Pecan Plantation VFD/EMS board election sparks controversy

BY LAUREN DAVIS

Staff Writer lauren@hcnews.com

Pecan Plantation's Volunteer Fire Department and Emergency Medical Services Auxiliary hosted a candidate forum Monday, Oct. 21, at the EEA hangar. The well-attended event allowed community members to meet new and current candidates on the ballot and hear the candidates' views on pressing issues firsthand.

Nine candidates have submitted their resumes but concerns about fairness and transparency have arisen regarding the board's candidate selection process. The process deviates from the norm regarding bylaw nomination practices and voting procedures that do not appear to protect voter identity. Additionally, one candidate, Billy Wimberly, was excluded from the ballot with no reason provided, raising further suspicions among some residents about the board's integrity.

The upcoming election Nov. 7 has led to discussions about transparency, trustworthiness and candidate eligibility. Some candidates, including Janie Narducci, Gary Guffey, Phillip Mayeux, and Gary Marks, did not attend the Oct. 21 forum, leaving the community wanting to hear from all candidates. The newly appointed VFD Chief and the EMS Chief were also absent.

CANDIDATES SELECTED BY THE NOMINATING COMMITTEE

Voting instructions accompanying the resumes revealed the candidate with the most votes for the category would occupy the first position, and the candidate garnering the next highest number of votes would automatically secure the next position in that category.

Positions 1 and 2, financial management category: Jeanie Curry, Janie Narducci

Positions 3 and 4, business management category: Gary Guffey, Phillip Mayeux, Ken Vehstedt, (Billy Wimberly)

Position 5, emergency management category: Gary A. Marks, Laverne Franzen, Richard Beardsley

THE EXCLUSION OF BILLY WIMBERLY

A point of contention for many is the exclusion of Billy Wimberly from the official ballot. Wimberly, a 30-year volunteer Pecan firefighter and current Granbury ISD board trustee, submitted his resume by the Sept. 17 deadline but was informed that his role on the GISD board presented a conflict of interest. Wimberly disagrees, stating, "This is patently false." He noted also that his resignation from the volunteer fire department Oct. 1 should have eliminated potential conflict.

Despite running a write-in campaign for Position 3 or 4, Wimberly noticed on social media a posting indicating that any write-in votes

Strings of success: County honors Grand Master Fiddler Ridge Roberts with proclamation

ASHLEY TERRY | HOOD COUNTY NEWS Ridge Roberts, right, shares a laugh with Hood County Judge Ron Massingill as they reminisce about their first meeting when Roberts was only 7 years old.

The Hood County Commissioners Court came alive Oct. 22, when local fiddler Ridge Roberts played a beautiful rendition of "The Star-Spangled Banner" — turning an ordinary meeting into a heartwarming performance.

Roberts — who now holds the official title Grand Master Fiddler — was recognized during the meeting with a special proclamation to honor his outstanding achievements in the art of fiddling.

"We have Ridge Roberts here," Hood County Judge Ron Massingill announced Tuesday. "I think everybody here in this room knows who this guy is, because everybody in the nation does."

The 21-year-old Hood County native has been fiddling his way to the top ever since he started playing the fiddle at the young age of 7.

At the age of 9, Roberts began showcasing his talent at civic organizations in Hood County. Today, he still performs at local events in the area, but his exceptional skills have also taken him to venues across the country.

In 2013, at the age of 10, Roberts entered and won his first fiddle contest — and from that point on, the spotlight has followed him, as he quickly became a rising star in the fiddling community.

Roberts has since won more than 15 championships, including the Oklahoma State Championship, the Grand Lakes National Championship, and the World Championship in Crockett — all won in 2018 — and the Colorado State Championship in 2019.

He also won his first Grand Masters Championship at the age of 16 in 2019 and won the Grand Championship at the National Old-Time Fiddlers contest in Weiser, Idaho in June of this year.

But his most recent accomplishment is when he secured his second victory at the prestigious Grand Master Fiddle Contest held in Franklin, Tennessee, Sept. 1. This highly competitive event which attracts top fiddlers from coast to coast – is one of the most renowned events in the fiddling community.

To honor Roberts for his outstanding achievements, the court issued a proclamation that invites all Hood County residents to join in celebrating his dedication, extraordinary talent, and remarkable Halloween night, trick-or-treaters can visit Yarborough's home at 204 Donna Circle. Parents can donate to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital using the Skeletons for St. Jude fundraiser.

Spooktacular fundraiser transforms Halloween spirit into lifesaving support howling werewolf and a cackling witch are just some of the many characters on display in Bradley Yarborough's yard for Halloween — creating a haunting spectacle that will make even the bravest trick-or-treaters pause in their tracks.

But beyond the frights and fun, this spine-tingling display serves a heartfelt purpose — to raise funds and awareness for St. Jude Children's Research Hospital.

"Halloween is my favorite holiday," Yarborough said. "I've been decorating for Halloween as long as I can remember, and then I heard about the Skeletons for St. Jude (fundraiser) ... It combines my two favorite things: helping kids and Halloween.'

The Skeletons for St. Jude fundraiser was originally created by North Carolina resident Jeff Robertson in 2020, according to the St. Jude website. After building a "spookybut-fun" Halloween display in his front yard, his town took notice, with neighbors, friends and local media marveling at his work. Seeing the huge interest his Halloween display caused, Robertson decided to use the attention for good by starting a fundraiser for St. Jude.

Since then, the Skeletons for St. Jude fundraiser has drawn a Facebook community "like a bat to moonlight." A fundraiser that began with a single home in 2020 has since grown exponentially, with 669 homes across the nation participating in the mission just last year.

"What started out as me having fun with a bunch of skeletons on Halloween unexpectedly turned into something much more meaningful," reads a quote from Robertson on the St. Jude website. "Meeting a St. Jude patient and her family as they visited our Halloween decorations motivated my family. And now over 1,000 incredible partners join us to do whatever they can to help St. Jude. I am so proud of what our team has accomplished."

So far, the fundraiser has generated a total of $717,810 for the mission. In 2023 alone, the campaign raised an impressive $264,297, and the 2024 campaign has already brought in $79,657.

As the movement gains momentum, supporters like Yarborough are embracing the opportunity to make a difference in their local communities.

