POVERTY GRIPS RESIDENTS

A PAST LIFE: Brazos River Acres, a riverside community in Hood County, was once a beautiful neighborhood, with quaint mobile homes. Years of little upkeep and residents with little income have left the area destitute.

Echoes of a better time are found throughout the area, such as this threadbare swing, which was once part of an entire playground. See related stories and photos. P. 6A-7A.

Where the homeless hide

BY CHRISTINE DORAN

t 2 p.m., the homeless are out of sight.
Only the barking of unruly dogs and buzzing of cicadas disturb the numb silence.

The dense heat feels suffocating – like breathing through a hot, soggy towel.

The sun scorches those beneath it in summer.

The inhabitants have vanished. They are gone, seeking refuge from the sun's feverish reach.

Some may be inside the ramshackle mobile homes. Others retreat elsewhere.

Many of the homes offer no relief from the rising temperatures. More like ovens, the buildings often lack electricity and running water; they trap heat in and lock circulation out.

Mattresses, stained dark with dirt, are tucked beneath trees and shrubs, camouflaged with the dead, brown leaves on which they lay.

Come nightfall, their haggard occupants will rest their heads on the dirty surfaces to sleep.

This, tucked almost invisibly into Hood County, is poverty.

This is Brazos River Acres.

Public may settle debate on whether closed doors = open government

BY KATHY CRUZ HOOD COUNTY NEWS

Voters may decide whether it's okay for City Council members to keep secrets.

Some members of the Granbury City Council want to crack down on leaks pertaining to closed-session talks. They are looking to change the council's Rules of Procedure – as well as the City Charter - to allow them to punish anyone who reveals what was said behind closed doors.

Though many people believe such leaks are illegal, they are not. The right to make public statements about matters discussed in executive session is protected by an attorney general opinion issued July 11, 1989.

"You could come out of closed session and hold a press conference," attorney and City Charter expert Charles Zech told the council during a workshop Tuesday. "You can repeat, verbatim, everything that was said in the executive session."

Mobly

Zech added, however, that he does not feel that doing so is a good idea.

At times, there are valid reasons for the City Council to play its cards close to the vest. Personnel matters could result in lawsuits, loose lips could sink the city's defense against a legal challenge and the price of real estate could skyrocket if details of the city's interest are leaked.

At Tuesday's workshop, Mayor Pro Tem Mickey Parson suggested that the council adopt a policy regulating closed-door discussions and censuring anyone who violates it.

He recommended folding the policy into the council's Rules of Procedure, which will be adopted in November following the election.

Parson and council member Rose Myers – another proponent of clamping down on leaks – are seeking re-election. Both have challengers.

Parson told the Hood County News on Wednesday that the policy would be presented along with other issues to the new Charter Review Commission. The council agreed Tuesday to form the commission in preparation for putting proposed changes to the charter before voters next May.

Zech told the council that there will be "no legal consequence" for anyone who violates a no-talk rule, but added, "There are political consequences, quite possibly."

It would be up to the public as to who pays those consequences – those who talk, or those who try to shut them up.

DIVISION IN THE RANKS

For months - or longer - council members at times have made pointed comments during public meetings about details pertaining to city business being leaked to the Hood County News

Council member Tony Mobly said that he is routinely accused of being a leaker when the council goes into closed session.

"I can count on Tony Allen saying it every single meeting," he said, adding that others on the council accuse him as well.

Mobly does speak to the HCN about matters pertaining to city governance and the actions of fellow council members, though at times he has declined to answer questions pertaining to closed-door discussions.

He makes no apologies for what he feels is transparency.

"Sometimes I regret not having done it," Mobly said, citing as an example a situation that

WHAT IS IT?

ANY CLUE? A couple would like to know what this tool is used for.

Mystery tool found in basement

BY BETHANY KURTZ

A metal tool left in their new home's basement has a Hood County couple puzzled.

Bob and Carol Cook said they bought and moved into a lake house. After moving in, they found a medal tool made up of several pieces they can't figure out a use for.

"It's made of cast steel," Bob said. "There is a screw thingy as part of it. Don't know if it's right side up or not."

The object is about 4 inches wide, twice as tall with two pieces that look like they could be screwed apart. One piece is flat and allows the contraption to stand upright.

The second has two arms with a peg that passes through holes at the ends. The two main medal parts are painted red, while the pin and screw are a silver metallic color.

The piece has a few scratches and dings, but is not overly rusted. The base piece is stamped with the word Taiwan, perhaps indicating where it was

GISD enrollment nears 7,000

Granbury schools opened with 6,866 students on the first day Wednesday.

The enrollment increased by 118 on the second day.

With 6.984 students, enrollment is expected to top 7,000. "As our school year started a week and half earlier than normal, we fully expect increased numbers over the next several days," school spokesman Jeff Meador said.

Enrollment was over 7,000 last year on the fifth day of school.

"The opening two days has gone extremely smooth - almost like we picked up right where we ended back in May," Meador said.

Cause of fatal crash found

BY BETHANY KURTZ HOOD COUNTY NEWS

Investigators have determined how a deadly crash occurred that killed two drivers Monday.

Three cars were involved in the accident about 5:50 p.m. on U.S. 377 in western Hood County, said Texas Highway Patrol Staff Sergeant Dub Gil-Carylane Bowen Bogan, 59, from DeCordova was driving a Toyota RAV4 east on Highway 377, he said.

Bogan attempted to pass Tisha Grice, a 48-year-old woman from Stephenville who was driving a Ford Escape, Gillum

CARYLANE BOWEN BOGAN died on

Aug. 14. A memorial service was held on Thursday. For more, see her obituary on P. 10A.

Bogan passed Grice on the right side of a double lane before trying to move back into the left lane, he said.

"The back left bumper of the RAV4 struck the front right bumper of (the Escape). The RAV4 then lost control and traveled into the westbound lane where it struck the black Ford Focus driven by Robert Earl Buttrey Jr. of Stephenville," Gillum said.

Bogan and Buttrey, 36, were pronounced dead at the scene, he said.

"Trisha Grice was unaware of the contact made by the RAV4. Grice was traveling to her job in Granbury. She was not injured," Gillum said.

DPS continues to investigate the collision, he said.

According to her family, Bogan lived for her children and enjoyed watching them play sports. She also liked to dance.

She left behind a husband and two married children. In 2009, Buttrey pleaded guilty to two counts of murder in Somervell County and received a five-year sentence. Family members of Casey Tiner, 16, one of the people he pleaded guilty to murdering, said the accident brought them some closure.

"I'm very sorry for the pain and grief of the families of the two people killed in the accident west of Tolar," said Tiner's mother Peggy Tiner. "They deserve our support, respect and prayers for the relief of their sorrow and loss."

"Hate and desire for revenge are negative emotions that harm us," she continued. "I'm attempting to find the wisdom to find the difference between the things I can change and the things I cannot."

GISD candidate files as deadline looms

BY KATHY CRUZ HOOD COUNTY NEWS

There are now two contenders for the Place 1 seat on the Granbury School Board, and time is running out for the incumbent to file.

The deadline to file for a place on the ballot in the Nov. 7 city and school board elections is 5 p.m. Monday.

On Thursday, Kim Cruz joined Maureen Griffin in the contest for the Place 1 GISD seat held by Chris Tackett.

According to information released by the school district, Cruz works in the medical profession as a "nurse/manager." She is married and has no chil-

Griffin, who filed last week, owns a communications business. She is married and has a daughter and four stepdaugh-

As of press time Friday, no one had filed to run against incumbent Barbara Herrington who holds the Place 2 seat.

The two Granbury City Council incumbents whose terms are expiring - Mickey Parson of Place 6 and Rose Myers of Place 4 - each have opponents. Their challengers are Greg Corrigan and Trish Reiner, respectively.

City and school elections also are planned for Tolar, and city elections are planned for Cresson, deCordova and Stockton Bend.

Those elections could be cancelled if no one files to run against incumbents.

occurred earlier this summer in which Parson went to the newspaper with an accusation that Mayor Nin Hulett had violated the charter.

Mobly said he feels that the situation might have been diffused if he had informed the newspaper early on of the trouble brewing inside the council's conference room during executive ses-

(Hulett did acknowledge having wrongfully given the city secretary a raise without council approval, and apologized at a public meeting.)

Allen, who said that Mobly tends to "smart off" at him, acknowledged that he does frequently accuse him of sharing details of executive session meetings.

"And I'm not the only one who accuses him of that," Allen said, adding that the allegations are not made at every meeting.

IS THERE TRULY A PROBLEM?

