School leaders dismiss scores

BY BETHANY KURTZ HOOD COUNTY NEWS

Parents should not worry about their children's education following the Texas Education Agency's (TEA) A-F Accountability in-progress report released this month, local superintendents say.

The Texas Legislature is currently developing a new rating system for public schools in Texas, according to the TEA's website, that will score each school based on student performance.

Preliminary results, released as required by the Legislature, included four of the five domains outlined in the grading calculation. The domains were student achievements and student progress measured by the STAAR test, closing performance gaps measured by STAAR test scores of economically disadvantaged students and postsecondary readiness. The results are available on the TEA website.

Granbury ISD was given a grade of 'C' in the first, second and fourth domains and 'D' in the third domain.

Granbury High School scored a 'C' in the first and fourth domains and a 'D' in the second and third. Crossland Ninth Grade Center scored a 'B' in the first and third domains and a 'C' in the third. It was not rated in the fourth domain.

Education commissioner Mike Morath issued a statement reminding Texans the rating system is a work in progress and is likely to change.

Blaze displaces 15 residents

BY ROGER ENLOW EDITOR

Monty Hoyler and his wife Teri were heading home from shopping Sunday afternoon when he noticed something not right.

"I had never seen that much smoke come out of a chimney,"

Monty said he "busted a Uturn" for the smoke at Towne Lake Apartments just east of the Pearl Street Lake Granbury bridge.

He saw more than smoke. "Flames were coming out of the chimney," he said. He called 911 while his wife ran to bang on doors and alert residents of their burning build-

"Nobody knew what was going on," he said.

Firefighters arrived to attack the blaze, which may have started in a chimney, according to some at the scene. However, City Fire Inspector Kevin Jones said he's not sure. "It's still under investigation," he said.

The blaze heavily damaged the two-story building, making all 12 units unlivable.

Fifteen residents were displaced. The fire destroyed most of their possessions in the apartments, Jones said.

All residents have been relocated to homes of friends and family, according to City of Granbury Public Information Officer Bethany Kyle.

No residents were injured, but two firefighters were taken to Lake Granbury Medical Center. One suffered a knee injury when he fell through the second floor and another had smoke inhalation, Fire Marshal Ray Wilson said. Another was slightly injured and did not go to the hospital. Seventy-five firefighters from the county's nine fire departments plus Erath and Somervell battled the eight-hour blaze, Wilson said. Two ladder trucks - one from Granbury and one from Tolar - were used to fight the fire.

The American Red Cross arrived on the scene and assisted residents with housing and financial aid. Residents should contact Mission Granbury for clothing assistance.

The fire closed nearby business highway 377 for about eight hours.

One of the apartment residents, Andrew Keeler, 27, could only stand and watch firefighters try to save what they could.

He lost valuable personal possessions, such as his young daughter's birth blankets, photographs, clothes and firearms.

"It hasn't sunk in yet, but it will," Keeler said.

The young man was at work at Wolf Hollow Generating Station when a friend called and said his apartment was on fire. He had lived there only since July, fulfilling a dream of residing close to the water. His apartment was just steps away from the lake.

Despite his loss, the Army veteran remains optimistic.

"If I can survive 13 months in Iraq, I can survive this," he said.

district or campus performance in the 2015-16 school year should be drawn from these ratings, and these ratings should not be considered predictors of future district or campus performance rating," he said.

The A-F Accountability system will not officially be used to measure schools until August of 2018, according to the TEA. Campuses are currently rated using the School Report Card system.

All Granbury, Tolar and Lipan ISD schools in Hood County "met standard," the highest rating available, under the School Report Card for 2015-16, according to the TEA's records.

Rather than worrying about the report, parents should consider what they have seen the district and students do, said Granbury ISD Superintendent James Largent.

"At parent meetings, they see the projects their kids are working on, and they see the excitement their kids have every day when they get home from school. They also witness concerts, productions, parent nights, see our successes in extracurricular activities and see our students excelling in college, technical schools and the workforce when they leave us," Largent said.