"I was reading about it on Facebook, and I was like, 'Man, I want to join this crusade,' and so I started doing it," Yarborough said. "Everybody who does a big (Halloween) display who wants to patake in it, they can email (Robertson), and you'll get a sign that you

By the Granbury Chamber of Commerce

In Hood County we have had some close results when voting. While it often seems like voting may not make a difference, every vote counts.

In today's rapidly changing world, one of the most powerful tools at our disposal is the simple act of voting. As early voting has begun, it's crucial to understand why participating in this civic duty is not just important but essential for shaping our future.

Voting is an opportunity to express your beliefs and priorities. Each ballot cast is a declaration of what you value — be it education, healthcare, social justice or the environment. By voting, you empower yourself and your community, ensuring that your concerns are represented in the decision making process.

While national and statelevel elections often dominate the headlines, it is the local elections that have a direct impact on our daily lives. The decisions made by school board members and city council representatives influence our schools, streets, neighborhoods and public services. They determine property taxes, allocate budgets and set policies that impact the quality of life for residents.

Voting is not just about the present; it's also about the future. Decisions made today will shape the world that future generations inherit. By participating in elections, you play a role in determining the direction of policies that will affect the environment, economy and social structures for years to come.

Many people feel disillusioned with politics, believing their vote doesn't matter. However, every election has been decided by a surprisingly small number of votes. Your participation is vital. Engaging in the electoral process can help shift the narrative and foster a more vibrant democracy where every voice counts. As we approach the next election, remember that voting is not just a right; it's a responsibility. Your voice matters, and by exercising your right to vote, you help shape the future of your community and your country. Let's make a commitment to show up, speak out and make our voices heard. Get out and VOTE!!

At 204 Donna Circle in Granbury, Yarborough's house is decked out with some of the spookiest decorations, including menacing pumpkins, eerie fog, decrepit headstones, and a 12-foot-tall skeleton.

As trick-or-treaters approach his ghoulish display, however, they will not only be greeted by an impressive array of creepy figures, but also by a sense of community spirit. Nestled among "Halloween's" Michael Myers and rotting corpses is a sign depicting the St. Jude fundraiser, along with a QR code, allowing adults the opportunity to donate to the cause.

"They see the sign, they scan the QR code, and it'll take you directly to the St. Jude website," Yarborough explained. "Now, it's my page on the St. Jude website, but there is no middleman. Every dollar goes straight to St. Jude." While St. Jude accepts donations all year long, the biggest fundraising time is the month of October. Yarborough himself has already raised $1,005 in the first few weeks alone.

"I raised almost $800 last year, and it was off of just 5 or 10 bucks from people," he said. "Everybody sets a personal goal, and mine is $1,500, so I'm hoping to reach that this year. Actually, I'm hoping to exceed that."

With this being Yarborough's third time to participate in the fundraiser, he is excited to welcome even more trick-or-treaters to his sprawling Halloween display.

"I welcomed over 400 trick or treaters last year," he said. "I have enough candy for 800 kids this year, so (I'll welcome) as many as I can get."

Yarborough mentioned that each year he aims to include something new and unique in his display, noting that this year, he hopes to enhance the graveyard scene.

Utilizing five fog machines, two fog chillers, and various special effects, Yarborough also relies on electricity from his two neighbors to power the impressive setup.

"It's all with their permission," he added. "We want people to come look at our cool display, but then donate at the same time — that's what I'm hoping for."

The special effects, lighting and moving parts will all be functional starting this weekend, as well as Halloween night: Thursday, Oct. 31.

While Yarborough's love for Halloween may have played a big role in his decision to join in Jefferson's mission, he said he also believes in St. Jude and its remarkable impact on children.

"It's an awesome, awesome charity," he added. "And something I'll be doing the rest of my life."

In the past I have written a column or two telling vou about my friend Javne Austin. She is soon to be 94 years old, and we have been amazing friends for almost 20 years. Jayne was born in Durant, Oklahoma but lived with her husband Marcus in Gainesville for the bulk of their married life. Marcus was a band instructor and later a school administrator, while Jayne taught music at the elementary school level. About two years ago, I moved Jayne to a care facility near my house so she could be closer, and I could see her almost every day. It was hard for her to move from her longtime home, but with no living children, husband or family located anywhere nearby, she realized it made a lot of sense for us to be in the same town so I could see she was being taken care of properly and bring her the things she needs. She has adjusted amazingly well to the move and has made several good friends at the facility where she is staying. She plays a lot of bingo and Yahtzee, and I enjoy stopping by after work and seeing how her day went and how she is faring. We have a special friendship which I think can be a little confusing for some people. They don't understand how we can be so close when we are not from the same family. When asked the nature of our relationship, Jayne will commonly respond, "we are not related by blood, but we are related by love and that is even better." I think that probably says it all.

One day this week when I visited Jayne I got a real surprise. I walked into her room, and she looked up and before I could say anything she spouted, "You will never guess what happened today." Immediately my mind went to 1,000 places and frankly, most of them were negative places. My confusion grew because Jayne seemed to be excited in a positive way.

She continued, "one of the aides came to tell me today that a person who is now living on the second floor thinks I taught her in school." Evidently the person in question is very shy, but somehow, she had heard the name Jayne Austin being talked about in the facility and she wondered if it could be the same Ms. Austin who taught her in school so many years ago. Jayne did not recognize the lady's last name because of course, it was her married name, but arrangements were made, and the lady made the trek from the second floor to Jayne's room on the first floor. Come to find out, more than 70 years ago, the woman had indeed been in one of Jayne's classes! Even though the aide said the now 82-yearold woman was exceedingly shy, she sat and talked to Javne for more than two hours. They talked about some of the other children in the class and what had ever become of them as they grew up, while filling in the details of each other's lives. They laughed and listened, and for a few brief moments they were young again. They were a teacher and a student, and the respect and love were mutual.

I am not sure when I have seen Jayne happier than she was that afternoon, and from the reports I got from the aides at the facility, the same was true of the longago student.

Who would have imagined the two would be reunited, so many years later, in a care facility 100 miles from where their paths had originally crossed? My lesson was you never know the impact you have on another person's life and how crossing paths might make an impression that lasts forever. Thank goodness for teachers and God bless the students who respect and never forget them.

Say hello to our neighbor, Ron Becker!

Cresson's Mayor Ron Becker has been living in the Parker County portion of Cresson since September 2005. He grew up in Stephenville, attended Texas A&M, and started working in the oil and gas business. Ron loves calling Cresson home because he believes the community has a strong volunteering spirit here in Hood County. Every day this spirit is reflected in Ron's service and actions. Ron's last job was as president of the second largest chain of convenience stores/truck stops in the United States, serving 8 million customers a day with 35,000 employees.