According to Zech, although the Texas Open Meetings Act does not prohibit officials from speaking about what was said in closed session, "it does make certain things criminal." For instance, it is illegal, he said, to release recordings or certified agendas - basically, meeting minutes - pertaining to those discussions.

Zech said it is legal for the City Council to draft a policy setting limits on what can be said publicly about closed session talks. If someone causes legal harm or some other type of harm to the city by violating that policy, then they can be subjected to public reprimand, he said.

Nevertheless, any attempt to limit what some see as free speech could draw controversy.

"Courts don't take kindly to efforts to punish truthful speech in the public interest," Daxton "Chip" Stewart, associate dean of the Bob Schieffer College of Communications at Texas Christian University, wrote in an email to the HCN.

Stewart, who has a law degree, also noted: "The council can encourage, cajole, strongly recommend, plead with its members not to speak to the public about matters in closed session. But as a government agency, the council cannot punish speech it doesn't like, even if it would rather people not talk about those items."

Parson told the HCN that he would like the proposed policy to prohibit leaks on matters pertaining to real estate, personnel and pending or threatened lawsuits. Both Mobly and Allen agree with this.

When asked whether he thought information pertaining to those three categories had ever been leaked following a closed session meeting, Parson said: "Not really. Off the top of my head, I don't have any thoughts about that." Allen said he has become upset "whenever it would be on breaking news before I ever got home.'

When asked for details on when this has occurred, Allen was unable to recall any specific incidents, but said: "It's been a couple times, not just one time."

TRANSPARENCY DEBATE

Both Allen and Mobly said they would like for any discussions that do not fall under the categories of personnel, legal or real estate to be conducted in open session.

Taon't mina people seeing who I am in an animated discussion," Mobly said. "I don't know if that's true among some of my peers, and that's why I would welcome those discussions to be made pub-

Allen noted that most closed-door talks do fall under those categories.

Nevertheless, the city has a history of wanting to shut down communication with the community's newspaper.

Last November, at the re-

Chris Coffman placed on a council meeting agenda an item pertaining to "governance" of the media.

quest of Myers, City Manager

Since it was a discussion item, no action was taken by the council.

At Tuesday's workshop, Myers noted that the line between transparency and improper communication about closed door discussions is a "damned-if-you-do, damnedif-you-don't" situation.

"That's why you guys make the big bucks," Zech replied. Council members earn $12,000 per year for their service. The mayor receives $18,000.

"It's just specific to secrets in general," Zech continued. "Because when you go into closed session, that's what you're doing. You're keeping a secret."

Zech stated that sometimes there are good reasons for wanting city business kept under wraps and that doing so is allowed by the Legislature.

That doesn't mean it's easy, though.

"Imagine trying to keep a secret between six people," he said. "There are no secrets in this context."

City hires new 'interim' law firm

BY KATHY CRUZ

The Granbury City Council is letting go of its interim city attorney agreement to forge another interim agreement with a local law firm.

The city entered into a temporary arrangement a few weeks ago with the Taylor Olson Adkins Sralla & Elam (TOASE) law firm following the resignation of Walt Leonard, who was Granbury's city attorney for about a year and a half.

The vote switching to the Hyde Law Firm in Granbury came just hours after a City

Charter expert ad-

if a city attorney is not a member of the community," Charles Zech advised, explaining that local attorneys have a "vested interest." Zech's advice was why council member Tony Mobly voted against hiring the Hyde firm in a 4-1 vote. Mobly told the HCN on Wednesday that his no-vote was not personal against the local firm whose lead attorney, Paul Hyde, served briefly as interim city attorney before Fort Worthbased Leonard was hired.

"We had a state expert on City Charter and city process speak to us less than four hours earlier and his advice was, 'You should not hire within your own community because of conflict of interest," Mobly said.

"We live in a fishbowl here. He (Hyde) lives in the same fishbowl. In my opinion, it's just bad policy."

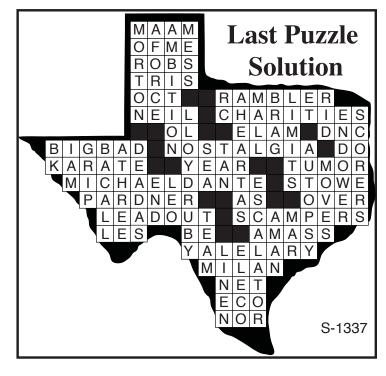

Mayor Pro Tem Mickey Parson said that Zech's statement about local attorneys was "a subjective issue, not a legal is-

"People go against lawyers' advice all the time," he said, adding that Zech's "vested interest" comment was "his opin-

Parson said he voted in agreement with Tony Allen's motion to hire the Hyde firm because the city previously had "good representation with Paul."

"He's the lead attorney, and he's got a new man who's qualified to represent and work with the city, so I thought we would just go with a local firm," he said.

Former coach found guilty of sexual act, delivering drugs to minors in Granbury

A former volleyball coach was found guilty of bringing two teenage girls to Granbury in order to give them drugs and inappropriately touch one of

On Wednesday, a Hood County jury sentenced Damian Merrick, 50, from Euless, to 20 years in prison for indecency with a child by sexual contact for rubbing the breast of a 16-year-old girl.

He also received 15 years each for two charges of delivery of a controlled substance, psilocybin mushrooms, to a minor.

The prison terms will be served concurrently.

The maximum sentence was 20 years on each of the three

Merrick had already been sentenced to 15 years in prison by a Tarrant County Jury in January for sexual abuse of a minor and providing marijuana to minors, said Hood County District Attorney Rob

Merrick

Christian. On April 24, 2015, Merrick, then 48 years old, and two teenage girls, ages 15 and 16, traveled to Granbury and checked into the Hilton Garden Inn, according to testimony

17 and 18 years old. The hotel provided a copy of the room receipt showing Merrick paid $190.97 for the room, testified Granbury Police Department Investigator Lieuten-

from the two girls who are now ant Russell Grizzard. In Granbury, Merrick purchased three tacos, measured out a dose of psilocybin mushrooms onto the tacos and the two girls and Merrick each eat one, according to the girls' testimonies

Investigators found a photo of a taco with the mushrooms on it on one of the now 17-yearold girl's phones time stamped to the date of the trip, Grizzard

The girl's cell phone also included photos of them outside the hotel, he said. The photos were time stamped to the date of the trip and showed the Granbury inn and part of a cement walkway nearby in the background.

After the drugs began to wear off, the three laid down on the bed together, the girls testified. The now 18-year-old girl testified Merrick rubbed her breast while they were on the bed.

Merrick's wife, daughter and family friends testified they had planned to make the Granbury trip with Merrick to go fishing. All four had to cancel on short notice, they testified.

Witnesses and investigators from the Grapevine Police Department testified at Merrick's trial in Hood County about his pattern of behavior.

Merrick owned and coached the Grapevine Volleyball Club, according to several witnesses. On a team trip to Colorado in February of 2015, he provided marijuana and alcohol to the teens including the now 18 -year-old on the Granbury trip, two teammates testified.

The team was disbanded after the team parents learned of the drugs, but Merrick maintained contact with her, the now 18 year-old testified.

Merrick would regularly provide the her and her friends with marijuana, even coming to their school to deliver it, the 18-year-old and several two other girls testified.

He would also pick up the now 18-year-old during school hours to take her to lunch, she testified. During some of these lunches, he would sexually touch her, she said.

The numerous teens Merrick provided drugs to is an indication of his "brazen and cavalier attitude," Christian told the Merrick will be eligible for parole after serving 10 years of his sentence delivered by Hood County, Christian said.

Inmates treated for scabies after five infected

Hood County Jail authorities are handling an outbreak of scabies among a group of inmates.

Scabies is caused by an allergic reaction to tiny mites burrowing into the skin, according to Mayo Clinic. Scabies can spread quickly through close physical contact between people.

Symptoms include severe itching and thin, irregular burrow tracks made up of tiny blisters or bumps on the skin, according to Mayo Clinic. Medication is applied to the skin to kill the mites and eggs, though itching may last several weeks.

"We found five infected in a 24-man cell yesterday (Monday) at about noon," said Sheriff Roger Deeds.

The cell is houseing 20 inmates at this time, he explained.

"The doctor is treating all 20 for this with medication," Deeds said.

Close physical contact and, less often, sharing clothing or bedding with an infected person can spread the mites, according to Mayo Clinic.

What-a-pain

Stealing popular fast-food table tents can land your buns in jail

ometimes I hear or read about something someone did and think, how could they not known that this was a bad idea?

This was my first thought the other day when I read an article about a memo sent to officers within the Houston Police Department, instructing them to quit using Whataburger table tents as evidence markers at crime scenes

Kathy Cruz

Staff Writer

LOOK AT IT

THIS WAY

You've seen those table tents. They have the trademark Whataburger orange and white stripes, and each one has a number on it to signify your order.