Instead of the A-F accountability scores, he would like to see the state require schools meet the basic requirements and the rest be left to the individual districts.

"What we see in these results is the state continuing to use a once-a-year bubble test to assign grades to individual campuses across our state and pit campuses against each other,' Largent said in a press release on Jan. 6. "Out of the four domains, three of them rely solely on STAAR test results.

Those tests, he said, have proven unreliable especially after online tests were deleted for no apparent reason last year.

Lipan superintendent Cindy Edwards said she did not feel the scores her district received reflected her ISD's accomplishments either.

"I think we do a much better job than is reflected," she said. Edwards said she has attended training sessions on the new rating system.

"I think they are trying to be fair, but I don't think they are quite there yet," she said.

The Tolar ISD did well compared to other schools and districts in the area, said Tolar superintendent Travis Stilwell. But he also found room for improvement in the rating system.

"Given that this system is based primarily on test scores, I do not believe it provides an accurate reflection of the education that is provided daily to our students," he said. "I want our parents to know that we care about their kids. Our teachers and administrators are committed to the children within the Tolar ISD."

The Tolar ISD constantly adjusts instruction to meet student needs and will continue to do so regardless of the accountability system the state chooses, Stilwell said.

When the official report is released for the first time in a year and a half it will score campuses based on different information than in this preliminary report. One more domain will be added and only the best

Conaway votes to repeal U.N.'s anti-Israel resolution

Congressman Mike Conaway (R-Midland) voted last week to pass House Resolution 11 - to reject the anti-Israel U.N. resolu-

Conaway criticized the Obama administration for ignoring the "special relationship" between the U.S. and Israel, calling it "reprehensible."

According to Newton, the new facility has greatly reduced the deaths and sickness of animals.

"There's been a huge increase in the health of the animals," Newton said.

The animals are now inside the climate-controlled barn, with new metal pens and four walls surrounding them, insulated with yellow foam spray insulation.

"The new facilities have helped a lot with animal production. It's so much more efficient than it was last year," Lane said.

This year, Lane and Newton said they haven't had any sick animals, which they credit to the cleaner and warmer facilities.

The students are now more equipped to prepare for the stock show this week.

and a sheep.

She said she's learned not to name her animals so she doesn't get too attached before sending them to the butcher.

However, her mom named her hog Boss. The sheep is simply called "big sheep."

Lane, who plans to be a largeanimal veterinarian, is anxious as she prepares her animals for the show.

"I'm a little stressed out," she said. "But I'm really excited."

All about competition, Lane said this year she's hoping to win big. She said she's "going for the grand."

When Paula McDonald discussed with her husband Mark what their retirement would look like, she ended up with a new business (so much for taking it easy) and a decision to go back to her roots.

The McDonalds lived in Houston when that conversation took place. Now they're in Granbury, where Paula graduated in 1978.

"I had only been back for class reunions," she said of the four decades that have passed since then. "My parents moved away when I was a freshman at North Texas."

The idea for a wedding venue came when the couple's daughter planned her own nuptials.

Paula's varied professional history made operating a wedding venue seem like, well, a piece of cake.

She has been a high school biology teacher, has owned a cheerleading and gymnastics facility in The Woodlands, has been a real estate broker for 12 years and even has worn the hat of inspirational speaker.

"My wife has always been a bit of an entrepreneur, and I caught the bug," said Mark, who worked in the oil and gas industry for a Fortune 500 company.

After the couple studied a map of Texas, eyeing lake towns within easy driving distances from major cities, it was Mark who suggested Granbury.

"I've always liked Granbury," he said. "This is a neat little place for people to come to for a nearby destination. "It's going to be good for hotels, restaurants and shops."