After he left, the company was subsequently sold for $20 billion. Ron shares, "I was fortunate to retire at the relatively early age of 52." Nowadays, with time to enjoy his favorite pastimes with his loved ones, Ron says, "I like to fly, so when I retired we moved to Cresson where I could live with my airplane. We scuba dive all over the world, with Fiji being our favorite place." After moving to Cresson, Ron took up a third hobby, volunteer firefighting. "I've been the chief of the Cresson Volunteer Fire Department for 10 years; that hobby grew a little!" Ron says. "The Hood County News is unique, focusing on local news and people. I like the way the Hood County News tries to tell the stories of community members who are volunteering their time in so many ways to try to improve the place they live."

As voters cast their ballots this week for the Nov. 5 election, Texas Secretary of State Jane Nelson shares how the state has prepared for a secure election.

'Texas leads the way when it comes to election security, and I want voters to know our state and county officials are ready for the November election," Nelson said. "Many security protocols are new, and others have been around for decades, but Texans deserve to know the ways we are working to secure their votes."

Texas has put several security measures in place leading up to the election, including:

• Publicly testing voting systems before the machines are used in the election.

• Requiring background checks for all personnel

tion to access the statewide voter registration database.

• Annual cybersecurity training for any individual with access to the statewide voter registration database, mandatory reporting of any cybersecurity breach, and mandatory security assessments for county election departments.

During the election, no voting system is ever connected to the internet at any point. Before and after use each day, all voting systems are sealed and locked with devices containing unique serial numbers.

Other requirements at the polls include:

• Video recording and live streaming of all areas containing voted ballots in counties with a population of 100,000 or more.

• Election workers at the polling place must confirm that there are zero votes cast at the opening of vot-the number of voters who have checked-in on the poll list.

Poll watchers are also allowed to observe at any early voting and election day polling locations and at the central counting station where ballots are being counted.

After the election, the state requires a post-election audit in counties that use paper ballots. The Texas Secretary of State's Elections Division Audit Program reviews and examines election records and documents maintained by county election officials to ensure election law and security procedures have been followed.

To further protect against voter fraud, voters must show an ID at the polls. Voters using mail-in ballots must also provide an ID or the last four-digits of their social security number.

Texans have the right to challenge the eligibility of any registered voter in their county.

Illegal voting is considered a felony in Texas.

County discusses financial implications of jail expansion

BY ASHLEY TERRY Staff Writer

ashley@hcnews.com

Voting is currently underway at the polls, with one of the county's biggest decisions hanging in the balance — the jail bond.

Back in August, the Hood County Commissioners Court voted to place the jail bond on the November ballot, which could facilitate the much-needed expansion and renovation of the county jail.

The bond, which will not exceed $50 million, will enable the county to address overcrowding by funding the construction of additional jail space of 209 beds and refurbishing the current facility, which currently holds 192 beds — creating a total of 401 beds in the jail.

The proposal developed by DRG Architects outlines plans for a new jail facility that will accommodate up to 150 inmates in general housing, provide flex cell housing for up to 28 inmates (either male or female), and include special housing for up to 31 inmates.

The 30,606-square-foot jail addition will also feature a new laundry facility, an exercise area for administrative segregation, a general population exercise area, and multipurpose rooms.

Phase one of a 6,200-square-foot expansion for the sheriff's office is also part of the master planning budget. The interior renovations will encompass a new kitchen, a larger sally port, an expanded intake area, and upgraded inmate housing.

During a regularly scheduled meeting of the Hood County Commissioners Court Tuesday, officials discussed how the bond, if passed, will impact overall jail operating costs.

According to estimates from Hood County Sheriff Roger Deeds and County Auditor Stephanie Matlock, the current operating costs for the existing 192-bed facility would nearly double, leading to an increase in expenses across several categories like additional equipment, medical expenses, groceries, and additional staff and training.

ASHLEY TERRY | HOOD COUNTY NEWS

Hood County Sheriff Roger Deeds presents a layout of the proposed jail expansion to the Hood County Commissioners Court during a regularly scheduled meeting Oct. 22.

"But we need one jailer per 48 inmates."

Cost of additional equipment, like washers, dryers, security systems and computers, will also need to be factored in, with an estimated one-time cost of computers and infrastructures of $2,500,000 and an estimated cost for three washers/dryers estimated at $62,298. "The estimated cost on the computer infrastructure, I don't know that it's going to cost that much, but ... until we get the plans really drawn up, I don't think anybody can really say exactly what that (cost will be)," Deeds explained.

Once all costs are factored in, Deeds estimated the jail expansion will end up costing the county $7,868,953.28, with an additional $1,850,621.28 factored in for extra bedding, groceries and other necessities, as the number of inmates in the jail will practically double.

Deeds noted that the daily average number of inmates fluctuates, with the recent average being around 59. He emphasized that once the expansion is complete, inmates will no longer be housed out-of-county, so costs should stabilize, and the facility should be able to generate revenue.

With a 401-bed jail and plans to make 110 beds available to other counties at a rate of $85 per day, Deeds estimated the county could start generating revenue of approximately $3,412,750 annually. "I don't know the time frame for getting this done," he said. "I asked what that would be like, and it sounds like it'd be a two-and-a-halfyear project, so by the time we get there, I don't know the number of inmates we will have in our jail ... but we could bring in almost threeand-a-half million dollars." Deeds added that the project timeline includes six months for design and bidding, followed by 12 to 14 months for new construction and eight months for remodeling — totaling approximately 28 months to complete.

He also emphasized that federal inmates cannot be housed while the facility is in debt, as accommodating them involves additional complexities.

"You can charge a lot more for them, but I think there (would be) a whole lot more problems, things that you got to do for the feds to get that done, so I'll just be happy when we can get everybody in one roof, so I'm not even thinking about federal inmates," Deeds said.

Precinct 1 Commissioner Kevin Andrews noted that this is a "multi-variable equation," as the county is currently at the mercy of other counties to house its inmates.

"I've joked around with Erath County and Joe Brown over there, that maybe you build a bigger jail over there so we can send more to you, but it costs money to send these people off," Andrews said. "Is there some chance that we could use those cells for federal inmates in the future and bring in a few more dollars that we're putting into it? I think that that is a possibility, but one of the things that's important here is the efficiencies of the way that they designed this thing."