Just imagine receiving word that something horrible has happened to your loved one and you rush to the scene only to see a bunch of Whataburger order numbers scattered about, amid the blood and bullet cas-

I didn't need to read further to see why the use of these things at crime scenes might not be the best idea.

Nevertheless, I did keep reading and, sure enough, the article stated that people actually contacted the police department to ask whether the department was endorsing Whataburger or whether Whataburger was a "sponsor" of the Houston PD.

(Taxpayer-funded police departments do not give endorsements, nor do any public safety organizations have "sponsors." It's dumb things like this that make me weep for the future.)

PATTY WAGON

While reading that report oniine, i noticea a "tease" foi another Whataburger-related story involving a different Texas police department.

Seems that back in February, the Northeast Police Department in Denton County - a department of nine officers who serve and protect the citizens of Krugerville and Cross Roads - worked two incidents during which they happened to stumble upon stashes of pilfered Whataburger table tents.

Seems that people like to steal them, though until then the department had no idea.

This prompted the Northeast Police Department to post a cease and desist message on its Facebook page directed to "area teens," whom they believe are the main culprits.

The heists forced the Whataburger off U.S. 380 in Cross Roads in northeast Denton County to order new bundles of table tents every durn week.

I guess they were disappearing so fast, it was hard for Whataburger employees to ketch up. But lettuce get back to the story.

The police department's posting stated

that pilfering

the table tents

'might be a cool thing to do, but it's stealing."

The posting included photos of the table tents confiscated during both incidents, along with a photo of the ones that were in stock at that time at the aggrieved Whataburger. The stolen table tents outnumbered the ones the restaurant had in stock to serve customers.

The police department's posting stated that pilfering the table tents "might be a cool thing to do, but it's stealing.'

The post "blew up," Chief James Edland told me when I phoned the police department. He said it has received about 1.3 million views. It has also been shared almost 6,500 times and garnered just under 4,000 com-

After learning, thanks to the Northeast Police Department, that Whataburger table tents apparently are the "cool" thing to steal - and, hey, who doesn't want to be cool? - that made me wonder: How the heck did a bunch of table tents end up in the possession of some Houston police officers?

Being a seasoned investigative reporter, I put my skills to work tracking down an answer to that

I phoned the Houston PD meaia reiations office.

To spokesman Victor Senties' credit, the tone of frustration in his voice was barely detectable.

According to Senties, the thing about cops using Whataburger table tents at crime scenes is "an old, old story" from back in April, but for some reason the story has been making the rounds again on the internet.

He'd even been contacted by the Wall Street Journal.

No, police officers had not routinely been using Whataburger table tents to mark evidence at crime scenes, he said, and, no, police officers didn't steal them from area Whataburgers, of which Houston has many.

It was an isolated incident, Senties said, involving a driveby shooting and "a pretty decent-sized murder scene." He explained it this way:

"Patrol officers generally are not equipped with evidence markers. So, generally, what happens is, they utilize whatever they have available at that time to preserve what evidence there may be."

He added that, if it's raining, shell casings and other types of evidence can get "washed away."

"They try to establish the perimeter and maintain scenes as best they can," until the Houston Forensic Center's Crime Scene Unit can arrive and take over, he said.

At the scene of the April drive-by shooting, someone - no one knows who, Senties said

- borrowed table tents from a nearby Whataburger to mark evidence.

Sounds reasonable enough, despite the unsettling mental image.

The directive that was sent to officers was to, in the future, avoid using any items containing logos as evidence markers.

'Commanders have spoken with officers to make sure that this sort of thing does not happen again," Senties said. "It was basically a training moment."

ORGANIZED (ONION) RINGS?

Where the table tents and civilians are concerned, are we dealing with a ring of criminal activity?

Probably not. There is no reason to believe there are organized groups of criminals focused on stealing Whataburger

It's mostly individuals who think it would be fun to have a collection of them, or who want the table tent that has the number corresponding to their

Michelle Hanson, an employee of the Granbury Whataburger off Highway 377, told me when I phoned: "It's funny you asked, because we just had to order more table tents yesterday."

Although the restaurant doesn't have a serious problem with the theft of table tents, "a lot of people take them," she

So, for all of you McBurglars out there (okay, that's a different fast-food chain and a different type of crime, but I couldn't resist the pun), the cops are wise to you.

WHAT VOTER FRAUD?

Gov. Abbott continues his battle against voter fraud during the special session.

I've received dozens of emails from Gov. Abbott's campaign, and the voter fraud fight is one of the "issues" he cites for needing the additional money.

He already has more than $43,000,000 in his campaign treasure chest.

It seems that one of the issues as copied from the email reads as follows: "Instances of dead people voting and stolen mail-in ballots must be stopped."

The email could cite only one instance of mail-in voter fraud and no instances of dead people voting. Voter fraud by mail is already a federal crime with severe penalties attached if the matter gets to a federal

WHY GUNS ON CAMPUS?

I read where Weatherford College, Granbury, is allowing guns on campus. I just cannot understand this.

This is a choice, which can certainly cause so much trouble, possibly even death. I read that guns would not be allowed in certain areas of the campus.

Really!

If drugs cannot be controlled, how in the world do you think the rules for guns can be controlled? College students still have a lot to learn about living in this world, even though some think they know it all. Every few days on the news we hear about someone being shot because of road rage. Makes you afraid to even look at anyone in the lane next to you, much less wave to anyone. Strange to me that anything spiritual is not allowed in our schools, but guns are. This makes no sense to me at all. If Christian ethics could be taught, there would be a lot more love and compassion instead of hate, killing, drugs, stealing, etc.

I was told it was so they could protect themselves in case someone came in shooting. What is wrong with having security at the entrance? Wouldn't that be better than allowing guns in classrooms?

I am not against guns at all. My husband and I had license to carry and went to the firing range several times a week.

NEED GREENHOUSE GASES

There have been predictions and rumors of catastrophe for millennia. The most recent catastrophe prediction is climate change.

In the 1980s, the nation was alarmed by predictions of a cold climate future. Then came the 2000s, and we heard predictions of fatal global warming.

Today, the news is filled with national and international programs to solve the climate change-related greenhouse gas menace! The climate change industry telling us a 2 degree Celsius (3.6 degrees Fahrenheit) rise in Earth's average temperature will cause catastrophes. Salvation requires you and me to reduce our carbon footprint - our standard of living!

Let us suppose the atmosphere is completely cleansed of all the greenhouse gases driving climate change.

Are we saved?

No. Without the greenhouse gases the sun's radiation will heat the earth to an average temperature of around 457 degrees Rankine or about -2 degrees Fahren-Where did this come from?

It is a calculation based on thermodynamic principles. Minus two degree Fahrenheit is too cold to support animal or plant life. Without greenhouse gases the sun's radiation is not enough for Earth to support life as we know it. We need greenhouse gases to survive (and plants need carbon dioxide gas to thrive!) The climate change industry's survival depends upon you and I being fearful. We are told an increase in 3.6 degree Fahrenheit nominal temperature will be fatal to our civilization by the end of the 21st century! Consider Mother Nature's temperature scale starts at absolute zero Rankine. Earth's nominal temperature is around 520 degrees Rankine or 61 degrees Fahren-Is this average temperature to remain stable forever? The nature of nature is change. Greenland was green once and may be so again.

A 3.6 degree Fahrenheit increase represents a .7 percent increase in the nominal temperature based on Mother Nature's standard.

Is it reasonable for the earth's average temperature to vary more than a percent? Why or why not?

Even if we assume the prediction by the climate change industry is correct, it would be a catastrophe if the average temperature fell .7 percent because cold is hardship.

To the climate change industry: Living beings depend upon an atmosphere containing greenhouse gases. especially carbon dioxide.

A 2 degree Celsius increase in average temperature change appears to have happened before and appears normal.

VOUCHERS WILL BE BACK

That state has cut its perpupil spending by 3 to 4 percent per year for the past six years and now ranks 48th on per-pupil-spending nation-

How have they been able to reduce their costs so much? For every student that takes a voucher, the state withholds the FULL per-pupil cost from the public school but only provides the voucher-parent with SOME of that money. A simple enough

And for many reasons, not the least being that a voucher doesn't pay all the tuition, transportation, uniforms or special "enrichment" costs, vouchers generally favor the wealthier elites. Often their kids are already in the private system so the public school children actually subsidize their better-off peers. Not surprisingly, as public funds have been diverted to the Arizona private schools, tuitions have soared. For that reason you can be sure that Texas private school proponents will remain eager to see vouchers They'll be back.

