunities in aviation to a new generation of African-American pilots. He returned to Arkansas in 1947 and approached Dr. M. L. Harris, then president of Philander Smith College in Little Rock, about the possibility of developing an aviation program for the college. The college established a popular aviation program at nearby Adams Field (which is now the Bill and Hillary Clinton National Airport). He served as a flight instructor for the college until 1953.

In 1953, Crenshaw resumed his work training army pilots. He served briefly as an instructor at Fort Sill in Oklahoma before heading to Fort Rucker, Alabama, the next year. While at Fort Rucker, he became the first African-American instructor on the base. In 1966, he went to Fort Stewart, Georgia, where he continued to train pilots until 1972 when he began working at the base's Equal Employment Opportunity Office through the Department of Defense. He retired in 1983.

In his later years, Crenshaw continued to be an advocate for the men he served with at Tuskegee. He pushed to include individuals who served in all capacities, such as cook, groundskeepers, flight instructors, and medical personnel, for veterans benefits programs. He was inducted into the Arkansas Aviation Hall of Fame in 1998. In 2007, Crenshaw along with the 16,000 participants at Tuskegee were collectively awarded the Congressional Gold Medal for their service during war and contributions to aviation.

In 2012, the film Red Tails premiered, dramatizing the experiences of some of the Tuskegee Airmen. Crenshaw appeared in Little Rock to introduce the film and discuss his experiences with an appreciative audience. He spent most of his last years in Atlanta. Crenshaw died in November 2015 at age 96.

Senate Week in Review
from
Ben Gilmore
Senator

The Senate has approved legislation that makes the single largest investment in public education in Arkansas history.

Senate Bill 294, the governor's education package, has 144 pages and 25 Senate co-sponsors.

The bill would raise the minimum salary for teachers from $36,000 to $50,000, and all teachers would receive a raise of at least $2,000.

It will add 120 literacy coaches to work across the state, and for children who struggle with learning to read it will provide grants of $500 to pay for tutors. Students will have to meet third grade reading standards to advance to the fourth grade.

The bill provides teachers with up to 12 weeks of paid maternity leave. Teachers who excel can qualify for bonuses of $10,000. It also repeals the Teacher Fair Dismissal Act and the salary schedule that mandates teacher salaries depending on their years of experience and credentials.

Teachers with degrees from certified higher education institutions will qualify for more loan forgiveness programs.

School safety measures will be expanded under SB 294, which will provide training for school resource officers, and enhance training in crisis response and mental health.

The cap on school transfers from district to district will be repealed, but if the receiving district is already filled to capacity it could deny a proposed transfer. Local school officials could contract with an open enrollment charter school to take over failing school campuses.

Beginning in 2024-2025, high schools will offer a career-readiness pathway, to prepare students with job skills. It will be an alternative to academic curricula for students who choose to pursue a college degree.

Students will have to complete 75 hours of community service in order to graduate from high school.

A provision in SB 294 creates Education Freedom Accounts, which parents can draw on to pay tuition at private and parochial schools or to pay the expenses of home schooling. The state will put into the accounts an amount equal to 90 percent of per pupil foundation funding, which is $7,413 this year.

Schools will be prohibited from indoctrinating students with theories that conflict with the principle of equality under the law. An example in SB 294 of a prohibited ideology is critical race theory (CRT).

The Senate also approved SB 81, which gives parents more options to have offensive material removed from local libraries and school libraries. After making an objection to the librarian and if necessary making an appeal to the library board, parents would be able to appeal to the county Quorum Court or City Council. Both are composed of people elected by voters.

SB 81 removes the current exemption that protects librarians from criminal prosecution. If librarians knowingly maintain material that is deemed obscene, they could be prosecuted.

The Senate also passed SB 254 to eliminate write-in candidacies in state elections. Senators approved SB 199 to allow more medical malpractice lawsuits against physicians who perform gender transformation procedures on children. It allows lawsuits up to 15 years after the minor turns 18. For most medical malpractice suits the limit is two years after the injury.

I spend a great deal of my time on the road when I'm home in Arkansas. As a firm believer that the best ideas come from the ground up, I make it a priority to stay in constant contact with community leaders across our state. These visits provide me with plenty of ideas and perspective to bring back to Washington to help us grow, keep our families safer and healthier, and address some of the biggest issues we face.

While I enjoy each unique visit, sharing lunch with kids in their school's cafeteria is high up on the list of favorites. Maybe because it takes me back to my school board roots or it might be the nostalgic feeling of a school cafeteria, but sitting down with Arkansas's future and hearing their hopes and dreams always brings a smile to my face.

School lunches are essential building blocks for achieving the goals our students are pursuing. Volumes of research show a direct correlation between healthy meals and academic performance.

Arkansas's school nutrition professionals work hard each school day to feed kids healthy, nutritious meals. Their dedication allows many struggling parents in our state to feel confident their children will at least be able to eat well during the school day.

