Lumberjacks send Ricebirds flying home, 42-7

The Warren Lumberjacks sent the Stuttgart Ricebirds home in defeat with a final score of 42-7 in the season opening game Friday night.

The Ricebirds won the coin toss and elected to receive. The Ricebirds weren't able to get far being forced to punt at the 15-yard line, which went out of bounds.

Freshman quarterback Jackson Denton threw an incomplete pass from the 35-yard line to the end zone.

Denton performed a handoff to senior Treyton Jackson who made it to the 10-yard line. Denton handed off the ball to Treyton Jackson again who was tackled at the one-yard line.

At 9:22 left in the first quarter, a four-yard touchdown pass from Antonio Jordan to Neon'dre Thomas at the end zone gave the Lumberjacks the first touchdown of the night. New kicker for the Lumberjacks, Allen Juarez gave the team the extra point. The Lumberjacks were in the lead 7-0.

The Lumberjacks defense kept the Ricebirds on their toes, forcing them to punt at the 23-yard line at 4:05 in the first quarter.

At 2:12 in the first quarter, Jackson Denton threw a complete pass to Thomas from the 27-yard line to the end zone. The kick by Juarez was no good, but the Lumberjacks remained in the lead 13-0.

As the first quarter came to a close with 45 seconds left, Denton threw an impressive pass from the 44-yard line to the end zone. The Lumberjacks attempt at a two-point conversion was good.

The Lumberjacks went into the second quarter in the lead 21-0.

The Lumberjacks made another touchdown at 8:40 in the second quarter after Denton passed to Davis for a big 64-yard play to the end zone.

After Juarez's good kick, the Lumberjacks continued to lead 28-0.

The Ricebirds made their first touchdown with 4:35 left in the second quarter, with a seven-yard rushing touchdown. The score was then 28-7.

The Lumberjacks led in the third quarter.

Denton made an impressive 24-yard touchdown pass to Antonio Jordan with 10:18 left in the quarter.

Denton performed another touchdown pass to Davis with a 65-yard touchdown pass. The Lumberjacks performed a successful two-point conversion by Jordyn Ingram led to the lead with 42-7.

In the fourth and final quarter, the game officials implemented sportsmanship rule where the clock continues to run throughout the quarter.

The Lumberjacks rushed 77 yards, had 323 passing yards, and had 400 yards of total offense.

Jackson rushed 10 times for 61 yards. Denton had five touchdown passes.

The Lumberjacks play against the White Hall Bulldogs at their home turf on Friday, September 1 at 7 p.m.

Warren High School students were able to attend in the high school building. Work is still being done to the north side of the school.

Passin' the Faith Along

By REV. JIM BALES
Pastor - First Assembly of God
Sponsored by Esco Termite, Pest & Weed Control

I could spend all day giving you valid reasons why serving Jesus is worthwhile. One of those reasons is the banishment of fear and anxiety regarding death.

Night shadows were gathering as an old man sat at a cemetery gate. A little girl ten years old, entered the cemetery as if she hadn't a care in the world. It surprised the elderly gentleman and peaked his curiosity. He asked her, "Little girl, aren't you afraid to go through the cemetery in the dark?" "Oh no," she replied, "my home is just on the other side."

The man or woman with Christ as Lord and Savior believes that about death. Like David, we walk through the valley of the shadow of death, fearing no evil. The Psalmist wrote it so beautifully in the classic verse: "The days of our years are three score and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet in their strength labor and sorrow; for it is so cut off, and we fly away." (Psalms 90:10).

Hope. Optimism. Bywords of the Christian! If a man die, shall he live again? Jesus made the promise to you so clear: "I say unto you, He that believeth in me hath everlasting life." (John 6:47).

Perhaps you don't care to think about it-maybe it's a frightening subject to you-but everyone reading this article has an appointment with death. The only way to circumvent that is to be taken with Jesus when he comes to get His bride. It could happen in our generation, but then again, it might not. If not, death will be the experience of every man. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgement". (Hebrews 9:27).

Now you know as well as the undertaker what happens to your body when it dies. But what about your soul? Does the soul sleep in unconscious state in the grave until the Resurrection? Or does it enter heaven or hell immediately?

Scripture answers the question so clearly. There is no pause in the awareness of life or the soul. There are no intervening decades or centuries of unconsciousness. Death becomes the entry way into eternity. Jesus turned to the thief on the cross beside Him and gave him hope: "Today shalt thou be with me in paradise". (Luke 23:43).

