Local brothers enjoy Honor Flight

BY JEFF OSBORNE SENIOR WRITER & EDITOR

Two brothers from Gatesville – Dennis and Mike Myers – who both served in the military during the Vietnam era recently were able to enjoy the experience of a lifetime – an all-expense paid trip to Washington, D.C. with tours of monuments and military sights through Honor Flight Austin.

The nonprofit group sends eligible military veterans to Washington, priority given to World War II and Korean War survivors, but is also open to Vietnam and Cold War era veterans. The trip that Dennis, a U.S. Army veteran, and Mike, a U.S. Marine veteran, took was April 22-23.

"I didn't think we'd be able to see or do that much in that amount of time, but we really saw and did a lot," Mike said. "One of the things that impressed me was all the young people who were there, and how respectful they were to all the veterans. There was also a World War II veteran who celebrated his 98th birthday on the flight, and we all sang 'Happy Birthday' to him."

Dennis said he was unsure if he wanted to participate in the event. When he was on leave from Vietnam as a soldier visiting Los Angeles, he remembers protestors yelling at him, calling him things such as "baby killer." Nearly five decades later, as part of the Honor Flight, he received a hero's reception.

"I really didn't know if I wanted to go, but Mike talked me into it," Dennis said. "I'm really glad I did. It was fantastic. I'd recommend anyone who has the opportunity to do this."

Originally from Evansville, Indiana, the Meyers brothers eventually made their way to Gatesville. Dennis moved here 35 years ago after he retired from the military. He had been stationed at Fort Hood, and his wife got a job working for one of the Gatesville prisons. Rather than having her commute, they found a place to live closer to her job. Mike visited Central Texas for about 30 years before finally relocating to Gatesville in 2014. Dennis said his wife is from the East Texas community of Palestine, and he always liked the state, so staying here was an easy decision for them. Once Mike retired from working for the fire department, he too decided the Lone Star State was the best option for him.

"I had enough of the cold," Mike said.

Keeping command of the Fort Hood skies

JEFF OSBORNE | THE GATESVILLE MESSENGER

SENIOR WRITER & EDITOR

Helping maintain order in the skies between Dallas and Austin – especially in the Central Texas region around Fort Hood is both a mission and a calling for Mark Vick and Aristotle Ponder, two air traffic controllers who work to help ensure safe flights.

Vick, who is the chief air traffic controller, and Ponder, who is a senior controller, have combined experience of more than 50 years. They recently spoke about their responsibilities at a May 4 meeting of the Gatesville Lions Club.

Vick was already an experienced air traffic controller when he came to Fort Hood in 1993. Ponder came to the U.S. Army post a few years later, in 1998.

Their purview extends to 60,000 feet, and several miles around the military installation. That also includes keeping an eye on the former President George W. Bush's ranch in Crawford, which was dubbed the Western White House when Bush served as president from 2001 to 2009.

When Bush was president, any authorized craft that wandered into the restricted airspace were quickly challenged by U.S. fighter pilots, who were able to notify air traffic controllers and others concerned with the words, "target acquired" within seconds, Vick said.

While things have changed in the little over 13 years since Bush left office, helping keep an eye on air traffic remains a vital job. Another area that is closely watched is the nuclear power plant at Glen Rose.

These days, those who have that responsibility are doing so in an upgraded facility, thanks to a $5 million grant that was received for remodeling and improvements.

Fort Hood has a joint-use regional airport. Not only the Army, but other branches of the U.S. military frequently visit Fort Hood, and military from friendly nations also come to Central Texas for training exercises.

"The Dutch can fly over here and train cheaper than they can in their own country," Vick said.

While their job can be demanding, Vick recommended young people who are coming out of high school and are unsure what

4-H students focus on pork, rabbits at Exchange Club

BY JEFF OSBORNE SENIOR WRITER AND EDITOR

Two Gatesville High School students and 4-H members gave presentations to the Gatesville Exchange Club on May 4.

Kinlee Gardner, a freshman, talked about "The Power of Pork" and Cayleigh Coursey, a sophomore, spoke about rabbit showmanship. They were introduced by Becky Coward, an Exchange Club member and the Coryell County AgriLife Extension agent who oversees 4-H programs. Both students advanced to state competition, where they will represent Coryell County. Gardner has raised show pigs and went a step further by researching interesting facts about pork.

"Pork is the second most consumed meat product in the world," she said, noting that only chicken ranks ahead of pork, while beef is third.

"There are 65,000 hog farms in the United States," Gardner said. "Most are small farms with less than 100 hogs, but others can have as many as 5,000.

The average production hog weighs 265 pounds and can generate 371 food servings, she noted, adding "that's a lot of pork."