Andrews explained that the requirement of having one jailer for every 48 inmates poses a challenge of managing larger groups in confined spaces. He noted that smaller cells would allow for quicker interventions in case of conflicts, adding that labor would then actually go down per inmate.

"Right now, whenever you consider the cost of the mortgage and everything that it would take to build this building and pass the bond, it's a little bit cheaper to keep them out of county ... but I believe that we're at a tipping point right now," Andrews said. "We've done our homework. We've got a good plan here. We're at a tipping point here where we can set our own path to be able to take care of this without the reliance or the sudden drop of counties saying, 'Hey, you've got to come pick your inmates up. I think that this iteration is very reasonable and that it gets us to where we need to be.'

Precinct 3 Commissioner Jack Wilson noted the new design includes flexible cell areas that can accommodate "This gives us some flexibility and gives the sheriff department some flexibility in being able to maneuver certain cell blocks based on what the needs are," he said.

Deeds reiterated that the state's growing inmate population presents an opportunity for Hood County to generate additional revenue in the future by housing inmates from other counties with its additional jail space. He clarified that the daily cost of operating the jail is calculated based on bed availability throughout the year. He states that currently, costs are around $8,588, but with the expansion and the addition of 60 new jailers, the cost per inmate is expected to decrease, due to additional bed space.

"We can charge pretty much whatever we want (to house other counties' inmates)," Deeds said. "As we found out with other counties, they charge $75 to $85 a day. Even on the small counties like Bosque, they get away with that and the jail is only a 60-bed jail anyway, so we'd be able to make a lot of money off that, if we have the space to do that with."

Wilson raised the concern that, given the 28-month construction timeline for the 209-bed facility and the subsequent need to relocate inmates from the current facility for renovations, the county is still approximately five years away from having any "true additional bed space."

Deeds clarified, however, that the 28-month expected completion date also includes the refurbishment, adding that in 28 to 30 months, "We'll be done."

He also explained that until the new facility is fully operational, the current budget allocates $1.6 million for operating costs, excluding transportation expenses. He noted that the total cost for transporting inmates and housing them out-of-county could reach between $2.25 million and $2.5 million per year, which will continue until the new facility is completed.

"I know that our auditor and the sheriff have worked very closely on getting these numbers together," Precinct 2 Commissioner Nannette Samuelson said. "I know it was a short time to get together but thank you very much. I think this is important information."

"Get your camera ready," Massingill joked. "I want my picture with this guy."

Massingill explained that he first met Roberts when he was about 7 years old, when Roberts participated in a friendly duel with "fabulous" fiddle player Eric Tull at their church. He noted that at the end of their performance, Tull laid down his fiddle, and the entire church "just started howling."

"This young guy, we knew he was something special back then," Massingill added.

Roberts expressed his gratitude to Massingill and the entire commissioners court, as well as the city of Granbury, for their unwavering support over the past decade. He also acknowledged his parents for their encouragement and for taking him to his lessons.

"I know I could not have done it without them (my parents), because they did everything for me," Roberts said. "My dad was the fiddle player, so he was the one that got me into it, so it definitely would not have happened without him, because who even learns to play the fiddle? for him will be invalid. However, Wimberly is encouraging supporters to write his name in any way. He suggests that residents wanting to vote for him should scratch out Phillip Mayeux's name and write his name in. He hopes the board will accept it.

CANDIDATES' PERSPECTIVES OFFERED AT THE FORUM

During the forum, candidates shared their plans to improve transparency, strengthen the department, and foster cooperation between the VFD and EMS services. Here are candidate responses to several forum questions:

What do you envision the duty of a board member of the Pecan Fire and EMS Board should be?

Billy Wimberly: "The most important duty of a board member is to have a good background in community service."

Richard Beardsley: "... but we need to make sure there's never a question on any of what we're doing, who we're doing it for, and why we're doing it."

Ken Vehstedt: "If money was no object, we probably wouldn't be having this meeting."

Laverne Franzen: "I think the two most important things that we need to do for our community is the fire chief and the EMS chief are an integral part of the board, and they bring ideas and thoughts to the board, and the board rules on whether they think it's a good idea or not."

Jeanie Curry: "So I think that just getting a trust factor built, working well with team members on the board is good."

Do you have any ideas that would increase the revenue for the Pecan Fire and EMS?

Richard Beardsley suggested exploring various revenue streams for Pecan Fire EMS, including the potential for billing insurance companies for damaged equipment. He emphasized the necessity of increasing monthly donations from need to contribute more financially in the future. However, he emphasized trying other options first and expressed gratitude for the generous donations received from the community.

Jeanie Curry suggested several ideas to increase revenue for Pecan VFD and EMS. She emphasized the importance of reviewing the budget for potential cost-cutting measures, such as optimizing fuel, medicine and supplies expenses. While acknowledging the affiliate's current fundraising efforts, Curry expressed hesitation about asking members to contribute more financially. Instead, she recommended focusing on efficiency to make better use of existing resources, potentially reducing costs without necessarily increasing revenue.

Billy Wimberly highlighted the significant financial impact of Pecan VFD and EMS' status change from a 501(c)(3) to a 501(c)(4) in 2018, resulting in the loss of tens of thousands of dollars in grant funding. He argued that returning to 501(c)(3)status would enhance revenue potential and provide better tax incentives for donors. Wimberly noted that the EMS budget is between $1.2 and $1.3 million, with the current income from EMS services being insufficient. He emphasized the need for a stable funding source, as the fire department, which is all-volunteer, also relies on limited income and county funding, which is becoming uncertain due to a lack of certifications. Wimberly stressed that regaining 501(c)(3)status is crucial for financial stability moving forward.

What do you hope to accomplish, and what is your top priority if elected?

Ken Vehstedt: "To accomplish (something) would be to have a regular version of this meeting with two or three times as many people

"My top priority ... would be to not ever hear again that there are sides inside of Pecan."

Laverne Franzen: "We need to work together. We need to have the firemen work with the EMS and vice the community, given the high costs of EMS and fire services. Additionally, he proposed that obtaining 501(c)(3) status could open up opportunities for grants to support the fire department and EMS, particularly for funding ambulances.