Paula needed no convincing to come back to her hometown, where she feels that care has been taken to preserve Granbury's beauty and history. "For me, having been away for 40 years, it's changed a lot on the perimeter, but the flavor of Granbury has not changed, in

PIECE OF CAKE: Paula McDonald, a 1978 graduate of Granbury High School, has worn a lot of different hats in her professional life and sees no reason why she and her husband, Mark, (left) can't operate a successful wedding venue in their "retirement." Last week, the City Council approved rezoning, a preliminary plat and a Special Use Permit (SUP) for Chateau Chevaux, which will be on 13 acres east of the City Cemetery and across from the Hood County Senior Center. Paula chose younger schoolmate Brian Gaffin (right) to be the project's architect.

my opinion," she said. Last week, the couple's wedding venue, called Chateau Chevaux, passed its first hurdles with the city.

The City Council approved the McDonalds' request for rezoning and a Special Use Permit (SUP), as well as their preliminary plat.

Paula said she doesn't think Chateau Chevaux will necessarily compete with other area venues because "every wedding venue has its own personality and its own flair."

She added: "We feel like we're going to be pulling from the Dallas-Fort Worth area a lot."

The McDonalds plan to start booking events as soon as everything has passed muster with the city.

"The minute we know everything's approved and we're good to go, we'll start booking those events before we put sticks in the ground," Paula

SCENIC SETTING

The venue will be on 13 acres on East Moore Street, east of the City Cemetery and across from the Hood County Senior Center.

There will be two buildings - a chapel and a reception hall.

The reception hall, which Paula said will be "country chic" and decorated in "brighter, neutral colors" that will blend with all color schemes, will be rented out for other events as well, such as class reunions and galas.

Paula said she envisions the future reception hall to be "a really neat, big barn" with open rafters and "beautiful chandeliers hanging down."

The architect for Chateau Chevaux is Brian Gaffin - whom Paula knew when she was friends with his sister in high school.

"Brian was in the class below me," she said.

Paula hopes to find old church pews for the chapel, which will have Granbury stone and "lots of big picture windows" that will afford views of a pasture with dozens of oak and pecan trees.

She's also planning a "beautiful courtyard setting" between the two buildings where guests can mingle.

"I see a fountain, and a fire pit somewhere," Paula said. "Lots of benches and places to sit, with native Texas grasses and plants."

INSPIRATIONAL

Twice, Paula was told by doctors to get her affairs in order due to life threatening tumors.

Those dire diagnoses were the impetus for her, not to give up on life, but to embrace it more fully.

It's when she became an author and public speaker. Paula has written "Beloved,

Not Broken," an eight-week Bible study program to give women hope and help them overcome life's challenges.

"My message to women," she said, "is that we all have a decision on how we're going to face it and how we're going to handle it."

He found that the role of Holly suited him.

"I just felt like this is what I was meant to do," Mueller said.

The show got "really good reviews," he said, but some critics felt the script was "kind of hokey.'

Mueller had an idea to take the best parts of that show and create his own version of the famous tour. The "Winter Dance Party" show kicked off in 1999 and the response, he said, was "amazing."

While the show apparently has thrilled its Granbury audiences, last weekend there was a thrill as well for those in the show.

One audience included a woman who had been at that final concert in 1959, shortly before the three performers boarded a Beechcraft Bonanza headed for Moorhead, Minnesota. The woman brought her granddaughter to see the Granbury show.

Mr. Stenholm goes to Washington

Retired congressman reflects on 26 years in House

BY CHRISTINE DORAN HOOD COUNTY NEWS

he phone rang as Charlie Stenholm sat at the judge's stand at the Texas Cowboy Reunion in Stamford.

Someone said the call was for him.

On the line was Omar Burleson, the local congressman.

On July 4, 1977, Burleson, at his farm seven miles from the rodeo, told the Stamford native he had made up his mind not to run again.

He wanted Stenholm to run for Congress.

When Stenholm got off the phone, he immediately called his wife, Cindy Stenholm.

He had three children in school.

"I found out later they didn't think I had a chance of winning. If they'd thought I had a chance of winning, maybe they'd have voted differently," he laughed.

When Stenholm graduated from high school, he never imagined that one day he would work as a congressman.

Politics were nowhere on his radar.