Officials at the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) are eyeing changes that will make school nutrition professionals' jobs more difficult starting in the 2024-25 school year. The department has proposed stricter nutritional standards for school breakfast and lunch programs—an added sugars limit, incremental sodium reductions, restrictions to the type of milk which may be offered and a whole grain-rich requirement.

It may seem well-meaning, but the changes pose significant challenges for school staff working to feed students, who will likely also end up suffering as a result.

This is a perfect example of an idea that looks good on paper but is unworkable when put into practice.

Many students will not consume meals offered under these revised standards. The Institute of Medicine report, on which previous iterations were based, noted that if children did not change the foods they consume at home, they are unlikely to adapt to food with significantly restricted sodium at school.

Is it rational to expect to change a child's eating habits over a 20-minute lunch period, when foods outside of school do not meet the same requirements?

Not only will these regulations likely lead to an increase in food waste, but they will also drive up the costs for schools and families. Food inflation remains at its highest rate in four decades and schools routinely struggle to procure foods that meet these proposed benchmarks.

Evidence suggests that a dramatic change of this nature is simply unnecessary. Parents, nutritionists and policymakers on both sides of the aisle all agree school meals have become more nutritious in recent years. Sometimes we forget how far school meals have come—more fruits and vegetables are being served, along with more whole grains, and there have already been drastic reductions in sodium.

Our school nutrition professionals care deeply about the children they serve. I trust them to know their students and what will work in their schools to ensure the food they're serving will be eaten, not thrown away.

When they tell me these standards are a problem, I listen. The Biden administration and the president's appointees at USDA should as well.

Prepare for spring thunderstorms

Special to The Eagle

Spring symbolizes a new beginning, but when it comes to seasonal changes, the uncertainty of weather remains. No one knows that better than Entergy Arkansas and other emergency responders.

The National Weather Service (NWS), in cooperation with the Arkansas Department of Emergency Management (ADEM), has proclaimed the week of Feb. 26 as Severe Weather Preparedness Week in Arkansas.

Entergy Arkansas plans and trains all year to respond and restore power when extreme, unpredictable weather causes power outages and downed power lines. The cycle of planning, preparation and training prepares the company for every weather situation.

Extreme weather events are increasing in strength and frequency across our region. Monitoring weather patterns is essential to making sure our crews are ready to respond and restore power, should our service be impacted.

Entergy Arkansas consistently works to strengthen and modernize its infrastructure throughout the year. Whether it is installing new equipment to reduce outages or replacing poles with stronger ones, these types of investments help improve grid resiliency and minimize power disruptions for customers.

As we begin to enter the new season, we’re encouraging customers to prepare now for unexpected weather.

Make a plan

Prepare for extreme weather in advance by assembling an emergency kit of basic supplies. Knowing exactly when and where severe weather will occur is unlikely, so preparing in advance is critical. Entergy Arkansas can help customers prepare with tips on developing a family plan and preparing an emergency kit of basic supplies. For more information, visit entergynewsroom.com/storm-center/plankit.

After stocking up, customers should ensure they have several ways of getting severe weather warnings. Install a smartphone app that will alert you when severe weather is in the area or sign up for emergency alerts that are available for customers. A weather radio with a loud alarm can also help when severe weather threatens overnight.

For additional information on preparing for severe weather, visit entergynewsroom.com/storm-center/preparation.

Stay informed

Knowing how to communicate with Entergy Arkansas after a storm is important. There are several ways to stay informed and report outages and downed power lines:

Download our free app for your smartphone at entergy.com/app.

Sign up for text alerts by texting REG to 36778 and have your account number and ZIP code handy. The registration pattern is as follows, including spaces: REG (account number) (ZIP code). Once registered, text OUT to 36778 to report an outage. You can also report an outage online as a guest.

Visit the Entergy Storm Center website and our View Outages

State and local laws require public notice because you need to know when actions that affect you are about to happen. We expect accountability, transparency and warnings from our state and local governments.

Many important notices are included as part of this newspaper. Printed newspaper notices are permanent, affordable, archived, independent of government and well-read.

One out of every 2 Arkansans rely on local newspapers for public notices and information regarding their local government, and 65% of Arkansas adults believe publishing public notices in Arkansas newspapers should be required.*

Public notice is for you – when you need to know. Call your legislators and ask them to vote against HB 1399.

Sarai and Hagar
 Genesis 16

Sarai and Abram had no children. How could they inhabit the Land God had given Abram and his offspring. Sarai took things into her own hand. Sarai urged Abram to sleep with her servant girl, Hagar. Sarai contended that any children from this relationship, she would claim.

Abram agreed and slept with Hagar. Hagar conceived. She became very proud and arrogant toward Sarai. Sarai blamed Abram for her trouble. With Abram's permission, Sarai beat Hagar and Hagar ran away.

An angel of the Lord spoke to Hagar and told her to return to Sarai. She obeyed and bore a son, Ishmael.