Hog farming has changed significantly over the years,

Gardner said.

"It's a lot different than when my granddad was raising hogs," she said. Those pigs were fattened using slop, often a combination of several different leftover items, and the pigs mainly stayed outside.

Now, most production hogs are given a nutritious balanced diet and stay in climate-controlled barns, she said.

Fear of contracting trichinosis – a food-borne illness that occurs when a consumer eats infected pork has significantly diminished because of the improved hog raising techniques, she said.

"You can cook most pork like a steak," Gardner said. One exception is ground pork, which like ground beef, has to be cooked at higher temperatures to ensure food safety.

"Pork fits perfectly into USDA (United States Department of Agriculture) healthy eating plans and myplate. gov, "Gardner said.

She said there are various cuts of meat from different parts of the pig, and shoulder cuts are among the most popular.

"In 2011, the American Heart Association labeled pork tenderloin a heart healthy food, and in 2016, the American Heart Association certified pork sirloin roast as an extremely lean meat," Gardner said.

"It's an excellent source of nutrients, including potassium which helps to regulate blood pressure and phosphorus which is good for bones. Its most powerful punch is protein, which helps build blood and helps the body fight infections and reduce fatigue.

"Today's pork is really good for you. It's not only nutritious but there are a variety of ways to cook it."

Coursey has specialized in raising and showing rabbits, so that was the topic of her presentation. She said she chose the topic to gain a better understanding of rabbit showmanship.

Those who compete should be knowledgeable about their rabbits, and also know how to properly hold, handle and display the animals according to the American Rabbit Breeders Association standards, she said.

She talked about the five body types rabbits have: those with a fully arched back, which have longer legs and can stand up like a cat; semi-arched, which are bigger and shorter, so they can't stand up as high; compact, with smaller bodies that are easier to push to show their backsides; commercial, which is similar to semiarched and compact mixed together; and cylindrical, with long bodies and short legs.

"There is only one breed in the world" that is cylindrical. Coursey said - the Himalayan. Those rabbits are laid out to display for judging. To help her show differ-stomach, tail and gender. Judges pull competitors aside and ask questions about their general knowledge of rabbits and specific breeds.

"Rabbit showmanship is all about skill and knowledge,"

JEFF OSBORNE | THE GATESVILLE MESSENGER Cayleigh Coursey, a Gatesville High School sophomore, talked about rabbit showmanship.

Coursey said. "You have to work with your rabbit every day in order to compete.

"Good sportsmanship is important, and also being kind to fellow competitors,' she said, adding that those who show rabbits can also meet people and develop lasting friendships.

Asked how many rabbits she has, Coursey said "close to 30 - maybe more."

She said she also talked to the rabbits to help keep them calm.

Challenge riders visit Ft. Hood

BY BLAIR DUPRE FORT HOOD PUBLIC AFFAIRS

FORT HOOD - More than 20 cyclists participating in the Project Hero: Ride 2 Recovery Texas Challenge were greeted by Soldiers at III Corps and Fort Hood Headquarters before making their way to Waco, Texas, April 28. The 1st Cavalry Division Band played fun, upbeat music as the riders made a few laps around the flagpole circle, saying hello to the Soldiers.

The non-profit, Project Hero, was founded in 2008 to help veterans, service members and first responders, suffering with both physical and mental injuries, in the hope of bettering their quality of life.

One of the ways they carry out their mission is with the Ride 2 Recovery, and more specifically, the Texas Challenge. Their route begins in San Antonio, and over the course of a week, they bike all the way to Fort Worth.

Many cyclists participate in the event yearly, including Rosalind Roger who has taken part in the Texas Challenge four times. The Army veteran was excited for the pitstop, specifically at Fort Hood, since she was stationed here in 1985. "It's an amazing experience," she stated "For some of us, it's therapy. For some of us, it's just to get our minds in a good place and be surrounded by our comrades. It's just a blessing to be here." Roger said the Texas Challenge is therapeutic because the veterans are among their peers, sharing similar experiences and challenges. "Depending on what you're going through in life, the ups and downs, the challenges that we (face), distractions and everything, it puts you in a mindset. For me it's a very peaceful mindset," she explained.

"It amplifies the fact that you're with other Soldiers that are going through their own struggles and everything," Roger said. "We're here for one another, to empower one another, and make (each other) better every day."

Veteran Demetrio Arroyo, who was participating for a fourth time, rode along with his friend and fellow veteran, Tarrelle Steward, who was riding in the Texas Challenge for the first time.

"He helped me get through some struggles and difficulties." Steward said about Arroyo. "He said, 'Hey, this is a good way to start dealing with some issues.' So, I started training with him."