Set on being a farmer, he took a vocational agriculture course at Tarleton State University with no plans to earn a degree.

His professor, Joe Autry, told him he was wasting his time and his parents' money by taking only one class.

He encouraged him to stay for a four-year degree.

"Whatever he said there convinced me that I ought to change my major and go ahead and get a four-year college education, so I changed to agricultural education," Stenholm said.

He taught high school ag for three and a half years, "never dreaming of politics." Stenholm said, before he was approached

"I began to get a little interested in politics, from the standpoint of how you get things done," he said.

He then joined Stamford Electric Cooperative and continued as a lobbyist for nine years.

He was elected to the State Democratic Executive Committee in 1974.

He eventually quit the electric cooperative to farm full time.

"People began to say, 'Sometime Omar Burleson' - who had been our congressman from that area for 32 years - 'someday he is going to retire, and you ought to run for it," Stenholm explained.

He didn't take the suggestion seriously.

But, after the conversation with Burleson in July of 1977, he ran for Congress.

He ran on the ideas of balancing the budget and adding agricultural policies in the 17th district in Texas, which spanned 35 counties and 645,000 people, according to Stenholm. "They were folks I loved to represent," he said.

In 1978, he moved his family to Washington, D.C., "never dreaming it would be for 26 (years)," he said.

He was part of the coalition of Boll weevils and blue dog Democrats from the South who held conservative views.

"I ended up getting much more involved on the budget. I served on the budget committee for six years," he said.

"It's easy to know what should be done - easy to get a policy, like balancing the budget. But you've got to get 217 to agree with you and then you've got to get 60 senators, and then you've got to get a presidential signature. And that's when the hard work comes in," he said.

"No one that gets elected to Congress can fully appreciate the challenge of the job until you've been there.'

He joined Congress during the second half of the Carter Administration, but didn't get to know him well. Early in Ronald Reagan's administration, Stenholm's phone rang.

"On about the first of February, I received a call saying, 'The president would like to see you this afternoon at 2 o'clock," Stenholm recalled.

He drove to the White House, approaching it from the South Lawn.

At precisely 2 o'clock, he stood before President Reagan and Chief of Staff Jim Baker.

"I knew what they were wanting, because we were going to have to increase the debt ceiling through the one trillion dollar mark," Stenholm explained. "That was always a political is-

The president told Stenholm he needed Democrats to vote for increasing the debt ceiling.

According to Stenholm, the issue was too controversial for the Republicans to vote to pass

"I said 'Okay, Mr. President, we'll give you the necessary votes to get to 218. Cause we've got to, but only after 100 Republicans," Stenholm recalled with a smile. "If you're going to work together, you're going to have to cast some tough votes

Stenholm said it was fun watching the Republicans lobby for raising the debt ceiling. In 2004, Stenholm was redistricted into a heavily Republican area. The odds were against him in the new district. "It was like a snowball in hell - and we were said, laughing. Stenholm lost the election, but he still serves on the board of the Committee for a Responsible Federal Budget. He and Cindy live in Granbury.

"I'm semiretired now and getting more so," he said. "It was a great experience - quite an honor."

Winnie the whisperer Therapy dog offers calmness during times of stress

Winnie's eyes were getting heavy.

The Australian shepherd and sheltie mix was falling asleep at the soothing sound of a young boy reading a book in the Hood County Library.

"Winnie, wake up and pay attention!" the little boy demand-

Winnie and the boy were surrounded by several children, all of whom were at the library to read with the therapy dog.

Janice Neal brought Winnie to the library for the summer reading program.

The dog offers a listening ear for kids who are self-conscious about reading, Neal said.

According to Neal, kids are more willing to read if they have Winnie nearby, because it's a non-judgemental ear.

"The dog doesn't care if you make a mistake," she said.

Some kids may not feel comfortable reading in front of parents and teachers because they do not want to be critiqued, according to Neal.

"They learn to read and enjoy it because the dog is there," Neal said.

Kids will, according to Neal, begin dragging their parents to the library suddenly, to read with Winnie.