Ken Vehstedt acknowledged that he currently does not have specific ideas to increase revenue for PPVFD and EMS, stating that without reviewing financial documents, any suggestions would be mere guesses. He emphasized that revenue comes from two primary sources: the community and external funding. He reflected on the challenges of maintaining financial support, noting that while some community members have been extremely generous, many residents may not fully understand the true costs of fire and EMS services, which exceed the current $20 monthly contribution per household. He concluded that addressing these financial realities should be a priority.

Laverne Franzen shared a few ideas to boost revenue for Pecan VFD and EMS. He mentioned exploring "balanced billing" for EMS services, which has not been promoted before, and increasing efforts to secure grants for the fire department's equipment needs. Franzen also acknowledged the rising costs due to inflation, which impacts medical and fire equipment, suggesting that residents might versa and not fight about everything that happened in here."

County enters agreement with Pecan Plantation VFD/EMS following member resignations

BY ASHLEY TERRY Staff Writer ashley@hcnews.com

In response to recent resignations that have shaken the Pecan Plantation Volunteer Fire Department and Emergency Medical Services, Hood County has now entered into an interlocal agreement with the department to ensure continued fire protection and support for the community.

"We had some things that we're working through with Pecan," Fire Chief Jeff Young said during the Hood County Commissioners Court meeting Tuesday. "I believe all of those have been resolved, so I'm bringing forth their interlocal agreement so that we can ensure that we have fire protection for Pecan Plantation and the residents that they serve."

During the PPVFD and EMS board meeting Sept. 26, Chief Mike Barrett announced the fire department's members decided to resign Oct. 1, after struggling to work with a newly formed board that had been in place for less than six weeks. He highlighted that this marks the third board change within a year and voiced frustrations regarding the lack of respect from the Fire/EMS Inc. board toward volunteer fire services.

To secure fire protection for Pecan Plantation residents in light of these recent developments, the interlocal agreement which officially took effect Oct. 22 — includes a $120,000 transfer to PPVFD and EMS to be used as the operational, maintenance and fuel budget of the fire department.

According to the agreement, Hood County and PPVFD will work together in the interest of the citizens of Hood County to provide fire protection and reduced insurance costs by reducing the ISO rating for Hood County. Mutual aid will also be provided by the fire department to any emergency service in Hood County that requests help per this agreement.

"The county really has to make sure that the $120,000 that the county gives to the Pecan Fire Department is used for fire," Hood County Judge Ron Massingill said. "So, you're satisfied that this has been addressed and taken care of?"

"Yes, sir," Young said. "And they did send me a signed policy that ensures that the fire chief will have access to those funds, and he will be a signatory on it, and then second signature will not be unreasonably withheld, so they've met kind of what we've asked them to do. I'm satisfied with that, so I'd like to put it before the court."

Precinct 3 Commissioner Jack Wilson then made a motion to approve and sign the interlocal agreement with Pecan Plantation Volunteer Fire Department and Emergency Medical Services Inc., to take effect Oct. 22. Following a second by Precinct 2 Commissioner Nannette Samuelson, the motion passed unanimously.

The contract will continue until Sept. 30, 2025.

County celebrates Bob Lusk's induction into Texas Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame

The Hood County Commissioners Court honored local aquaculture expert Bob Lusk Tuesday for "reeling" in the extraordinary honor of being inducted by the Texas Parks & Wildlife into the Texas Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame.

According to the Texas Freshwater Fisheries Center, the Texas Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame honors individuals and organizations that have made significant contributions to freshwater fishing in Texas. Inductees are chosen by the Texas Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame Committee from among those nominated by the public.

Lusk, a native Texan and Hood County resident, has devoted his life to the study of aquaculture and fisheries management.

and I love to teach other people, but I love even more to watch them go do it."

According to the proclamation presented by the Hood County Commissioners Court, Lusk is a "true pioneer in the development and management of freshwater ponds and fisheries." It states that he has rightfully earned his reputation as "one of the country's foremost experts in the field," and that his "legacy of leading-edge research and innovation has had a profound impact on the anglers and fishery owners in Texas and around the world."

"What this career and what my clients have given me is a chance to never have a job — to follow my passion, and to be able to go out and keep that fire burning and never snuff it out," Lusk added in the video.

"The Texas Parks and Wildlife started this in the 70s or something," Hood County Judge Ron Massingill explained during the commissioners meeting Oct. 22. "There's 39 members in this hall of fame deal, so this is a very prestigious organization to get into."

revolutionizing the care and upkeep of ponds, as well as developing fish foods and feeding practices.

"He was doing pond management before pond management was even a term," said American Sport Fish Hatchery Team Coordinator Walter Bassano in a video created by Texas Parks & Wildlife. "People would call and ask how they could grow bigger fish in their pond, and he would say, 'Well, we need to implement some pond management practices,' and they'd say, 'What's that?'"

Lusk was recognized with the 2020 American Fisheries Society award for Excellence in Public Outreach and induction into the AFS Fisheries Management Section Hall of Excellence that same year.

He is also past president of the Texas Outdoor Writers Association and a recipient of the L.A. Wilke Award — the organization's most prestigious honor.

"It totally drives him every moment of every day," Bassano added. "Because he absolutely loves what he does."

Lusk is also the editor of Pond Boss Magazine — the nation's leading resource for private fisheries management and stewardship.

"We started at I think 600 people, of which 200 of them were my clients," Lusk said in the video. "I sent letters to customers, asking them for a check for a magazine that doesn't exist. I got 192 checks for $24."

Within the first year, the magazine had grown to printing 750 copies — but now, Lusk reveals that 4,200 copies are printed every edition.

"We're in 42 states, plus all the Bass Pro Shops that sell magazines," he said.

"The magazine has made a difference educating the customer how to successfully manage your pond," Bassano said.

"He's not afraid of anything," said Mike Otto, who is a contributing writer to Pond Boss Magazine. "One of his favorite sayings is, 'You get one chance to make a good first impression,' and he always does that.

"Bob's contribution to his field truly has been his knowledge and his leadership and the fact that he will gladly share all of the knowledge that he has learned with other people and do that willingly."

Lusk explained in the video that when he started, there were 750,000 private ponds and lakes — but now, there's 1.3 million.

"People need to know how to take care of that," he said. "I can't do that by myself. I love to share what I know The proclamation states that the court is honored to have Lusk representing the county on the Upper Trinity Groundwater Conservation District.

In addition, the court encourages all Hood County residents to join the court in congratulating Lusk on his induction to the Texas Freshwater Fishing Hall of Fame.