What about you? Does the subject of death petrify you? Do you feel the shadows closing in on you? Does it cause panic in your soul? Then let me urge you to allow Christ to be your Savior and Lord. You never have to be afraid again.

You will be able to sing with Philip Bliss who wrote the great song: "When peace, like a river, attendeth my way, when sorrows like sea billows roll; whatever my lot, though has taught me to say, it is well, it is well with my soul."

Oldtimer's Notebook

By Robert L. Newton

The publishers of The Eagle Democrat have chosen to publish articles from the past Oldtimer's Notebook in memory of Robert L. Newton. This article was first published August 1, 2001.

We were lounging around in front of Warren Floral on Myrtle Street waiting for the tomato festival parade to come by: a fellow came walking along who was the spitting image of Charles Ross Adams of the WHS Class of '46. He had on dark glasses and we started to speak but didn't. we figured that could not be Adams, since he resides in Los Angeles. Well, out comes THE EAGLE reporting that Adams was in town for a reunion of his WHS Class of '46. Moral: when in doubt about who somebody is, just speak anyway. Worst thing they can do is give you a good cussin'.

But Ross Adams wouldn't have done that...

The Hendrix Reunion festivities gave us a chance to re-connect with old friends including a fellow from Hope named Martin Crow.

Son of a State Senator, Martin was a good guy who went to Hendrix briefly, then transferred to Henderson.

Now he's a retired plastic surgeon in the Kansas City area: he found a plastic surgery practice there that now has five specialists whackin up on people in spite of the fact that old Martin's retired.

He remains a clinical professor at the University of Missouri.

This is the Kansas City branch, not the main one in Columbia.

People like Jane Atkins and the late Evelyn Wilkinson of Warren went to Christian College for women at Columbia (as did Sue S.

Martin, Warren, and Mary Hurley Gray Lee, Estherville, Iowa).

Almost went to school at Columbia myself, having been accepted into the graduate program in journalism in 1954. But things changed; I didn't go. Had I done so, I might have been residing in some center of refinement like Snit City, Kansas or Deadmule Vista, South Dakota.

Things have a way of workin' out.

This was at the University of Missouri, of course, alma mater of the aforementioned Ross Adams, surely Paul G. Gray. Mary Lee's first husband and Alice Gray Appleton's brother.

Little things change things for people.

You just never quite know what the little things are, to wit, like the action of District Superintendent John Butler Hays of the United Methodist Church arranging for his friends, the Bob Regniers, to be sent to the Warren church of Methodists a quarter of a century ago, and their acquaintance with a fine lady, a widow, with two teenage daughters, in Pine Bluff.

My good fortune...

Sad note: noted one of the little trees planted in the downtown improvement deal has already succumbed and Gone Home to Glory.

This is the one at what we used to call the "M&P Bank Corner".

Surely there'll be restitution.

We hear the son of Dr. Jim Davis Russell, Blytheville physician (and greatest Lumberjack linebacker, ever) is about to join the venerable Pine Bluff law firm headed by Louis Ramsay.

Back then, the sawmills, Bradley and Southern, operated 7-6 weekdays and 7-12 on Saturdays. Most of the workmen rushed home and then "came downtown" where uncounted legions of people would flood the sidewalks from noonish until well after sundown.

Most of the stores stayed open until nine: Mr. Kenneth B. (Shorty) Montgomery's barber shop often stayed open until midnight to engage in tonsorial processes on the gentlemen who came in.

Lots of folks would come downtown and get favored parkin' places so they could watch the crowds: a favorite place for the late Pearl and Milburn Mobley was diagonally across from Warren Bank and Trust's current quarters at Cypress and Main.

It was in the shade and gave easy viewing in several directions.

Milburn Mobley was one of Southeast Arkansas' finest house-builders and remodelers.

He gave us a turn-key job on our place on East Shields almost a third of a century ago for $20,000.

He was building a house for Nathan and Mary Barrett at the same time.

The son's name is Jarrod.

Attorney Ramsay married Miss Joy Bond, Warren, only daughter of Dr. Joe Bond and his wife, Jimmie Waller Bond.

Was Louis Ramsay, who later played for the Razorbacks, ere being an officer in World War II, on the field for the Fordyce Redbugs when R.C. (Popeye) Wisener hauled back the kickoff in 1935 or so, leading the locals to their first win over the Redbugs in nine tries?

"Popeye" was the uncle of Bill Wisener, Warren banker.

If Attorney Ramsay isn't the classiest guy in Pine Bluff, I'd like to meet his superior.

"He always knows you" observed one of the coffee club crowd the other morning.

Some of those Pine Bluff types give one the impression they sense a bad smell and that it might be (probably be) you.