Council looks to put City Charter changes on May ballot

HOOD COUNTY NEWS

Granbury residents may decide next year on proposed changes to the City Charter that will include rules regarding official misconduct and removal from office.

The move comes two months after the mayor and another City Council member were the focus of official misconduct allegations.

It was determined at that time that the charter lacks proper clarity regarding public hearings that are to be held in those situations.

It was decided at the end of an hour-and-a-half-long workshop Tuesday that expert Charles Zech will review Granbury's charter in its entirety and serve as an ad-hoc member of a Charter Review Commission.

The plan is to put proposed

changes on the May 2018 ballot. Mayor Pro Tem Mickey Parson said Wednesday that the group will likely differ from the previous Charter Review Commission, though it may contain some of that group's members. City officials sought help from Zech, an attorney with extensive experience in local government law, after issues arose earlier this summer in which Mayor Nin Hulett and council member Rose Myers were accused of overstepping their authority.

Hulett acknowledged wrongfully approving a raise for the city secretary without council approval after several council members failed to provide a written evaluation of her. He apologized for having done so.

Myers stated that she did nothing wrong in communicating multiple times with the city manager about his handling of a city employee's resignation.

The workshop with Zech was to seek clarity and a vision for how best to move forward.

LEGAL CONSEQUENCES

Zech, who works for the San Antonio-based law firm Denton Navarro Rocha Bernal and Zech, counsels city officials on many issues related to municipal governments, including open meetings and open records.

He gave a slide presentation that touched on such topics as council conduct and proce-

The workshop was held Tuesday afternoon in council chambers at City Hall.

Zech told city officials that there are "two ways to go jail" holding an unauthorized closed session, and communicating with "less than a quorum for the purposes of circumventing the law.'

He gave a true example of the latter situation.

Two commissioners in another county were indicted by the district attorney, he said, because they discussed an economic development issue with a third party and then the third party discussed it with a third commissioner.

Even the third party got indicted, he said.

Zech cautioned that the same type of legal jeopardy can be created through email exchang-

POLITICAL CONSEQUENCES

Zech noted several times during the meeting that Granbury's charter is not clear regarding public hearings related to official misconduct.

'If you want a bad outcome, make it up as you go along.'

- Attorney and City Charter expert Charles Zech

"You don't have a process in place for how this public hearing would be conducted," he said. "If you want a bad outcome, make it up as you go along."

He indicated that not having clear guidelines guarantees that the public will be angry, and there could be both legal and political consequences for council members.

Zech related a time when he conducted an investigation for a Texas city where the mayor was accused of misconduct.

"The mayor was directing staff to do things," he said. "It wasn't one time.

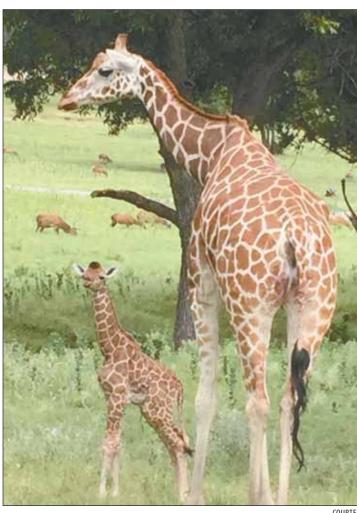

"There were plenty of emails and official letters and plenty of documentary evidence of multiple infractions associated with that."

Despite the abundance of evidence, the council's pursuit of official misconduct charges "resulted in every single council member who voted to remove that mayor being recalled," Zech said.

He added: "And they didn't have a council for five or six months. So it's a drastic step. You should have a process in place to make sure it's as fair and equitable as you can (make or the opening mile or so of Brazos River Acres (BRA), tired trailer homes with fading, worn paint stand on either side of the pothole-filled road.

Poverty replaces paradise

Cluttered yards lay before the worn buildings.

Deeper into the subdivision, the properties grow bleaker.

Two left turns and a jerky ride down a steep hill bring drivers to shadows of what may have once been a picturesque neighborhood.

Now, the collapsing remains of trailers litter the side roads. Some are missing doors, others entire walls.

Inside broken windows, cardboard boxes form makeshift barriers, concealing the buildings' interiors. Some windows are held open by blocks of wood to allow airflow into the homes.

Floors of porches have collapsed from years of use.

Broken-down cars sit idly throughout the area. Rust has overtaken them in their atro-

Some locals live in the immobile vehicles.

A random well-built, or even expensive-looking house, stands in contrast within the subdivision, but it is largely comprised of feeble, overused structures.

For the residents who are without a shelter, the sun's rays are not easily escaped in summer; and even for those with homes, their dwellings often provide no relief from the heat.

RIVER PROVIDES RELIEF

No running water, air conditioning or electricity render many of the old trailers ovenlike under the sun; for their residents, staying indoors is worse than simply standing beneath the sun, according to one former resident of BRA.

Some may jump in the river to cool off.

For many, like the former resident, the cloudy waters of the Brazos River have provided

He lived without water when the bills weren't paid a few times and also lived homeless for a year in Fort Worth, in a tent behind a RaceTrac.

"Not being able to wash your a for two or three days wasn't cool, ya know? I kinda like water," he said.

His neighbors sometimes gave him water when he needed it, he said.

"I barely go down to the river, and I've done that a couple times and jumped in and took a bath, as opposed to going over to someone's house. I just don't like to impose on any-

Without a car, many residents must walk - either to work, someone's trailer or anywhere else they can find refuge from the unbearable heat.

In winter, the weather is equally formidable.

When it hails, a neighbor might take some residents into their trailer.

If no one does, they find a tree to shield them from the barrage. There is no homeless shelter in Hood County.

Some residents who don't have running water may have to drink from the river, according to a BRA resident and a volunteer at the food bank.

"I do know that there've been several couples that camped by that river, and they had to drink something. And I'm sure (they have drunk out of it), 'cause they're survivors," the resident said.

In addition to bathing and possibly drinking from the river, many residents eat fish from it, he said.

Some residents who don't have running water, like the BRA resident in the story below, don't have a way to find clean drinking water, so they avoid it altogether. That resident resorts to a cheaper form of hydration: 2 liter bottles of soda that he can purchase for 99 cents, he said.

The suffering of BRA residents is just across the river from affluent Pecan Plantation. On the other side of Pecan sits a World Vision billboard that reads, "Just add water and change a life," featuring people overseas, presumably in Africa, carrying jugs of water down a dirt road.

The sign sits just a wealthy subdivision away from Hood County residents with no clean water, living in post disasterlike conditions.

A WALK IN THE PAST

In BRA, there are echoes of what the area once was: brick mailboxes, crumbling from age; a park with a single, threadbare swing where there was once an entire playground; and the charred remains of the park's former pavilion, which was burned down several years ago.

All were once intact when BRA was purportedly a beautiful neighborhood.

It is unclear when the subdivision was a high-status area. If it was, it was many years

The Hood County News reported on the poverty in BRA ("Poverty in Paradise") in 1986, and any changes to the subdivision have been minor; conditions were as grave then as they are today.

At that time, there was a homeowners association (HOA). It no longer exists. It is unclear when the HOA shut down. There is now no oversight of BRA.

The lots were sold at low prices, with down payments of $100, according to one resident, but they had high interest rates. The buyers couldn't keep up with the interest rates, and the homes were repossessed, he said.

Years of little to no upkeep have made parts of the subdivision abysmal.

The side roads inside BRA are not maintained - the rugged terrain is impossible to drive on in some parts.

Street signs still stand where there were once roads, but the roads have vanished beneath the growth of trees, grass and bushes. In some places, there is no indication, beyond the green street sign, that a road ever existed.

On the other hand, BRA is currently on an upswing, according to Terry McNew, the director of Brazos River Food Bank, which is located near BRA. Some residents have been fixing up the area, she said.

Parts of BRA are well manicured, and the land is beautiful and lush.

However, cleanup comes and goes, and long-term progress is uncertain, according to Mc-New and the property owner.

STONED AT THE STOP: One Brazos River Acres resident said he and his friends, as kids, smoked marijuana behind the bus stop before the school bus picked them up. Drugs, ultimately, caused him many struggles, including jail time. See story below.

He hesitated as he spoke, his face grim and his wide, dark eyes drifting as he recollected the memory.

"Horror movie-ish." Sexually exploited daily by the man she had believed was her rescuer, his mother felt that there was no way to escape.

"We had just moved all the way across the country, so we really didn't have a choice... It was horrible," he said.

The young boy grew steadily angrier. "Six months was all I could take," he said.

"I started with his head and just kept moving down his body," he said. "I put the guy in the hospital. I mean, I was a 165 pound 10-year-old who was really, really pissed off."