Maj. Gen. Steven Gilland, deputy commander of III Corps and Fort Hood, welcomed the bikers and commended them for taking on the Texas Challenge. He also said even though they're individual riders, it's still about togetherness. "It's not just about riding a bike. It's about being with others. It's about team effort. It's about learning about other people, and they learn about you," he said. "It's not just a bike ride. It's therapy. It's assistance. It's recovery, and that's impor

National Day of Prayer observed

The National Day of Prayer was observed on Thursday, May 5, by area churches and community members who came and prayed at or with the First Methodist Church in Gatesville.

This is an annual event which strives to raise the awareness for the need of prayer, not only on specific day or for certain events, but on a continual basis.

This year, the National Day of Prayer organization encouraged prayer for seven areas of influence: government, military, media and entertainment, business, education, church and family. One participant confessed they came to just give praise for the rain.

The National Day of Prayer is observed annually on the first Thursday of May, but those of faith encourage prayer every day.

career path to choose should consider becoming air traffic controllers.

"You can make $180,000 a year after five or six years and there's early retirement," Vick said. "You get paid while you are training on the job. Retirement age can be at 50 - or any age after 25 years of service. For that reason, you have to be 31 or younger to start training. Mandatory retirement is at age 56."

There are an average of more than 1,000 takeoffs and landings that the Fort Hood air controllers monitor daily, Vick said. Controllers work eight to 10 hour shifts, and are prohibited from working more hours than that on a daily basis.

In addition to Gray Army Airfield, with its airplane traffic, Fort Hood also has Hood Army Airfield, used by Army helicopters. There is also Killeen-Fort Hood Regional Airport, used by civilians.

Among the memorable and unusual landings at Fort Hood was the space shuttle, which was piggy-backing on another aircraft at the time, Vick said.

"I compare routes in the area to highways in the sky," Vick said

One of the interesting things that air traffic controllers encounter is that their license is only good for the facility where they work. tant."

Gilland listed statistics to show the positive impact Project Hero has on veterans.

"Project Hero (has) built more than 200 adaptive bikes for injured veterans, donating more than 2,500 bikes to veterans and logging more than 30,000 bicycling miles in 30 states and six countries," he said. "Their record of elimination and a decrease in prescription drugs is as much as 65%.'

If they want to work at another airport, "you have to go through training all over again. Of course, you know the basics, so it's not quite like going it through the first time again."

That initial training takes 156 days over a nine-month period, Vick said.

One of the things complicating security these days is the presence of a variety of drones. Except for approved military drones, other drone flights are prohibited within a certain radius of Fort Hood. In fact, there is even a chip embedded in drones that render them inoperable if they are flying too close to Fort Hood or other restricted areas.

While some people have the knowledge to bypass that security restriction, authorities are able to quickly determine that those trying to circumvent security protocol are up to no good.

"There are systems that are used to detect drones," Vick said.

Asked how many aircraft are based at Fort Hood, he said there are about 230, which is expected to increase to about 500.

"In the 1990s, there were 540 aircraft based at Fort Hood," Vick said.

There are also about 200 to 300 military UAVs (unmanned aerial vehicles) and every unit at the post will be receiving smaller UAVs to use.

"Some are the size of a bee or a bird," Vick said.

COURTESY PHOTO

The Gatesville Chamber Junior Ambassadors recently helped to host a Senior Masquerade Prom at Hillside Medical Lodge. They have been helping to host the prom event since 2015. The Junior Ambassadors decorated, furnished refreshments, provided a DJ, styled the ladies' hair, did their make-up and helped them choose jewelry to go along with their outfits. The ambassadors then voted on a king and queen of the prom and danced the night away with the residents. Pictured on the top row, left to right, is Zane Foster, Avery Streetman, Lindsey Cummings, Hailey Luensmann and Anna Mitchell. Seated, left to right, Kallyn Moreland, and Cayleigh Coursey.

MASONIC LODGE 50-YEAR AWARDS

The Maples Masonic Lodge #791 A.F. & A.M. recently joined with the Gatesville Masonic Lodge #197 A.F. & A.M. to honor seven members who had been Masons for 50 years. All combined, these seven men represent 350 years of service to the Masons. Pictured above, from left to right, William Truss (of the Maples Lodge), Larry McDonald, Carl Kietzer, John Hitt, Zonnel Haynes, Jerry Casey and Robert Arnold. The 50year Masons were joined at the ceremony by their families and friends who came to witness the achievements these men had made during their involvement with the Masons. Masons are described as a fraternal and charitable organization. Freemasonry is built upon three basic tenets or principles – Brotherly Love, Relief and Truth. Brotherly Love is the practice of the Golden Rule. Relief embodies charity for all mankind. Truth is honesty, fair play and adherence to the cardinal virtues of Temperance, Fortitude, Prudence, and Justice.