Attorney Ramsay's law partner, the late Jeff Starling, served on a State Board with us long ago. The one-time Vanderbilt halfback and Marine officer was some kind of fine guy, rather like Louis Ramsay.

We were talking about the Old Days in Warren recently.

He lost his health while serving as chief offshore geologist for Texaco, New Orleans.

James was the brother of the late Katherine Russell, who worked many years at Martins'.

Quick test for oldtimers (people over 70):

Remember where you were when you heard:

1. The Japanese had attacked Pearl Harbor.
2. President Roosevelt had succumbed.
3. John Kennedy had been shot.
4. The lads landed on the moon.

For me:
1. With my father in 1941 looking for a musical group to appear at the annual dinner of the YMCA.

2. Our neighbor, Mabel

Meek Derby called and told my mother the awful news about the President.

3. I was stitching football programs for the Warren and Lake Village game in the back shop of EAGLE PUBLISHING.

4. I was in a wading pool with a girl, under age 2, now the mother of three and involved in work for a masters degree.

See, time DOES go by when you're having fun, tho' in these occasions, save for the last, there was little mirth, here and elsewhere.

Arkansas History Minute

by
Dr. Kenneth Bridges

American court rooms have been the stage for many dramatic moments in the nation's history. Some court cases have changed the country, changing the definition of legal rights for millions. One such case in Oklahoma would end segregation in law schools and mark the beginning of the end of the Jim Crow system. The woman behind the case, Ada Sipuel, had a number of connections to Arkansas.

Ada Sipuel was born in Chickasha, Oklahoma, in 1924. Her father, Rev. Travis Sipuel, had also lived in Arkansas for a short time. Her parents had lived in Dermott for three years starting in 1918 while her father tried to plant a Church of God in Christ congregation. They moved to Chickasha in 1921, before her older brother, Limuel, was born.

She was a gifted student who dreamed of being a lawyer. After graduating as valedictorian in 1941, she enrolled at what was then called Arkansas Agricultural, Mechanical, and Normal College in Pine Bluff, which later became the University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff. She spent a year in Arkansas. In the midst of World War II, she decided to return to Oklahoma. She enrolled at Langston University in Lawton as an English major. Sipuel married Warren Fisher in 1944. She graduated with honors in 1945.

There had been a move among civil rights activists to bring a court case to challenge segregation laws. Limuel Sipuel had initially expressed interest but decided to attend Howard University in Washington, DC. So Ada Sipuel in 1946 decided to take up the challenge and applied for admission to the University of Oklahoma law school. The university's president himself told her how impressed he was with her qualifications and she would have been admitted, but he informed her that state law would not allow her to attend because of the color of her skin.

With the help of the civil rights organization, the NAACP, she sued the university for admission. Her lawyer, Thurgood Marshall, had taken up civil rights cases across the country to try to break school segregation and the Jim Crow system. Marshall would later be the attorney for the Little Rock Nine in 1957 and would become a Supreme Court justice in 1967. However, Oklahoma courts upheld segregation. Sipuel and Marshall took the case all the way to the U. S. Supreme Court. In 1948, all nine justices ruled in her favor in the case ruled in Sipuel v. Oklahoma Board of Regents, insisting that she had the right to an equal education.

Oklahoma tried to open a separate law school at Langston University just for Sipuel. But Sipuel argued this was not equal and therefore, unconstitutional. The law school experience, she argued, was more than just a building or a series of books. The interaction with the students, learning directly from the most respected legal minds in the state, and the reputation of the OU Law School could not be replicated or replaced. To get an equal law education in Oklahoma, it had to be OU. In another hearing, the Supreme Court ordered that the separate law school was unconstitutional and ordered her admission into the regular law school.

She began in January 1949, just after the new term started. Once on campus, she continued to face discrimination and the taunting of bigots trying to push her out of the school. She would sometimes be called names, and someone wrote "colored" on her assigned seat in her classroom. The university also forced her to eat in a segregated dining area, one chained off and under guard. She and other black students also were forced into segregated reading areas at the library. In spite of the indignities thrust at her, she remained determined to finish her education.

However, in later years, she noted that there were many students who treated her very kindly. She would study with them, and they worked to get her caught up on the materials she missed while she was in court. Some of the white students sometimes would sneak into the segregated dining area that she was forced into and joined her for friendly meals. Well-wishers across the country would send her donations to help with her tuition and fees. But her actions were already having an impact. Six African-American students applied for admission into the OU graduate school in 1948 but were denied admission. By 1950, using Sipuel's case as a precedent, the court ordered these six students be enrolled. The case, McLaurin v. Oklahoma State Regents, further ordered that any segregation of facilities, including classrooms, libraries, and dining areas was unconstitutional. Law schools in Texas and Arkansas and elsewhere would soon be desegregated because of the ruling in Sipuel's case.