HCAD returns $294,429 of excess funds to taxing entities

BY ASHLEY TERRY Staff Writer

ashley@hcnews.com

The Hood Central Appraisal District authorized the return of $294,429 of excess funds to the taxing entities during its regularly scheduled meeting Oct. 16.A document from HCAD's meeting last week reveals the organization ended the 2023 fiscal year with excess funds that surpassed its expected budgetary needs. The excess funds resulted from various factors such as cost savings, lower than expected revenues, or underspending in certain budget areas.

The board engaged in an open discussion to evaluate the best course of action to handle the excess funds ultimately voting to return the funds back to the taxing entities.

According to Hood County Judge Ron Massingill, Chief Appraiser Jeff Law delivered a check to the county Oct. 21 in the amount of $69,773.

"I delivered the check to both the auditor and to the treasurer," Massingill said. "We received another check that was much larger than this for excess funds for the five previous years."

During a Hood County Commissioners Court meeting Oct. 22, Precinct 2 Commissioner Nannette Samuelson confirmed to the public that Granbury Independent School District also received a return of $187,000, as the district represents a significant portion of local tax revenue.

After the discussion, resident Tina Brown inquired about how the county plans to utilize its portion of the funds.

"It hasn't been decided yet, but there's plenty of uses for it, I'll tell you that," Massingill told her. "I don't know, but it's in a fund. We had to get the money first, so we just got the money, and we will be deciding that in future commissioner courts."

HCAD has faced scrutiny in recent months over its financial management and past expenditures, with many taxing entities considering a forensic audit for the district.

The Hood County Commissioners Court, Granbury City Council and Tolar City Council each passed resolutions urging HCAD to undergo a forensic audit of the prior five fiscal years. The GISD board voted to suspend the resolution for an audit indefinitely due to cost concerns, while Lipan ISD chose to refrain from taking any action.

In a similar move, Hood County and the cities of Granbury and Tolar have also recently chosen to disapprove HCAD's 2025 budget, citing concerns over excessive spending, lack of transparency and over-budgeting.

Hood County's resolution also requested that excess surplus and reserve funds be returned to the taxing entities, and to refund monies paid for unapproved ventures that may be identified in a forensic audit of the prior five years of HCAD expenditures.

In contrast, the GISD board approved HCAD's 2025 budget with a 3:2 vote — reflecting differing views among local entities.

As this situation continues to unfold, local officials continue to emphasize the importance of accountability and transparency in managing taxpayer funds.

City honors Powered for Life students at council meeting

BY ASHLEY TERRY Staff Writer ashley@hcnews.com

Students enrolled in Forward Training Center's Powered for Life class received a warm welcome and recognition from city officials when they attended the Granbury City Council meeting Oct. 15.

The STARS Accelerated High School students are enrolled in the program to gain tools and skills necessary to gain future employment.

During the meeting, Mayor Jim Jarratt, City Manager Chris Coffman, and City Attorney Jeremy SoRelle spoke highly about the program and its students.

"One of the things that he (instructor Walter Wilson) does is ask us to come in and speak to this group,' Jarratt said. "Every time that we come, we always get this question: 'What's the best part of your job?' I guarantee you (the answer) is being right there, at that right time, and at that moment, because meeting with these young adults who are our future is the best part of the job."

Coffman explained that the interactions they have with the students offer a truly unique one-on-one experience, adding that he answers all types of questions – everything from, "What do you do?" to "How much do vou make?"

"It's a learning curve for everybody and we get to know each other," Coffman said. "Sometimes we get to hire somebody out of that group because they come and apply for a job, and that's always encouraging, so that's part of what we do, is try to mentor these folks right along."

"It's an incredible program," SoRelle added. "Every time Walt (Wilson) calls and says, 'Hey, can you come out and talk to the kids?' I'm like, 30 minutes early. I love it. It's exciting, and I love interacting with them.'

SoRelle added that he appreciates the way Wilson personalizes the experience for each student — especially if they have a specific career in mind for the future. "I might not go for a few months, and then he'll call me up and say, 'Hey, we got a kid that wants to be a lawyer.' Great. I'm there," he said. "We go in and we have a great time."

"To have these people take time out of their day to come and donate their time to the kids is really something special and unique to this community," Wilson said. "You should all be proud of what they do, because they really do take the time to spend an hour-anda-half to two hours a day during the class and pour into them."

Coffman congratulated the students on getting one step closer to completing the Powered for Life program, and also encouraged them to keep an eye on the city's job postings.

"We're always looking to hire people," he added.

Aurora Petersen

August 8, 1931 - October 15, 2024

It is with great sadness we share the passing of our amazing Aurora Petersen on Oct. 15, 2024, in Granbury, Texas at the age of 93. Aurora was born on Aug. 8, 1931, in Dallas, Texas, the youngest of five children to Pete and Dominga Vidales.

She is predeceased by her brothers Andy and James Vidales, and her sisters Lucy Jones and Isadora Vidales. She is survived by her loving husband Ron Petersen, daughter Lisa Davison (husband Charlie) and son John Tubbs (wife Noemi).

Aurora came from humble beginnings. Her father was a simple laborer with a large family to support. Despite a difficult start in life, Aurora succeeded in graduating from Crozier Technical High School in downtown Dallas, Texas, and proceeded to carve out a professional career through diligent hard work, a trait she would weld throughout her life. She eventually became an inventory specialist with Aerospatiale Helicopter in Grand Prairie, Texas. While there, she leveraged her Hispanic background to serve as Aerospatiale's liaison with their affiliate in Mexico City.

Aurora married Robert Tubbs on May 19,1963, and later divorced in 1975. In September of 1983, she married her husband of 41 years, Ron Petersen. Aurora and Ron made their loving home in Granbury, Texas, with a short time spent living in Phoenix, Arizona. They spent much time traveling together, including extensive trips to Mexico. Aurora was a devout Catholic, and with Ron they remained active in church activities and fundraising throughout their years in Granbury.

The hallmark of Aurora's life was her unbounded empathy and caring for others. Placing the concerns of others above her own was a way of life for Aurora. After retiring from her professional life, she worked with Fossil Rim Wildlife Center and then became the director of the Granbury Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Aurora's passion for the Granbury community led her to become a leader and advocate for Habitat for Humanity, where she served for 13 years. This was a natural fit for Aurora and her joyful desire to help others. Not only did she embrace the hard work of physically building homes, but she was also very active in Habitat for Humanity's Family Support group. Aurora became the personal advocate for many of the families and endeared herself to them through her compassion, caring and genuine interest in their well-being. Once again, she leveraged her Hispanic background and served the critical role of interpreter, as many of the families did not speak English. Aurora remained connected to the families after they were placed in their homes, ensuring there was always someone invested in their well-being. Aurora's joyful loving spirit, tenacity and kindness are an enduring example of compassion and caring for all those who were touched by her life.