The man never returned after he was battered by the child. But even with his mom's abuser gone, the boy's life, like the lives of many who live in BRA, was riddled with tribulations.

When the BRA resident's mother was set free from the abusive man, she was not liberated from another captor: nar-

His mother and the man she later began dating spent most of their time drinking and smoking at the BRA park with other adults, many of whom were also parents, according to the now 34-year-old man. The kids took care of themselves.

"The drugs in (BRA) were horrible. All of us (kids) were stealing our parents' weed from (ages) 13 and up. My mom ended up giving up on trying to hide it and allowed me to smoke it with her. She said she saved more marijuana that way," he laughed bleakly.

The consequences were grave. "That was a bad idea. I'd never do that with my kids. 'Cause at 13 years old, it was okay for me to smoke weed: it was okay for me to bring my friends over to smoke weed. And it just led me into farther and deeper paths. 'Cause (I thought), 'I'm not rebelling much by smoking weed; she's letting me do that."

He isn't angry with his mother for her neglect, he said.

"My mom did the best she could. It wasn't her fault that she got tricked into coming out here. It might've been her fault that she stayed. But then look at me - I'm here too," he shrugged. Surrounded by trailers with drugs, he knew how to find whatever narcotic he wanted.

"I just chose a house," he said. "When you're out here there's houses that are selling anything you want. I only ever went to one. It was methamphetamine." He began commuting to a job once he was old enough to drive, but he couldn't afford car insurance, and tickets began to accumulate. "It started with five no insurwould drop the charges for $2,500, he explained. She wanted out.

"She looked at me and says, 'I need the money to move to Oregon.' I said, 'Okay mom, how long are you talking about?' and she said, 'I want the money by tomorrow,'" he explained. She didn't want to know how he got it, he said.

He made a call to an acquain-

"You show up at somebody's house who's broken the rules in their select group, you kick their door in, you go in, and you beat the s out of people, and you explain to them the precedent that they have broken, and you leave. The Aryan Brotherhood does this. I'm one of their favorites to go kick doors.'

The acquaintance he called was a member of the Aryan Brotherhood (AB), a white supremacist and exceptionally violent gang located throughout the United States.

Despite his occasional work for the gang, he isn't proud of his connection to them. "I don't like associating with them," the man said, looking at the floor by his feet as he spoke. But, with money tight, and no other feasible method to get his mother out of trouble, he did

The poor in Hood County fight uphill battle

BY CHRISTINE DORAN HOOD COUNTY NEWS

ne late afternoon, a man, with tattoos covering his skin, arrived at Mission Granbury for Intimidating looking, he made a caseworker nervous when he walked in the door. But when he got to her office, he sat in her chair and wept.

"He had a little girl, and they were turning his electricity off," Dusti Scovel, the executive director of Mission Granbury, said. "He couldn't bear to go home and tell her that, and try to explain - she was only like five or six - try to explain to her why they didn't have any lights.'

He had a job, but for some reason didn't have the money for utilities.

"I don't remember (why). Maybe it was raining and it was construction work, but it was something very valid," Scovel said.

The odds are stacked against low-income residents, according to local nonprofit employees and volunteers.

From issues with housing and transportation to employment and child care, it's an uphill battle for the low-income individuals living in Hood County.

REACHING RESOURCES

Access to facilities that offer aid is limited by lack of trans-

Ruth's Place, Mission Granbury and Forward Training Center are all over 10 miles from BRA - a 20-minute drive or over three-hour walk, as estimated by Google Maps.

Many BRA residents don't have cars, leaving few options for transportation.

And residents of BRA aren't the only locals struggling to reach help.

One resident of Oak Trail Shores, who doesn't own a vehicle, pays a neighbor $10 for a ride to Mission Granbury, to receive only $35 in help, she said.

Dusti Scovel, executive director of Mission Granbury, acknowledged the difficulty of receiving assistance.

"You get a ride and it costs you $10 and you get here and we get you an $11 driver's license," she said. "If they don't have $11 to get a driver's license, they don't have $10 to get here. That's part of the public transportation issue that has to be addressed though - it needs to be affordable transportation.

One woman arrived at Mission Granbury in tears because she couldn't afford a $7 prescription medication, Scovel said.

"It's difficult no matter how far away you live," Scovel said. "If you have a bad vehicle or if you just don't have any - we've had people who literally didn't, like the lady who didn't even have $7 for a medication. And I think I could find that in my car if I dug around.

"We don't think that way our impression of poverty is just not real. When you look at somebody that doesn't have $7 to get their prescription, that's poverty. But we just don't ever put it in the right perspective. We know what we see on TV.'

A walk across town in blistering heat or biting cold is unrealistic for many, and paying for a ride isn't always an option.

"That's the biggest issue, is transportation," said Mary Flores, the crime victim liaison at the Hood County Sheriff's Office. "I think we need to increase in that area."

SUSTAINING WITH LOW WAGES

The poor in Hood County struggle with employment on many levels, from making it by with very little money to getting a job.

"From the outside looking in, we appear to be an incredibly prosperous, booming community, Scovel said.

But, while many prosper in Hood County, the jobs which are available often don't pay enough. People struggle to get by, she explained.

A common misperception of low socioeconomic status individuals is that they are simply lazy, Scovel said.

"People think they're just young, able-bodied and lazy," she said. "And it's not that (lazy people) are not out there, but the majority of the people we see are not those people. The majority of the people we see that are living in poverty are struggling. And they're try-

"I think the other misconception is that the people living in poverty are not working. Because most of them are. They just can't make it.'

While many do have jobs, their hourly wages are inadequate for the cost of living and transportation.

"The definition of 'poor' in this community is really different," Scovel said. "The cost of living is higher here, and there's very little housing. So sometimes you can have a job - both of you can have a job - and you can have a place to live, but you can barely afford to get by.

The hardest thing for us (at Mission Granbury) is that we work with people, we get them right up to that threshold where they've got a job, they've got a support group at their church or they've got their kids in school, and they're just right on the edge of being sustainable, which is all they want, and

"We're trying to tell them, 'You can do this.' But in our heads we're going, 'Holy cow, I'm not sure how.""

- Mission Granbury Executive Director Dusti Scovel

we can't find housing for them. And that's frustrating."

Many clients at Mission Granbury are there to receive help because of missed days at work.

"If you have to miss work because you're sick and you don't get paid for three days, it can just completely devastate you, because the idea of saving is just ridiculous - I mean, you're barely making it. And that's true everywhere, but I think in Hood County it's just a little more pronounced because we have so little housing.

"Last week we had three different clients that had either lost a job or lost hours because they had used their sick leave, which they didn't get much of people's financial situations worse.

in - we see this so many times - we'll have a couple come in, and one of them's found work; they're really excited. They don't have any place to stay. They've been living in the park, cleaning up with river water they've been trying. One of them finds work, so we give them a motel room for a couple nights so they can get cleaned

"So they get the job. Now they have to get to work, feed themselves, and live to get one paycheck. So they're still living and they don't have a paycheck for two weeks, and sometimes that first paycheck is short, and it's never very much. So there's that real delicate time frame, and we don't' have any kind of housing here to help them move from that point. So they can see sustainability, and they think they're gonna get there, but sometimes it doesn't happen.

"We have high utility companies – utilities are high. So they get into an apartment, they get into a house, and then their paycheck - even if they're making $10 an hour, it's really hard to pay your rent, your fuel

"I don't think the rest of the community recognizes what it's like to be a single mom, you finally escaped an abusive situation, you found a job, your car gets around - not all that great; it usually doesn't have air conditioning, but it gets you to your job - but you can't go to your job," Scovel explained. "It's just for them, it's disheartening. I'm sure that they think, most of the time, 'I'm just running as fast as I can.' And it just seems like you run into brick walls everywhere you go.

"From day one we tell them, 'You can do this,' But in the back of our minds, we're, like, looking at that woman with five children, and she doesn't have a job, and one of the ones with five children had a car but it didn't run very well - a van with slick tires - and we're trying

FINDING EMPLOYMENT

In addition to the difficulties faced by employees in lowwage jobs, the challenge of finding such a job can be difficult for many, especially the homeless. The poverty is discouraging, and the motivation to fight their way out can be hard to come by for the poor; escaping poverty seems unrealistic. "If you're in that kind of a community - it's like, if I'm living here and everybody else is just like me, it's okay. 'Cause I'm surviving, and I'm surviving as well as he's surviving and she's surviving, so I'm doing all right. And sometimes it's easier to live that way than it is to even fathom making an improvement, because you can't move from that to the next level. You've gotta move from that way up here," she said, lifting her hand in the air, to express the jump in improvement the poor have to make to become sustainable. "Because there is no next level. We don't have any affordable housing. We have the subsidized housing and there are waiting lists that are really long, and it just takes awhile to get into them, and sometimes the subsidies aren't even really enough. And if you have children, it's harder because they don't have that many that are multi-bedroom. Two or three bedrooms are harder to find.'