Gatesville Primary has a Field Day

BY DAVID SCOTT STAFF WRITER

Gatesville Primary School recently celebrated their Field Day on the Tommy Davidson Field at McKamie Stadium. This was the first Field Day event at the stadium since COVID and the first one that parents could attend.

There were a total of 15 stations for the students to participate at. High school students from PALS (Peer Assistance and Leadership Program) guided the students through each station. Participating in Field Day were 10 Kindergarten classes, 4 pre-K classes, and the ECSE class.

The principal at the Gatesville Primary, Mashara Streater, said "I am so happy we were able to have it at the stadium this year. There were about 83 student helpers, and they were fabulous. I heard many positive comments from teachers and parents about how well everything was laid out and how helpful all the students were. Teachers were very appreciative that there were PALS running the stations this year. I've had a couple of teachers tell me that the high school students were especially kind and helpful to some of their students who were struggling."

This group of Gatesville Primary School students is all smiles while competing in the tug o' war, the first Field Day for GPS since 2019.

Dennis served in the Army for 21 years. Mike was a corporal when he left the military, while Dennis was a sergeant.

"I was in Vietnam for four and a half years – I kept extending," Dennis said. "I was in different places around Saigon, including during the Tet Offensive. I got to Vietnam in 1965 and stayed until March 1968, then I went back in 1970 and left in 1971."

Dennis said he received a shrapnel injury in his neck during one patrol and was sent to a military hospital in Japan where he stayed about two and a half months.

"It seemed like a lot longer – it felt like forever," he said. "I didn't feel like I was ever going to leave."

He received a Purple Heart, awarded to troops injured in the line of duty.

On another occasion, while he was recovering from hepatitis and prohibited from going out in the field, his entire platoon was attacked and killed while Dennis had radio duty.

"My entire platoon was wiped out in '67," he said. "They went out on patrol, but they had me on convalescence. The unit was caught in an ambush and everybody in the platoon died. I was blessed to survive but I felt really bad about it, too. I wanted to go with my men.

"I was in several battles. Every day, you never knew what you were getting into."

Mike joined the Marines about six months before Dennis joined the Army, but never saw combat.

"I didn't want to go into the Army or the Air Force, and I didn't want to be on a ship so I didn't join the Navy," he said. "After I joined, I found out that Marines were basically the soldiers of the sea.

"I spent about two years on the USS Bennington, an aircraft carrier, as part of an anti-submarine task force. We hunted submarines, and I went to Hong Kong, the Philippines and Japan.

"We were in the South China Sea about to come back to America, and our escort was late. We started heading for Vietnam, but then met up with the rest of our battle group and turned back toward the United States. That's the closest I ever got to combat, except for being sent out from Camp Lejeune during an insurrection in the Dominican Republic. Instead of going there, we went to Cuba (to the Guantanamo Bay Naval Base)."

Mike said he was surprised that he was never stationed in Vietnam.

"I had always expected to be sent to Vietnam but I never was," he said. "I thought the war would be over pretty quick, and I didn't want to spend years shuffling from one military base to another in the United States, so I got out. I never imagined the war would last that long."

Mike said his best experience was meeting people during his service.

"I didn't want to go aboard that aircraft carrier, but once I got on it, I was able to walk around and meet sailors and learned a lot about the ship from them, and it was interesting," he said. "We went to Hawaii three times.

"I had a chance to go aboard a submarine – the Nautilus – but I wasn't interested in that at the time. Now I wish I had done that."

Dennis said despite the dangers he faced in Vietnam, he also had some good experiences there.

"I liked it most of the time – some of the things we had to go through I didn't like," he said. "I was a platoon sergeant for two years. I liked the Army most of the time and met a lot of people."

While opposition to the war grew in America, Dennis said he was told not to wear his uniform when he returned to the U.S. either during leave or at the end of his service in Vietnam.

He said the reception veterans were given during the Honor Flight has helped ease some of the bad memories he had about how fellow Americans treated him and other military personnel during and immediately after the war.

That opportunity to have a good experience was the reason Mike urged his brother to participate in the Honor Flight.

"I heard it was good for people who have PTSD, which Dennis does," Mike said.

Both raved about having the chance to visit different monuments, seeing the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and Korean War Memorial, World War II monument, the U.S. Navy and Air Force museums, the Pentagon, and Arlington National Cemetery, and getting to interact with people who thanked them for their service.

"Two friends have asked me why I didn't go on an Honor Flight, and I didn't even know what that was," Mike said. "I'm really glad we found out about it."
