Warren's defense set the tone early, with Antonio Jordan leading the charge. The Lumberjacks forced a turnover on downs on Hamburg's first possession, and despite early offensive struggles, a booming 68-yard punt by Jordan pinned the Lions deep in their own territory. Hamburg's strong special teams play briefly shifted momentum with a huge return to the Warren 27-yard line, but the Lumberjack defense stood firm, forcing a punt. Warren's offense clicked on its second possession, as Aaron Davis and Tremon Miller made key runs and catches to drive the ball into the red zone. Quarterback Cam Burks connected with Josiah Steen for an 8-yard touchdown, giving Warren a 7-0 lead with 6:12 left in the first quarter. Hamburg quickly responded, with running back Nikel Lewis finding the end zone to tie the game 7-7. However, Warren wasted no time regaining control, as Burks connected with Steen for a 50-yard bomb that

HopePlace Warren raises money with Ministry and Mingle

By JOANNA POOLE reporter@theeagledemocrat.com

HopePlace Warren hosted a Ministry and Mingle event in place of their annual banquet fundraiser on Tuesday, October 8. The event was held at Immanuel Baptist Church's Family life center. The decorations were fall-themed and guests were invited to a charcuterie-style buffet of finger foods. Tables were set up where people could stand and talk while eating and guests were also encouraged to participate in a silent auction by bidding on items that had been donated by businesses and individuals. Silent auction items included things like handmade signs, gift certificates, gift baskets, candles, and much more. Senator Ben Gilmore opened the event with prayer. Following Gilmore was Arkansas State Senator Bart Hester who spoke to the crowd about the importance of HopePlace. "The most important thing we can do is to protect life," Hester said. The crowd also watched a dance performance by Sophie Joy Mendez. Mendez, who is five years old, was diagnosed with Ependynoma, a type of brain tumor, and in January of 2023 she had surgery. She spent a total of 104 days at Arkansas Children's Hospital. While recovering, she had to relearn how to walk and talk again. Wendy Curry, director at HopePlace Warren spoke and gave thanks to those who were in attendance and those that supported HopePlace Warren. HopePlace Warren has acquired an ultrasound machine and they have an ultrasound tech who visits to performs ultrasounds. Warehouse B had a coffee station set up and all proceeds were donated to HopePlace. If you would like to donate to HopePlace Warren, you can visit www.hopeplacewarren.com. There is an Events/Fundraisers tab to click on where you will be taken to a donations page. Arkansas House Report

Jeff Wardlaw
Ark. State Representative

This week, the House and Senate Education Committees approved a proposed recommendation for educational adequacy. The plan to increase state funding to $8,162 per-pupil for the 2026 school year and $8,371 per-pupil for the 2027 school year reflects a commitment to investing in the future of Arkansas students. The current funding amount is $7,771 per-pupil.

The Arkansas General Assembly has a long history of prioritizing education funding. The foundation funding model established in 2003 has been instrumental in determining the essential resources needed for an adequate education, and the recent approval of the educational adequacy report builds upon this foundation.

The funding matrix used by Arkansas calculates per-student funding based on a variety of factors, ensuring that students have access to equal opportunities in areas ranging from teacher salaries to technological resources. The approved recommendation also addresses important evolving needs for students, such as school safety and mental health support.

One key aspect of the proposal approved by the committee this week is the increase in funding for schools to hire more special education teachers and provide higher wages for classified staff. While school districts have discretion in how they use these funds, these recommendations are designed to support the overall improvement of educational outcomes for Arkansas students.

This report will now be delivered to the Governor, the House Speaker, and the Senate Pro-Tem for review. It will assist the General Assembly in not only determining educational funding but also in shaping the state budget as a whole.

We've posted a link to the report at Arkansashouse.org.

Arkansas History Minute

by Dr. Kenneth Bridges

Dr. Margaret Pittman was one of the great scientific minds of the past century. While she helped create vaccines for three diseases that once left millions dead in their wakes, the Arkansan accomplished much more.

She had risen steadily from her roots in Washington County to becoming a school teacher, principal, and eventually acclaimed research biologist. She started working at the National Institutes of Health in Washington, DC, in 1936, in what she later called "a golden opportunity." At the time, she was one of only a handful of women working as research scientists for the federal government.