There are homeless living throughout Hood County.

"We see a lot, over here, of people who are living in their cars or their tents or whatever. And sometimes that's just their life plan. That's how they live in the summer, and then they save up their money, and a lot of them have it figured out," Scovel said.

In summers, Mission Granbury volunteers don't see as many homeless in their facil-

"In the winter it's harder, because it's harder to stay warm than it is to stay cool. They can sleep outside (in the summer). In the wintertime, that's not so easy," Scovel said.

Some homeless are senior citizens, who can't make it by on the small monthly wages received for Social Security,

"I think people have this imagination that the homeless people are, like, 25 years old and lazy. We have seen people on Social Security; we saw two people that were in their seventies and they were living in their pickup truck.

"These people could not work, but they got social security. But not a lot - not > enough, even between the two of them, to afford a place to live and a pet deposit and all that stuff. So, it worked. They came here and got food, they got a room - every week, they stayed in a hotel for a couple of nights so they could shower. They figured it out. It's like, 'This is what we can afford and this is our life."

In some cases, there are families with children who live homeless

'The children don't have clean clothes to wear to school, and that's the biggest issue, I think, is clean clothes. We see them come in here to get clothes, not because they need clothes, but because they're out of clean clothing ... after they've washed them in the river a million times and they're worn out. I think we have homeless of all ages." Some homeless were once wealthy, when they had a turn of luck.

"Back when the oil bust happened last year, we saw people that were driving new vehicles, and they lived in a nice apartment or townhouse and now suddenly they're losing their cars, and they thought that their jobs would come back, and their jobs didn't, and unemployment was really small compared to what their checks had been," Scovel said. "They never dreamed they'd lose their jobs when they got their jobs. They didn't plan ... And they just couldn't believe it. They couldn't believe that they were here, and they couldn't believe that they really were gonna be homeless. They can't imagine it. And I can imagine nobody thinks that, but most people are only one catastrophe away from it happening ...

"Nobody's really completely immune.

Meanwhile, as the broad range of poverty in Hood County traps people in lives of suffering, the poor don't believe they will escape their circumstances. And many won't.

Just after being stabbed, he was arrested by Sheriff's deputies who were called regarding the stabbing, he said.

The morning after his arrest, he was awoken in jail by the fire marshal, who informed him that his house had been burned to the ground.

His neighbor had set fire to it, he said, but the reason for the arson is still unknown to him.

"I still haven't asked about that. I don't wanna know his answer because if I don't like it, I'm probably gonna..." he paused. "Get myself arrested."

OLD HABITS DIE HARD

After the struggling man was released from jail, he moved, for a time, to Dallas, where he was able to find employment and stability.

But it wasn't long before he was pulled back into BRA.

"It's easy to leave (BRA). It's just - this person or that person goofs up and calls me and touches that little bit of heart I have left," he said. "This last time it was my baby brother."

Local drug dealers had given his younger brother a large quantity of pain pills at once. When he was completely strung out, the dealers coaxed him into trying methamphetamine, in hopes that they could get him hooked on the pricey substance.

They caused his brother to overdose twice, landing him in the hospital.

"I came back here to put some of these people in those really big holes that the rock company's been digging up there," he said.

However, he didn't fulfill his intention to kill his brother's offenders, he said.

Volleyball roundup: Tolar on a heater, NCTA earns hardware

BY GRANT MCGALLIARD
HOOD COUNTY NEWS

The school year has only barely begun for Granbury and other Hood County schools – and has yet to start for Tolar and Lipan – but volleyball season is in full swing.

All four area schools who offer a volleyball program have taken the court so far. Here's a look at how each team has fared in their opening games.

PIRATES FACE TOUGH COMPETITION EARLY

Granbury hasn't shied away from taking on some of the best teams in the region in their first few games.

The Lady Pirates faced Mansfield Lake Ridge, who made the fourth round of the UIL playoffs last season, in their opening match and fell 3-0. Games against Canyon, Friendswood and Trinity Christian in the group stage of the Adidas John Turner Volleyball Classic all went against the Lady Pirates as well.

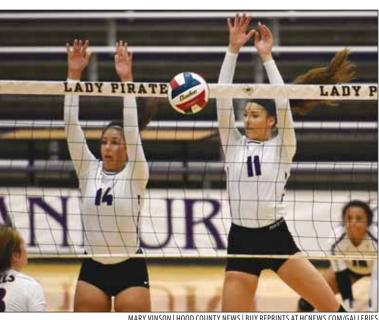

Garnbury rallied back in the next three games of the tournament, winning three straight against Pasadena Memorial, Brenham and Belliare Episcopal, dropping only one set along the way.

The Lady Pirates took both Lake Travis and West Brook into tiebreaker sets, but lost both matches to conclude their tournament weekend.

A trip to Fort Worth for a game against Arlington Marlin ended in another loss Tuesday evening.

This weekend Granbury has been competing in its home event, the Granbury Chevrolet Classic Tournament. The Lady Pirates dropped a close match against Richland in two sets in their opening match.

Sophomore Macie Blohowiak has made a name for herself this year, providing height and athleticism at the net. Payton Bell, another sophomore, and junior McKenzie Scott do a good job of hunting down hard-hit balls.

WALLED OFF: Granbury Lady Pirates Mandy Withey (11) and Macie Blohowiak (14) form an imposing wall over the net against Richland on Thursday. The Lady Pirates are hosting the Granbury Classic Chevrolet Tournament this weekend, which wraps up play on Saturday.

TOLAR ON A ROLL

Scotty Miller has the Tolar Lady Rattlers in good shape so far this season in the first year of his new term at the helm.

Tolar went 5-2 at the Clifton Tournament. The Lady Rattlers beat Valley Mills twice, along with Palmer, Hamilton and ILT Keller.

Two losses to Waco Reicher Catholic were the only blemishes on the Lady Rattlers' schedule through 10 games.

Tolar swept Hico in three sets Tuesday in a tune-up game for the Glen Rose Tournament this weekend. The Lady Rattlers had to open up against Glen Rose, which was ranked as the No. 2 team in Class 4A in the preseason.

Senior Rebecca Blessing and junior Kaitlyn Morphew have been key players for the Lady Rattlers.

CORNERSTONE OPENS WITH BIG WIN

The Cornerstone Christian Academy Lady Crusaders got their season started with a threeset sweep over Weatherford Christian on Tuesday.

Senior Stevie McCoy put up 18 kills and added an ace, while senior setter Reagan Ives had 13 assists on the night.

Saturday, August 19, 2017

Head coach Richard Lauer said the win was "all in all an excellent beginning" to the season.

The Lady Crusaders will play in the Trinity Christian Academy Summer Slam Tournament this weekend in Willow Park.

NCTA TAKES BRONZE IN TOURNEY

North Central Texas Academy didn't waste any time earning hardware, picking up a thirdplace trophy at the Grandview Zebra Fest Volleyball Tournament.

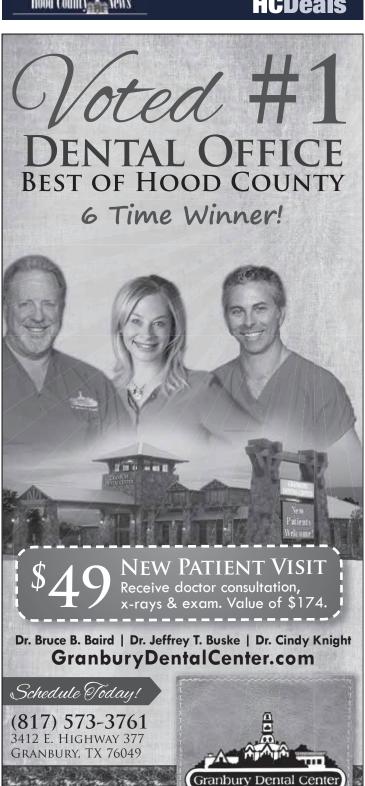

The Lady Pioneers beat Alvarado and Franklin in pool play before dropping their third game to Benbrook.

In the consolation bracket, NCTA knocked off China Spring and got their revenge on Benbrook, winning in straight sets to claim bronze.

TPWD predicts promising dove season

ased on field observations by Texas Parks and Wildlife Department biologists, prospects for the 2017-18 dove hunting season are fair to excellent across the state as habitat conditions vary depending on scattered precipitation and timing of plants seeding out.