Sipuel graduated from law school in August 1952. She practiced law for a few years in Chickasha and watched with pride as the Supreme Court struck down segregation as unconstitutional in the Brown v. Board of Education case in 1954, one which would affect schools not only in Oklahoma and Arkansas but across the nation. After a few years, she turned to teaching, taking a position at Langston University. She rose to become chair of the social sciences department. In 1968, she went back to graduate school and earned a masters degree in history. After 30 distinguished years of service, she retired in 1987.

In 1992, Gov. David Walters appointed her, now age 68, to the University of Oklahoma Board of Regents, where she would help oversee the policies and operations of the university. In interviews afterward, she expressed a great deal of satisfaction at now overseeing the university that tried to reject her. She would help make sure that the door she opened for herself and others would remain open.

In October 1995, she died of cancer in Oklahoma City at age 71. She was honored by the University of Oklahoma with a memorial garden on campus. In 1996, she was inducted into the Oklahoma Women's Hall of Fame.

Participation in athletics at Arkansas institutions of higher education has increased in recent years, even as total enrollment at colleges and universities has gone down.

About 3,900 students participated in athletics at ten universities and seven colleges two years ago, the most recent school year for which statistics are available. That was a gain of more than 300 students over the previous year and the highest participation ever for a single academic year.

Total enrollment last year was almost 148,000. That included graduate students, private institutions, nursing students and everyone studying law, medicine, pharmacy and other careers.

Over the previous ten-year period, total enrollment in Arkansas went down by more than 24,000 students. Enrollment figures for the fall semester of 2023 will be released soon.

The state Division of Higher Education collects mountains of data from the four-year universities and two-year colleges supported by public funds. When the Arkansas Higher Education Coordinating Board meets, its members are presented with a list of lengthy reports, tables, graphs and spreadsheets. For example, at its July meeting, the board's agenda was 143 pages.

Football was the most popular sport for student athletes, with 1,015 participating. Baseball was second, with 595 students participating. Coming in a close third was track and cross country, with 587 students participating.

The fourth most popular sport was men's basketball, with 263 student-athletes participating. Next was soccer with 244 participants, softball with 226, women's basketball with 223 and volleyball with 196.

Golf had 180 student athletes participating, swimming had 120 and tennis had 95. In miscellaneous other sports there were a combined 146 participants.

Of all the participants in college sports in Arkansas, 56.2 percent, or 2,185 students, received a partial scholarship. Only 14.3 percent, or 558 students, received a full scholarship.

The University of Arkansas at Fayetteville had the most student athletes, with 525, followed by the University of Central Arkansas at Conway with 478. The third highest number of student athletes, 438, attended Southern Arkansas University in Magnolia.

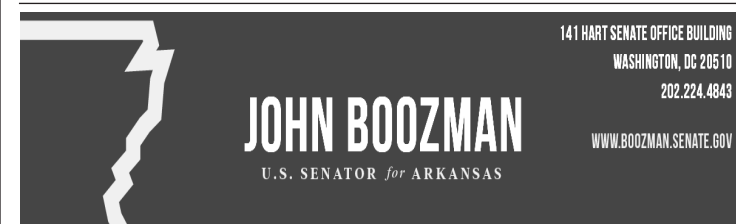

Henderson State had 412 athletes and Arkansas State at Jonesboro had 387. The University of Arkansas at Pine Bluff had 305 and Arkansas Tech at Russellville had 282.

The University of Arkansas at Little Rock had 276 and the University of Arkansas at Monticello had 266. Finally, the University of Arkansas at Fort Smith had 180 student athletes.

The combined budgets of all the state-supported colleges and universities that offer intercollegiate athletics will be $237 million this school year, according to data that each campus submitted to the Board of Higher Education Coordinating Board.

Of the total $237 million in spending on collegiate athletics, the Razorback program at Fayetteville is by far the largest, accounting for $152 million. ASU at Jonesboro is second, with an athletic program budget of $19.5 million. UCA at Conway is third, with an athletic program budget of $15.6 million.

UALR will spend about $10.4 million on athletics this school year. UAPB will spend an estimated $7.4 million on athletics and SAU in Magnolia will spend $6 million.