One little boy would attempt to read his book as fast as possible to play with Winnie, Neal

"Every day you go and there's another cute thing," she said. Hood County Library even gave away "paw-graphed" books with Winnie's paw print inside the cover this summer.

As a therapy dog, hospitals, schools and libraries are Winnie's places of employment, and she loves it.

"She's just a little ambassador," Neal said.

When around many children in a library or a hospital, it's Winnie's job to keep her cool and offer a safe environment for others.

The needs for therapy dogs are endless. Universities, hospitals, disaster areas and libraries all have used therapy dogs to bring comfort and security to children and adults.

"There are so many opportunities," Neal said.

At hospitals, kids would suggest a trade. They would offer their own dogs in exchange for Winnie, according to Neal.

Neal has also taken Winnie to memory care centers, where she provided comfort to the patients.

"It's amazing what dogs can understand and know," Neal said.

Neal and Winnie love the experience.

"It's a fabulous thing to do," Neal said. "We get a lot of fun out of it."

TAKING IT ALL IN: Diana Vasquez, husband Marco Paredes and son, Calab, had a memorable trip to New York City to ring in the New Year. They

t was a New Year's Eve like no other. Army veteran Diana Vasquez, husband Marco Paredes and their 9-vear-old son Caleb were flown to New York City under false pretense.

"We were told that I would be part of a FOX News segment to honor veterans, and that I would be talking about veterans helping other veterans," Diana

"I was happy with that," she said from De Leon last week. "Just getting a trip to Times Square in New York was great."

Briefly into the interview, the course of the evening changed. Diana's family was joined by Dan Wallruth, founder of Operation Finally Home, and John Anthony of Anthony Estate Homes. In a live TV broadcast, Diana learned her family would be getting a new, custom home in Pecan Plantation - mortgage

"My jaw just dropped. My heart was pounding. I get emotional just thinking about it," Diana said. "It's a huge blessing. This is an amazing thing they are doing for us.

A custom home builder in Texas for 30 years, Wallturth established the nonprofit Operation Finally Home in 2005. It was his vision to provide custom-built, mortgage-free homes for America's military heroes.

"I never dreamed something like this would happen," Diana said. "I am very, very grateful for this gift."

FAMILY THANKFUL FOR THIS OPPORTUNITY

In this letter, Army veteran Diana Vasquez expresses her gratitude to everyone who worked to make her new home a reality through Operation Finally Home.

First of all, I would like to praise the good Lord for this wonderful blessing he has bestowed upon my family and I. Without Him, none of this, would be possible. He has blessed us beyond measure.

Secondly, I would like to thank Patricia Prince Locke - without her working as a double agent, this would not have been possible.

Thanks to John Mac Weaver (aka Papa), whose wisdom, kindness and heart of gold, has always guided us to the right path.

A big thank you to Dan Wallrath, Operation Finally Home, who is a true hero to every extent of the word, for all he does for "us" veterans. And to John Anthony of Anthony Estates for their kindness and caring hearts that are blessing us with building our dream home!

There are countless others who work behind the scenes, that made this possible for us, for that we are forever and eternally grateful.

My heart is full! We are thankful, blessed and still in shock! Last but not least, the community at Pecan Plantation, and Granbury for welcoming us to our new community! I hope and pray to one day make an impact on this rock that we inhabit

Stay safe, stay blessed, and continue to be a blessing to others!

She was deployed in 2002 for a year in Afghanistan. One month after her return to the states, she volunteered to go with her unit to Iraq. "I wanted to stay with the same unit. We had been together for my first deployment," Diana said of her allegiance. While in Iraq, Diana began to have more health issues, including breathing difficulties and an undiagnosed illness with vomiting. About two months into her deployment, the Army sergeant was medically evacuated from Iraq. She earned the Army Achievement Medal and Good Conduct Medal and got out of the service in 2005. She's had numerous surgeries on her arm and is coping with posttraumatic stress disorder.