In addition to her work on vaccines, one of her most important breakthroughs emerged during World War II. Wounded soldiers often showed signs of infections after blood plasma infusions, infections tied to the infusions. Pittman inspected the storage and processing procedures used and quickly devised a new strategy with other NIH scientists. Soon, they established new tests and new lab standards to ensure the safety of the plasma given to the wounded. Post-operative recovery rates improved dramatically as a result. Pittman noted in a later interview that this led directly to test samples being taken at the time of blood donation and modern tests for HIV or hepatitis contamination from donated blood.

By 1957, the NIH appointed Pittman to head the Laboratory of Bacterial Products, a position she would hold for the next 14 years. With this promotion, she became the first woman to head a national lab in the United States.

Pittman was in high demand at scientific conferences, and she traveled the world speaking about her research. In the 1960s, she was participating in studies of cholera outbreaks in Bangladesh and participating in World Health Organization projects to stem the tide of infectious diseases in the poorest parts of the world. She also researched a salmonella vaccine.

Throughout her career, Pittman made public health her primary interest. This devotion to science and public safety led to her colleagues electing her as president of the Washington Academy of Science and the Society of American Bacteriologists. In 1970, she was given the Federal Women's Award by the US Department of the Interior.

She retired in 1971 at the age of 70, respected around the world. However, still possessing an unquenchable thirst for knowledge, she went back to the lab as a guest researcher for the NIH, conducting studies and experiments without pay. She also continued to publish important articles in prestigious medical journals on different vaccines and research into different bacteria and diseases into the 1990s.

In her later years, she remembered the difficult times her family faced after the death of her father and how her mother had worked so hard to take care of them. To honor her, in 1981, Pittman established the Virginia McCormick Pittman Distinguished Professorship at Hendrix College in Conway. Today, the Pittman Professorship is considered one of the highest honors for Hendrix professors and has been held by an eclectic group of scholars including Dr. Bruce Haggard, a biologist, and Dr. Stephen Kerr, an economist.

In 1986, Pittman was given an honorary fellowship from the American Academy of Pediatrics for her work on vaccines. Though she was never a medical doctor, her breakthroughs in the lab made the practice of medicine so much easier for modern physicians. By 1993, at the age of 92, she stepped away from the lab from the last time. The next year, the NIH established the Margaret Pittman Lectureship in her honor.

She died in Cheverley, Maryland, not far from Washington, DC, in 1995, on her ninety-fourth birthday.

Senate Week in Review from Ben Gilmore Senator

Legislative budget hearings have begun at the state Capitol, in preparation for the 2025 regular session that begins in January.

Members of the Legislative Council and the Joint Budget Committee will review in detail every state agency spending request. In November the governor will submit a balanced budget proposal, which will be a starting point in writing budgets for state government. According to the Arkansas Constitution, the legislature has the final say in all fiscal decisions.

The Senate and House Education Committees completed a vital first step in the budget process. They recommended a 2.48 percent increase in all the various categories that make up foundation school funding.

Public school funding is the starting point in the legislative budgeting process because the Constitution mandates that the state provide all children with an adequate and equitable education.

The state Supreme Court has ruled that the legislature's constitutional duty is to fund an adequate education system. Legislators must first determine how much money is needed for education, rather than simply funding schools based on how much the state can afford after it has funded other programs.

Arkansas operates under a balanced budget law known as the Revenue Stabilization Act, which requires state agencies to reduce spending if tax revenue declines due to an economic downturn. The importance of school funding was reaffirmed in 2003 when the legislature passed the so-called "doomsday law" that protects school funding from budget cuts.

State government in Arkansas spends more than $39 billion a year. More than $6.3 billion comes from state revenue sources such as sales taxes, individual income taxes and corporate income taxes. The largest single expenditure of state tax dollars will go to public schools from kindergarten through twelfth grade. Last year that was $2.57 billion.

State agencies will spend more than $12 billion in federal funds. Last year most of that amount, about $7.4 billion in federal funding, went to the state Human Services Department for Medicaid and other health services. State government paid for about $1.8 billion of the DHS budget.

The state collects about $894 million in special revenues, which come from taxes levied for special purposes. The Transportation Department maintains highways and bridges and collects about $673 million in special revenue from motor fuels taxes and fees.

Colleges and universities receive about $783 million in state aid. They generate an additional $5.4 billion in cash funds, derived from tuition and fees. The University of Arkansas for Medical Sciences has the largest source of cash funds, raising about $2.5 billion a year.

The University of Arkansas at Fayetteville generates about $1.3 billion in cash funds, compared to $212 million it receives in state funding. Arkansas State University at Jonesboro generates about $224 million in cash funds and receives about $63 million in state aid.