Funeral service will be held at St. Frances Cabrini Catholic Church, 2301 Acton Hwy, Granbury, Texas on Saturday, Oct. 26, 2024, at 11 a.m. (Rosary at 10:30 a.m.). Interment will immediately follow at Acton Cemetery, Granbury, Texas.

Susan Kinney October 21, 1938 - October 19, 2024

Susan Lynn Wilcox was born in Paris, Texas, on Oct. 21, 1938, to Leon Allen Wilcox and Frances Virginia (Devlin) Wilcox. Susan's parents loved her unconditionally and ensured she grew into adulthood healthy, happy, and well-educated. Susan received a degree in biology from the University of Texas in Arlington, certification as a medical technologist through All Saints Hospital in Fort Worth, and a BS in nursing from the University of Texas at Tyler. She also took special courses at the FBI Academy. While pursuing her education, Susan also was a full-time mother, raising three daughters, Francine, Gwen, and Alicia. During her career, Susan worked as a medical technologist, a forensic analyst, and a registered nurse. She also was employed in other positions.

In December 1990, Susan moved from Texas to Colorado Springs, where she received certification as a registered nurse, married Terry Philip Kinney, and lived for 21 years. Susan and Terry moved to Granbury, Texas, in 2011. During Susan's and Terry's marriage, they attended five different churches, the last being First Christian Church in Granbury. Susan was a faithful member of all five churches, holding various positions and working diligently at each. Susan had a deep love for Jesus and knew that He loved her.

Susan had a heart for God's people, supporting charitable works and working one-on-one with

Gloria Maria Canales

September 18, 1957 - October 4, 2024

On Oct. 4, 2024, Gloria Maria Canales was promoted to Heaven. Gloria was born on Sept. 18, 1957 in San Saba, Texas. Gloria and her husband Robert have lived in Granbury since 1987, and they raised their daughter Jennifer and son Tony here. Gloria worked for the Granbury ISD for more than 27 years, in the computer lab at Nettie Baccus Elementary, within the Human Resources Department at the Administration Building and in the Special Education Department. She retired from GISD in 2017. In these roles, Gloria positively touched many lives. Above all else, Gloria loved her family. She was a wonderful wife, and an incredible mother and grandmother. Her hobbies were many. She loved traveling, boating, bowling, karaoke, volunteering at her church and elsewhere, scrapbooking and socializing. With every encounter, she made others feel special and important, always asking them how they were doing and all about their lives. When it came to her children and grandchildren, she never missed a birthday or holiday - she was a very thoughtful and tremendous gift-giver. She will be sorely missed by her family and all who know her.

Gloria is survived by her husband, Robert Canales

Are your heirs ready to receive an inheritance?

TY ANDREW

Edward Jones Financial Adviser

In the popular imagination, receiving an inheritance always sounds like a good thing — after all, who doesn't want a financial windfall? And inheritances can certainly be life-altering events. But they can cause challenges, so you'll want to help your heirs be prepared.

To assist in this preparation, try to address some key questions affecting your heirs:

DO THEY KNOW WHAT'S IN YOUR ESTATE PLANS?

Your family and other heirs will be much better prepared to deal with an plans with everyone involved. You need to let them know the wishes and decisions you've expressed in your will and other legal arrangements, such as a living trust. Of course, sharing this information doesn't necessarily mean that all your heirs will be completely satisfied with your choices — but at least they won't be surprised, and perhaps will be less likely to cause disputes when the time comes to settle your estate.

WILL THEY KNOW WHAT TO DO WITH THE MONEY OR OTHER ASSETS?

You may be planning to leave your grown children a sizable amount of assets. possibly including cash, stocks, real estate, IRAs, 401Ks or other types of valuable personal property. But this inheritance brings with it several possible questions: Do your heirs already have an investment platform ready to accept inherited stocks? If you do leave behind rental property or a vacation home, can it be easily sold? These types of issues are generally not hard to resolve, but the more prepared your heirs are for their inheritance, the quicker they can take whatever actions are needed.

ARE THEY PREPARED TO HANDLE ANY TAXES THAT MAY RESULT FROM THE INHERITANCE?

Unless you have a very large estate, your heirs likely won't face federal estate taxes. (In 2024, the first $13.61 million of an estate is exempt from federal estate taxes.) However, other types of taxes may apply. A few states assess state inheritance taxes, and your heirs could incur federal and/or state income taxes when they withdraw money from inherited assets funded with pre-tax dollars, such as some retirement ac-

Looking at a disease that has passed, one can see what did and did not need to be done. Unfortunately, when faced with a new disease such as COVID-19 was, choices must be made to protect our people as best we can. That is what was done. None of us liked it, but we didn't want a huge number of deaths ... especially children.

Thank you Dr. Blocker for trying to protect our people and adhering to the law at that time.

Christy Massey, RN, BSN, MSN

DEAR EDITOR:

Regarding the "This is preposterous" article, I say this with all due respect and Christian love to Commissioners Eagle and Samuelson ... You must be insane! Or perhaps, simply misguided when it comes to pandemics as a whole.

First of all, I do not know Dr. Blocker or his pandemic knowledge. What I do know is that I was not around for the 1918 Flu pandemic, so I had nothing on which to base my knowledge of protection. That said, unless you were 102 in 2020, neither did you.

Yes, it was terribly inconvenient for everyone ... especially for those who died. I am certain that school children suffered from the abrupt changes to their routines.

Businesses failed and we were all scared. And FWIW, your Monday morning quarterback-ness is just idiotic. If you have a bone to pick with this fella, choose something else because this fight just makes you look foolish. There's an old adage that says "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." We, as Americans, are resilient.

And if I hurt your feelings, I apologize. That was not my intention. I was simply stunned at your take on this subject. For all those who are standing on the Constitution, screaming your brains out about having to shutter your business or wear a mask when walking outside ... You're able to do this because you are breathing.

counts. They could also face capital gains taxes when they sell inherited assets, such as stocks, for more than they were worth at the time of the inheritance. In any case, inheritance-related taxes can be complex, so you and your family and other heirs should discuss these issues with your tax advisor.