There are a number of days in August that are important in military history and recognize the service and sacrifice of our heroes in uniform – from remembrances of V-J Day and recognition of Purple Heart recipients, to learning about the role of Navajo Code Talkers. We are surrounded by people who gave their time, talent and even their lives to defend our nation and ensure liberty for future generations. Honoring their bravery must always be a priority.

I enjoy sharing the stories of Arkansians who have worn our nation's uniform in a feature my office calls "Salute to Veterans." Each edition features excerpts from video interviews conducted by my office for the Library of Congress' Veterans History Project (VHP), a program we've participated in for more than a decade to preserve their firsthand accounts of their time serving our country and learn from their testimonies.

This initiative has cultivated the largest oral history collection in the world, but Arkansians might be surprised to know how difficult it can be to get veterans to share those stories.

In fact, when I suggest to veterans that they share their memories and be interviewed for the project, the response is almost always the same: "I didn't do anything" or "my story isn't important."

Their humility and reluctance, though admirable, are obstacles that have to be overcome. The reality is every story of service helps portray the experience of American servicemembers. For every front-line infantryman or fighter pilot or battlefield General, there are trainers, logistics specialists, intelligence officers, cooks and quartermasters. Countless people make everything possible.

My staff recently interviewed three veterans who all said their stories weren't important enough to be included in the VHP – a WWII Navy signalman who traveled around the world on ships delivering supplies to our troops, a Korean War airman who taught math to Air Force recruits as part of their basic training, and a Vietnam War pilot instructor who gave numerous aviators their first flight hours in a T-37. These stories give a full view of what is necessary to ensure our Armed Forces are always ready to defend our nation and interests from any threat.

They also help paint a picture for future generations and their families about how experiences in the service shaped their lives or helped them discover important things about themselves.

In today's military, some of the answers to the questions of what to expect if I serve and how can my skills contribute are very different. Recently I've met ROTC cadets who want to join the Army's Cyber Division and Air Force airmen who are training to pilot unmanned aircraft on the other side of the world. Just as in generations past, the education, logistics and core talents of each individual are what make our military the best in the world.

We want the VHP to grow and include even more Arkansians in the collection. If a loved one or neighbor served in the U.S. military, help encourage them to be part of this endeavor. We would be pleased to send information on the Veterans History Project so we can continue honoring those who wore our nation's uniform and highlight their service and sacrifice on our website.

FEATURES FROM THE BIBLE
 TRUTH IN SCRIPTURE
 At Sinai: Commandments Given
 Exodus 19-20

When the Israelites arrived at Sinai, Moses went up into the mountain to meet with God and the Lord gave him the Ten Commandments, writing them on stone tablets.

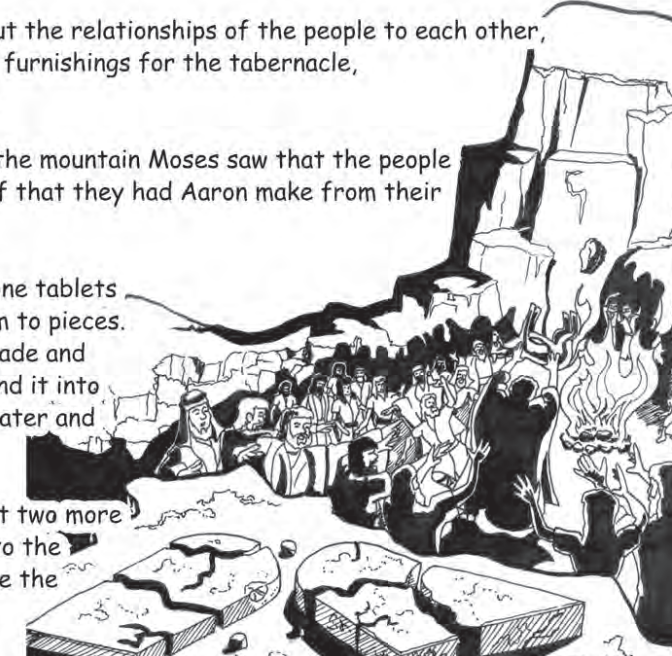

He also gave instructions about the relationships of the people to each other, festivals, the tabernacle and furnishings for the tabernacle, the Sabbath observance, etc.

As he was coming down from the mountain Moses saw that the people were worshipping a golden calf that they had Aaron make from their jewelry.

In anger Moses threw the stone tablets out of his hand, breaking them to pieces. He took the calf Aaron had made and burned it in the fire and ground it into powder, scattered it on the water and made the Israelites drink it.

The Lord had Moses chisel out two more stone tablets and take them to the mountain where he would write the commandments again.