The season in Hood County's Central Zone is Sept. 1-Nov. 5 and Dec. 15-Jan. 7.

According to the TPWD, our state has had above average mourning dove production early in the spring, with continued good production where precipitation occurred through the spring and summer. The normal dove feed, which includes croton, sunflower, ragweed, and other highly-selected dove foods, were generally available statewide.

White-winged doves were observed flocking in late July in urban areas across the state, with good numbers starting to move to more rural areas in early August, Mourning dove populations are concentrated around water and food resources in August during the traditional hottest part of the year.

The daily bag limit for doves statewide is 15 and the possession limit is 45.

During the early two weekends for the Special Whitewinged Dove Days (in the South Zone), hunting is allowed only from noon to sunset and the daily bag limit is 15 birds to include not more than two mourning doves and two whitetipped doves. During the general season in the South Zone, the aggregate bag limit is 15 with no more than two white-tipped doves.

Hunting and fishing licenses went on sale Aug. 15 for the 2017-18 seasons and can be purchased through the agency's 28 field offices, at more than 50 state parks and over 1,700 retailers across the state. Licenses

HOOD COUNTY FISHING REPORT

Recent rains have cooled the lake a few degrees, but it is sure to heat back up. Water temperatures were in the upper 80s and fishing did improve after the rain.

Sand bass are schooling sporadically near deCordova and near Indian Harbor. Stripers are good on live shad and/or deepdiving crankbaits fished near channel drop-offs.

Largemouth bass are excellent to 7 pounds on deep-diving crankbaits and Carolina rigs fished near main lake points. Channel catfish are good on punch baits and cut shad fished in 15 to 20 feet of water off of creek channels.

Squaw Creek largemouth are excellent in numbers and size. Deep-diving crankbaits and Texas-rigged power worms are producing good catches.

Tilapia continue to be good on worms fished under a cork.

Limits of Whitney stripers continue to be caught on live bait and downrigging. Possum Kingdom stripers are hit and miss. michael.acosta@att.net

Nutcracker G.C. for sale to members

BY GRANT MCGALLIARD HOOD COUNTY NEWS

The biggest news in the area golf scene this week is the pending offer in the sale of Nutcracker Golf Club in Pecan Plantation.

The Anthony family, who owns the club, is offering to sell the club to its members and offer equity golf memberships to potential members. Once solely for residents of Pecan Plantation, potential new members do not have to own property in Pecan to be a member at Nutcracker.

Currently, there are 320 members at Nutcracker. Once the members buy the club, the membership cap will be 400.

Those interested in the purchase of Nutcracker and interested in potentially becoming a new member can attend a meeting on Monday at 6 p.m. in the Pecan Plantation Ballroom.

For more information, call Nutcracker Club manager Gary Gaffey at 817-579-1811.

Meanwhile, here are the winners from the Pecan Plantation Ladies' Golf Association playday:

Clarice T. Ator

Clarice Thompson Ator (1926 - 2017), formerly of Houston, Texas and recently of Kansas City, passed peacefully into the arms of her loving Savior on August 2, 2017 while at home with her Kansas City family.

She was preceded in death by her husband S.H. Ator, Jr. in 1992. She is survived by her oldest son, Bryan Ator and Tina Bistline of Forney, Texas, and his son Clinton Ator; her youngest son, Greg Ator and wife Dana Ator, along with their children Melissa, Jonathan, Valerie, and David of Mission Hills, Kansas. She is also survived by her brother Robert Edwin Thompson and wife Betty Russell Thompson and their son Steve Thompson and wife Verna Thompson. She was predeceased by Robert and Betty's son Russell Winn Thompson and survived by his wife Tina Thompson.

Born in 1926 in Paluxy, Texas, Clarice Ator was a school teacher from early in life teaching in a one room primary school in the 40's. She graduated from Tarleton College in 1945 and wed S.H. Ator Jr of Lipan, Texas on September 1st, 1946. After starting a family she completed a Bachelor of Science in Education at the University of Houston in 1968. Clarice returned to the classroom to teach, this time in the older primary grades in schools in the Houston Independent School District. She was one of the first teachers in the district to participate in "crossover" integration arrangements for schools serving underprivileged children. She finished her career teaching gifted sixth graders at Horn Elementary.

Clarice was active in many missions related activities with

Jon Keith Powell

Jon Keith Powell, 69 years old from Lee's Summit, Missouri and snowbirding in Georgetown, Texas, died on 8-15-2017.

Powell was born on 1-22-1948 in Denison, Texas to Foy and Runnell Powell. He spent 37 years calling Denison home.

Keith had a paper route when he was in elementary school at Central elementary and worked at some Denison legends like Ashburn's Ice Cream shop and Wrights Furniture. Keith graduated with the class of 1966 from Denison High School where he played football for the fighting yellow jackets. He graduated from Southeastern Oklahoma State University. He went to college during the day and worked at night for Safeway. Keith started out working in sanitation and earned the top spot managing the entire manufacturing plant. Keith was the plant manager for Ventura Foods in Saginaw, Texas during the 90's and he retired from CF Sauer as the plant manager in 2014. If you've eaten margarine, salad dressing, mayonnaise at your favorite restaurants it's a high likelihood you have tasted Keith's products. He loved football, golf, bar-b-que, fried chicken, motor cycles, traveling, Kansas City Royals baseball -- but most of all he loved the Dallas Cowboys with all of his heart and soul! Henry Michael Rabun Jr.

Henry Michael Rabun Jr., a native Texan, passed away on Tuesday, August 15, 2017, in Granbury, Texas, at the age of 76. He was born September 24, 1940, in Houston, Texas, to the late Henry "Hank" M. Rabun and Euva B. Sitton Rabun.

Shortly after graduating from the University of North Texas with a journalism degree, Mike was employed by United Press International in 1962 as a general sports reporter. He took part in covering such events as the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and was an eyewitness to the murder of Lee Harvey Oswald. He also took part in the coverage of the first manned moon landing, Apollo 11, and Apollo 13.

Mike was named Southwest Division Sports Editor for UPI and began covering a myriad of sports including Summer and Winter Olympic Games, Super Bowls, Masters, U.S. Open and PGA Championship golf tournaments. He covered activities of the Texas Rangers, Dallas Cowboys, Dallas Mavericks and Southwest Conference as well as dozens of NCAA tournament basketball games and Final Fours. Mike was a longtime contributing writer for the Dallas Cowboys Star, formerly the Cowboys Weekly. He also served for many years as a member of the Selection Committee of the Texas Sports Hall of Fame.

Mike is survived by his wife of over 53 years, Janet E. Rabun, and two daughters: Tracey L. Coe and her husband, William O. Coe; Hillary J. Prieto and her four granddaughters: Julia J. Coe, Rachel R. Coe, Angelina L. Prieto and Isabella G. Prieto, all of Austin, Texas. Mike is survived by a sister, Robin A. Rabun, and her husband, Leroy Smith, of Colorado Springs, Colorado. He is also survived by nieces and nephews: Mark Evans and Leslie Wogstad of San Antonio, Texas; Randa Hiemke of Saginaw, Texas; Emilie Lamb of Ft. Irwin, California; and Ellen Satterwhite of Washington, D.C.

Visitation: 6:00 PM - 8:00 PM, Friday, August 18, 2017, Wiley Funeral Home, Granbury, Texas.

Back To School Rules!

Where did the summer go?

Ready or not, the new school year began Wednesday for Granbury school district youngsters.

Kids showed up with bright, smiling faces, and, yes, some weren't too thrilled.

Tolar and Lipan students return for the new school year Monday, Aug. 28.

75% eclipse visible from Granbury

hile skies over Granbury will not go completely dark during Monday's solar eclipse, the daytime sky will still put on a show.

On August 21, the moon will pass between the earth and the sun, totally blocking solar rays for up to 2 minutes and 40 seconds in some areas, according to NASA.

Granbury will see about a 75 percent eclipse, according to NASA's calculations.

To see the eclipse, step to the window or outside at about 11:40 a.m. in Hood County, according to the website www. eclipsemega.movie/

Maximum coverage will occur at about 12:53 p.m. and the sun will return to full view at about 1:40 p.m.