Last year the state spent $568 million on corrections, including $25.8 million paid to counties for holding state inmates in county jails. State prisons also generated about $40 million in special revenue and cash funds from their farm and industry operations. In all, the total operating budget for corrections was $662 million. That included the costs of supervising parolees who had been released early from prison.

With the holiday season approaching, it is nice to have some good news to report for international travelers. Whether you're planning to see family overseas or take a holiday cruise, Arkansans should find many of the processes easier to navigate than in recent years.

Most notable will be the length of time waiting to receive a passport, thanks to the tremendous work by the U.S. State Department to bring processing times back to pre-pandemic levels. The Bureau of Consular Affairs says applicants should now expect four to six weeks for routine service and two to three weeks for expedited processing.

You may have heard about or even personally experienced the extensive backlog in passport applications that wreaked havoc with travel plans for many Americans in 2023. My office alone helped more than 600 Arkansans with passports that year. However, thanks to the diligent efforts of officials across the country, this critical system is back to normal. If you need to apply for the first time or are beyond your renewal date, visit Travel.State.Gov/ passport for the latest forms and fees.

Another recent improvement will be evident for Americans who need to renew a passport. The new Online Passport Renewal (OPR) system is a secure, online process that saves time and effort. This innovation helps applicants avoid having to send a paper application, photos or a check by mail. Instead, all this information and payment can be submitted online at Travel.State.Gov/renewonline. In today's world where convenience and accessibility are key elements that inform our decision-making, this option should satisfy many of those planning a visit abroad in the years ahead.

As we get closer to Thanksgiving and Christmas, my office fields increased calls from Arkansans who forgot to check the expiration date of their passport or who can't find it at the last minute. So, the most important advice from the State Department is to find and check your passport well before your trip to avoid extra fees and extra stress.

Despite the best planning, there are still situations where an in-person passport appointment is necessary for urgent travel. We do have a processing center in Arkansas that can help. However, it only handles emergency applications and does not take walk-in visitors.

Fortunately, if you need to travel within 14 days, it is now much easier to request an appointment online. Your appointment must be scheduled within 14 calendar days of your international travel date. If you have already applied and are concerned your passport will not arrive in time, call 1-877-487-2778 for help.

And if you find yourself in a difficult situation with an emergency passport request or any other problem with the federal government, please don't hesitate to reach out to my office. We are always pleased to help.

With these tools available, I hope Arkansans headed abroad will be better prepared to reach their destinations with less stress, which is worth appreciating alongside the journey itself.

You don't buy life insurance for yourself.

Your kids count on you to be there for them, day in and day out, little problems and big ones too. Wouldn't it be comforting to know a Shelter Life Policy is there for them too? Ask me how life insurance can be a valuable resource for your kids or grandkids!

Recipe: Try seafood for a super supper

Just because it is a weeknight, that doesn't mean home cooks have to compromise in regard to flavor and presentation. Scampi is a quick-cooking recipe with easy-to-find ingredients that are very flavorful. Try this recipe for "Greek-Style Scampi" from "Cooking Light Dinner's Ready!" (Oxmoor House) from the Cooking Light Kitchens. Tomatoes and feta add freshness and pair with a delicious salad.

1/8 teaspoon ground red pepper
6 tablespoons (about 1 1/2 ounces) crumbled feta cheese

Directions:

1. Cook pasta according to package directions, omitting salt and fat. Drain and keep warm.
2. Heat oil in a large nonstick skillet over medium-high heat. Add green bell pepper to pan; saute 1 minute. Add garlic, and tomatoes; cook 1 minute. Add black pepper and shrimp; cover and cook 3 minutes or until shrimp reach desired degree of doneness. Stir in red pepper; remove from heat. Place 1 cup pasta on each of 4 plates. Top each serving with 1 cup shrimp mixture and 1 1/2 tablespoons cheese.

FEATURES FROM THE BIBLE
TRUTH IN SCRIPTURE
Nathan Rebukes David
II Samuel 12

The Lord sent Nathan the prophet to David concerning his win with Bathsheba. Nathan told David a parable about two men. One man was rich and the other was poor. The rich man who had many sheep and much cattle took the only lamb of the poor man and fed a traveler with it.

David was angry against the rich man in the parable and said to Nathan that the rich man deserved to die. Nathan said to David, "You are that man! You killed Uriah."

Nathan then told David that the Lord would bring calamity upon him.

David confessed his sin and the Lord forgave him, but the child born to Bathsheba from her experience with David died.

David comforted Bathsheba and lay with her and she gave birth to a son and they named him Solomon.

Fun By The Numbers
 Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:
 Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