In spite of her difficulties, Diana works for the nonprofit Central Texas Opportunity, an agency that helps low income families and veterans with various services. Her husband has a small business to take care of elderly people and those in need.

Diana and her family were hoping to eventually buy a house, but suffered financial difficulties and moved into a travel trailer last year.

That's when she contacted Operation Finally Home.

"We couldn't afford to get water. I called to see if they could help us get water to the trailer," Diana said.

Following her query, folks with the nonprofit began to learn more about Diana and her family, and the work they do to help others.

Family friend Patti Locke turned out to be a double agent, Diana said jokingly. "She had connections with Operation Finally Home, but we didn't know it." Locke joined the family in New York when they learned of their future home on New Year's Eve. Most recently, the family has been provided an apartment in John said. Development in Pecan Plantation began in the early 1970s when lots were sold and homes started going up. Later, the Anthony family bought the remaining property from the Leonard family, John said. When Operation Finally Home contacted John and Ben about the opportunity to work on Diana's home, they were ready to get on board. "We have some members of the Anthony family that have been heavily involved with this agency over the past year and a half. Now we are on board for this project," Ben said.

Diana calls the announcement on New Year's Eve a dream come true.

"We usually stay home with family for New Year's Eve. My mom makes Mexican Bunuelos/elephant ears. We stay up til midnight, wish each other Happy New Year and have black-eyed peas. We also have 12 grapes for good luck each month," Diana said.

"Our little boy is so excited for our new home," she said. "We are just so grateful for everything that is happening," Diana said. "Who'd have thought someone who grew up

A mulching we shall go

Hood County 4-H Clubs and the Hood County road and bridge department joined forces in the freezing cold Saturday morning at the Hood County Brush Collection Facility. They were all on hand to receive Christmas trees and turn them into free mulch. Pine needles are naturally acidic as they break down, making them excellent for mulching around plants that prefer acidic soils. Pine needles also tend to stay put and not wash away during heavy rains, making them an excellent choice on slopes.

his story may seem a bit silly. Sadly, there is some truth to it. For many years, groups of people in the United States were treated differently just because of the way they looked.

Dr. Martin Luther King knew what it was like to be discriminated against. He had been called names and told he could not do all of things other people could do. It wasn't because of freckles that Dr. King had these problems. It was because his skin was black.

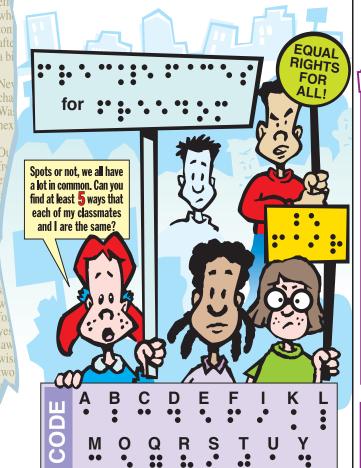

In the 1950s and 60s, many Americans, black and white, spoke out and even fought against unfair laws that discriminated against black people. Dr. King was one of the leaders of this struggle called the Civil Rights movement.

YOUNG TEXAS HEROES BOARD

George Santayana once said that "those who don't remember the past are condemned to repeat it."

The Texas Heroes Foundation's (THF) goal is to tell our state's fascinating past to current and future generations. The Young Texas Heroes teen board (YTH) helps pass down that history.

Five teenagers are currently serving on the board. Their ambitions, along with the other passionate individuals on the THF board under the leadership of Danny Shipman, include holding local celebrations to encourage the study of Tayas History.

of Texas History.
The main event in 2017 will be March 2, 3 and 4. Area students are invited to enter the THF Student History Fair and attend the THF Texas History

Jeff Mastick and Peggy Freeman serve as co-chairs of the event and meet with the teen board on a regular basis to plan the festivities and share information, personally and via social media. The YTH help plan the March celebrations and constantly learn new facts about their heritage.

Caylen Smith commented,
"Being a Young Texas Hero has opened my eyes to the community's need to learn the price Texas paid to become an independent country and then a state."