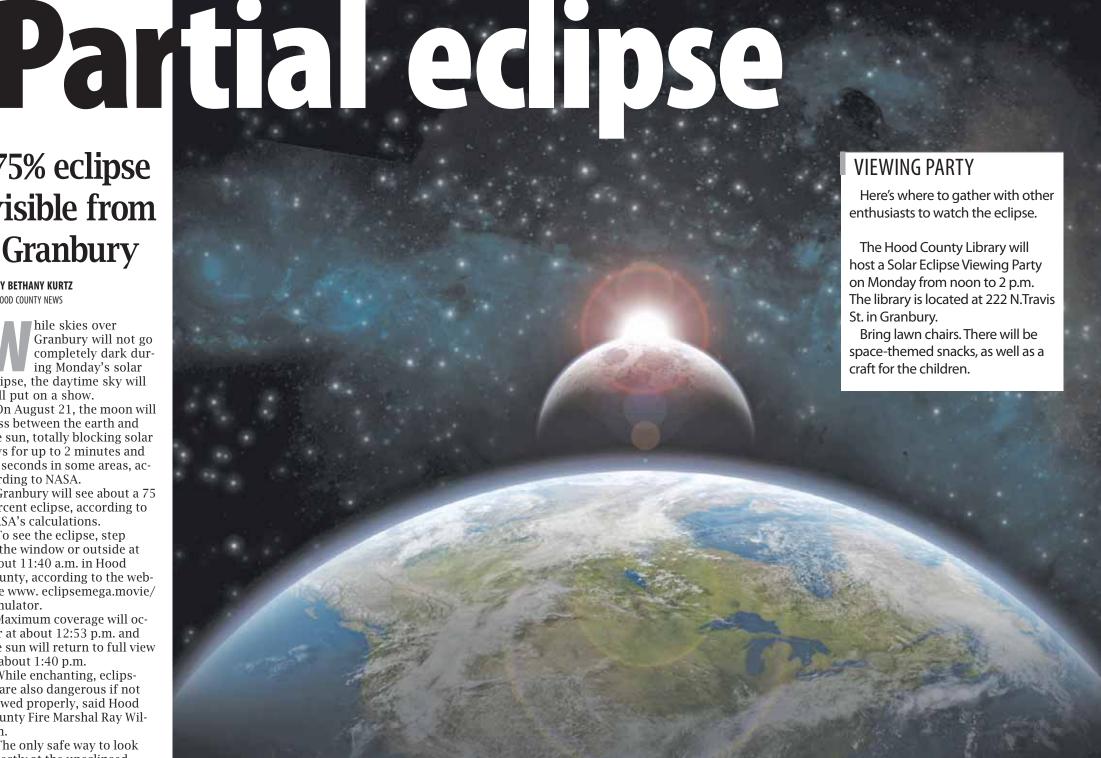

While enchanting, eclipses are also dangerous if not viewed properly, said Hood County Fire Marshal Ray Wil-

The only safe way to look directly at the uneclipsed or partially eclipsed sun is through special-purpose solar filters, such as "eclipse glasses" or hand-held solar viewers, he said.

Make sure to use a reputable vender to prevent eye damage. General Safety Rules:

 Always inspect solar filters before use; if scratched or damaged, discard it. Read and follow any instructions printed on or packaged with the filter.

- Always supervise children using solar filters.
- Stand still and cover your eyes with your eclipse glasses or solar viewer before looking up at the sun. After glancing at the sun, turn away and remove your filter — do not remove it while looking at the sun.

Do not look at the uneclipsed or partially eclipsed sun through an unfiltered camera, telescope, binoculars, or other optical device. The concentrated solar rays will damage the filter and eyes, causing serious injury.

FUN FACTS

• The last total eclipse in the United States occurred on Feb. 26, 1979.

• The last total eclipse that crossed the entire continent occurred on June 8, 1918.

The last time a total solar eclipse occurred exclusively in the U.S. was in 1778.

Experiencing a total solar eclipse where you live happens on average about once in 375 years. The next total solar eclipse to directly hit North Texas will be on April ACCOMPLISHMENT: Aedan Roberts attained the rank of Eagle Scout and was recently recognized. Roberts, 17, is a student at Premier High School.

Aedan Roberts reaches Eagle Scout achievement

Aedan Roberts, 17, attained the rank of Eagle Scout and was recently recognized with the Eagle Scout Court of Honor ceremony and dinner reception.

Roberts began his Boy Scout career at the age of 12 with Troop 360 in Granbury. Throughout his career, he has learned many skills and has held many leadership positions.

For his journey to Eagle, Roberts acquired 21 merit badges, spent 82 nights camping, had 37 community service hours and 164 hiking miles.

For his Eagle project, he planned and oversaw the building of shelves and cabinets in order to organize the aquatics closet for the Hood County YMCA. It took 100 hours of planning and two days of cutting wood, then staining and assembling the wood. He and his team of seven completed the project in two days.

In addition to the community service hours he needed to attain the rank of Eagle Scout, Roberts volunteered at People Helping People and at the former U.S. Veterans Museum.

Roberts maintains a 4.0 GPA at Premier High School and has plans to major in math and minor in political science with the hope of stepping into the political arena one day.

Roberts is the son of Cindy and John Roberts of Hood County.

The Community Calendar is a free listing in the Hood County news to inform readers of community programs, special meetings and nonprofit events. To be considered for publication, organizations must include the agenda for the meeting, or the speaker's name and topic. Information should be submitted two weeks prior to the event for consideration. Please do not submit a listing for all meetings the entire year. Monthly updates work best. Email information (including the location and street address) to calendar@hcnews.com.

SHOWTIME: Children participating in the Missoula Theater production of "Alice in Wonderland" were all smiles in Pecan Plantation. This is the fifth year Missoula has traveled to Pecan to hold auditions, practice and oversee the performance of a play. All participants did well, and the two shows were well attended by family members and friends of the cast.

Young actors present 'Wonderland' in Pecan

he Missoula Children's Theater had another smashingly successful season this year with its production of "Alice in Wonderland.'

The youngest thespians of Pecan auditioned for parts on a Monday morning, began practicing Monday afternoon and continued rehearsals through Friday, all culminating with two shows on the following Saturday. The Pecan Activities Center (PAC) gym had healthy audiences of parents, grandparents and friends for both performances.

Thank you to Missoula, the PAC staff, and everyone who contributed to this venture, and congratulations to the actors who produced an outstanding show.

TAKE AIM

The next event at the archery/air gun range is happening today and tomorrow with a 2D/3D archery open shoot.

This month marks the eleventh anniversary of Pecan's archery/air gun range, and although this amenity has seen many changes and improvements, the dedication and hard work of the association members has never changed or wavered.

These folks plan and carry out events for residents of all ages, as well as days when PECAN BITS available at the PAC.

BREAKFAST CLUB

Wednesday morning's Breakfast Club is in for a treat when Micky Shearon, representing the Granbury Theater Company, will speak to the group about our town's local theater productions and opportunities.

Everyone is invited to convene at the clubhouse for breakfast service beginning at 7:30 a.m. and the program immediately following.

TENNIS DATE

The Pecan Plantation Tennis Association (PPTA) has its annual "Margarita Madness Play Day" scheduled for Friday evening at 7. The event is free to PPTA members.

Also, Labor Day Monday will have a U.S. Open Mixer theme gathering beginning at 9:30 a.m. Mixed doubles of all levels followed by lunch at the club are on the schedule.

GOLF NOTES

The Ladies' Golf Association has low gross/low net on the calendar for Tuesday, and the Men's Golf Association has individual play- low gross/low net set for the day.

For complete golf happenings or to sign up for events, visit the golf pro shop.

SNAG

The final Starting New At Golf (SNAG) day comes Aug. 26 at Pecan's soccer fields. These outings have been greatly successful and lots of fun for players just beginning the game as well as those looking to improve. The event is free and runs from 10 a.m. to noon.

ART CLASS

Art for children is back at the PAC beginning Sept. 12. Certified art teacher Jennifer Osborne will have classes for students in grades kindergarten through second and a separate class for children in grades three through five. Call Jennifer at 817-846-7436 for more information or the PAC to sign up: 817-573-7952.

ROAD NEWS

Work on Pecan's front entrance continues with construction primarily between the hours of 8 p.m. and 6 a.m. Using the back gate when possible during these hours is encouraged.

WHAT'S COOKING?

Popular cooking instructor Li Cross will be leading healthy cooking classes once a month for six months with the inaugural meeting coming on Sept. 12. Sign up is also at the PAC.

PLAYGROUND PLANS

The PAC playground is a popular place, and the sports and recreation committee is finalizing an improvement plan for the playground to be presented to Pecan's board.

The plan includes moving some equipment to the PAC playground and replacing the ground surface of the area.

More plans for long range improvement of parks in Pecan's beach area are also in the works.

For folks wanting to volunteer in these improvement endeavors, contact Brenda Palmer at cbpalm@yahoo.com.

SYMPATHY

Our sympathy goes to the family of Doris Holland who passed away Aug. 7.