Not only have the YTH learned about Texas history, but they have also learned how to serve the community and communicate with younger children who want to learn Texas culture.

The team has set individual goals, such as learning and Freeman sees the Young Texas Heroes' history knowledge benefiting them far into their future. There are many scholarship opportunities in Granbury, and Freeman adds, "When a student's college application shows 'Young Texas Hero-Teen Board' membership, it shows leadership and service."

The THF offers a scholarship to college applicants in the North Texas area.

The scholarship is based on points derived from an entry in the history fair, helping with and attending the Stroll Through Texas History celebration, promoting Texas History, participating in service programs, and writing a brief essay.

Looking forward to his first Texas Independence Day as a YTH, Micah Young sees being a Young Hero benefiting him his whole life in a unique way. "I am learning leadership skills that will serve me well in life," he said.

Just as the YTH seek to be role models, they look up to Texas history role models themselves. Regan Mastick admires Stephen F. Austin and his hard work ethic. In 2017, students will be competing in the history fair under the theme of "Taking a Stand in Texas History." Deadlines for entries begin Feb. 15.

The YTH will be on hand March 2, 3 and 4 when the THF will host the three-day event at Acton Baptist Church. Events will include meeting characters portraying Texas heroes, Texas Rangers and gunfighters, as well as a memorial ceremony at Elizabeth Crockett's grave with members of the Crockett Family.

NEW CHILDREN'S BOOK CHRONICLES DOG'S REHABILITATION

A book release party for a new children's book highlighting animal rescue is set from noon to 3 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 14 at Second Chance Farm's General Store, 1458 E. Highway 377. "Honey's Second Chance," written by Brandy Herr of Granbury and released by Who Chains You Publishing, tells the story of a golden retriever rehabilitated by the local animal rescue facility Second Chance Farm.

Herr will be on hand to sign books, and Honey herself will make a special appearance. "By not only telling the story of an actual dog saved by animal rescue, but also telling it in the dog's point of view, I hope to bring a closer sense of compassion between children and animals," said Brandy Herr. "Children can learn about the reality of animal abuse and rescue, told in a child-appropriate manner, while putting themselves in Honey's perspective."

Half of the author's profits and royalties from the sale of Honey's Second Chance will be donated to Second Chance Farm in Granbury.

The illustrations found in "Honey's Second Chance," stylized by illustrator Tamira Ci Thayne, come largely from actual photos of dogs rescued by Second Chance Farm.

You can turn your car into a real 'smart' vehicle that most crashes are in fact due to driver error.

While you are waiting for smart cars/driverless cars to be mass produced, you may be able to create your own "smart car" in 2017.

Family County Extension Agent Kelly Pittcock, of Hood County, said the main incentive for smart cars is that they will eliminate driver error from causing a crash. Studies show that most crashes are in fact due to driver error.

Driverless, or smart cars, will not suddenly drift out of their lane, which is usually due to driver distraction.

"Multi-tasking behind the wheel is dangerous. Change your driving habits so that you will always be focusing on the road ahead and prepared for any sudden changes," Pittcock said.

That means eliminating distractions while driving, such as shutting off your cellphone and other devices that take your eyes off the road, refraining from eating, drinking, reading, grooming, smoking and any other activity that takes your mind and eyes off the road.

Smart cars will not get caught speeding - and "Drive the posted speed limit and reduce your speed when conditions are not optimal, including at night when visibility is lower," she added.

Slow down when the roadway is Studies show wet or icy, or if there is a limit on visibility due to fog.

Pittcock also noted that smart cars will not be following the car in front of them too closely, which is the cause of many rear end collisions. Most importantly, smart cars will not be traveling with unbuckled occupants.

"Making sure that all of your passengers, young and old, are properly buckled up is one of the smartest steps you can take to prevent injuries and deaths due to a traffic crash," Pittcock said.

You can check with Hood County's certified child passenger safety technician, Monica Harris, to make sure that your car seat is appropriate for the child's age, weight, and is installed correctly facing the right direction.