WILL THEY BE LIABLE FOR ANY OUTSTANDING EXPENSES?

If you have developed a comprehensive estate plan, it's unlikely your heirs will be on the hook for any outstanding expenses, such as credit card balances or funeral costs. If you do still carry a mortgage, though, and you are planning on leaving your house to your heirs, they may want to be prepared to act quickly to sell it.

When leaving an inheritance, there's a lot involved – emotionally, financially and legally. So, do whatever you can to make the entire process as easy as possible for your loved ones. By communicating your wishes regarding the inheritance, and by considering all the issues that may arise, you can go a long way toward achieving the outcomes you desire.

KNIEPER REALTY Do elections impact housing sales?

BY PAM KNIEPER

Pam Knieper, broker/owner of Knieper Real Estate, is and has been the #1 top producer in Hood County for more than 15 years and running. She is known as the waterfront expert and the authority on real estate.

YES ... ABSOLUTELY ... The list of things that can impact the housing market is long and sometimes exhausting, much like the campaign politics in a presidential election year. For as long as I have been a REALTOR®, the negative impact of a presidential election year has been a fact of life in real estate. Because the news surrounding the candidates and what is happening along the campaign trails affects everyone differently, it is only natural that some buyers and sellers may be wondering how elections might impact their plans to buy or sell a home right now and in the coming months. Data from the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the National Association of REALTORS® show that home sales do slow down in the months leading up to Election Day. But the good news is sales do not slow down for an extended period of time. Once the election is over home sales tend to pick back up. Research showed that for nine of the last 11 presidential elections, home sales increased the following vear regardless of which side won or lost. The two years when sales decreased following an election were in the 1980s.

Another huge factor on homebuyers' minds is where mortgage rates are going. The mortgage market has been nothing short of a roller coaster for the last four years. Rates went unbelievably low and then doubled seemingly overnight to levels we haven't seen in decades. Currently many buyers and sellers are holding back on plans and watching to see where mortgage rates are truly headed.

Reviewing data shared by Freddie Mac, a large mortgage-backing entity in America, mortgage rates decreased from July to November in eight of the last 11 election years.

This year has fallen in line with the historical research trends. Mortgage rates have decreased since the beginning of September. Many mortgage analysts are reporting they expect rates to continue to decrease in the near future. (Though no one can ever 100% accurately forecast where mortgage rates will go).

All these numbers are interesting and helpful to get some insight into how elections impact the housing market. But what is truly the best method for determining what the market is doing and how it will impact your personal decisions is to talk with a local Granbury REALTOR®.

So, give us a call and let's talk about what is going on with homes in specific neighborhoods where you are interested in purchasing a home, or how conditions and inventories in your neighborhood will impact the sale of your personal home.

LAKE GRANBURY MEDICAL CENTER Rising strokes among young adults

By Lake Granbury Medical Center

The word "stroke" may bring to mind someone elderly suffering from the condition in a movie. However, after 40 years of declining stroke-related mortality, strokes are on the rise among adults younger than 45. But before diving into why there's an uptick in the condition, it's important to know what a stroke is.

"Surprisingly to many, strokes are becoming more common in younger people," states Dr. Aaron Shaw, internal medicine physician with Lakeside Physicians, "It's important to know what a stroke is, the causes and the symptoms."

A stroke happens during disruptions in blood flow to the brain. This can be due to a clot, blockage or a blood vessel burst, leading to a brain bleed. And when the brain doesn't get enough oxygen and nutrients, brain cells die within minutes, causing permanent damage.

The most common age for strokes is 71 among men and 76 among women. However, a recent study shows a disturbing trend of increasing intracerebral hemorrhage (ICH) stroke rates in young adults. These are the second most common type of stroke but also the most deadly. ICH stroke rates are also 43% higher among men than women.

In recent years, high blood pressure rates rose from 74.5% to 86.4%, which is an important connection because hypertension increases your risk of stroke. Other ICH risk factors include being over 55, having liver disease, overuse of alcohol, smoking, using blood thinners, having a history of stroke and being African American or Asian.

Approximately 800,000 people suffer strokes yearly, and 15% are among people between 18 and 50. It's believed that the rising number of strokes in younger people is due to underlying diseases and declining health. Young people who have suffered from strokes also tend to have hypertension, diabetes or obesity.

While some genetic diseases can't be changed, maintaining a healthy weight, exercising regularly and quitting smoking can reduce the risk of stroke. It is also essential to manage medical conditions contributing to stroke risk, including stress.

If you think someone is having a stroke because they are having trouble seeing, speaking, understanding speech, seem confused, or have weakness on one side of the body, use the F.A.S.T. method of evaluation:

Face: Is one side of their face drooping?

Arms: Can the person lift both arms? Does one arm drift downward?

Speech: Is the person's speech slurred or strange? Time: Time is important. Call 9-1-1 right away.

A second chance to dance

GHS moms rally to create alternative homecoming dance following ticket shortage

BY ASHLEY TERRY

Staff Writer ashley@hcnews.com

'hen Granbury moms unite, they are unstoppable -especially when it comes to their children's happiness.

Hood County News E

After tickets to the Granbury High School homecoming dance sold out faster than a hot new smartphone, local moms swiftly stepped in to organize an alternative dance to ensure every student could join in the celebration.

Ashley Wentworth, whose son is a senior at GHS, originally posted on the Granbury Moms! Facebook page Oct. 15, when she realized her son wanted to attend the homecoming dance for the first time ever. Unfortunately, by that morning, tickets had already sold out, which left Wentworth's son and several other hopeful attendees disappointed.

"I just was reaching out saying, 'Hey, does anyone have an extra ticket?' but there were so many people looking for extras, I kind of was like, 'OK, well, that's that,'" she said.

Once Wentworth posted about the situation, she found out through other comments that only 500 tickets had been sold, due to capacity concerns regarding the cafeteria where the dance would be held.

From there, the social media post spiraled, leading to numerous complaints from students and parents who felt frustrated by the limited ticket availability. The outcry eventually led to many suggestions that an alternative dance would solve the issue and ensure that every student would be able to attend.

The suggestion sparked an idea, which led to Wentworth teaming up with parent Stacey Bridwell Connor, where they both simultaneously posted on other Facebook group like Granbury Breaking News and Hood County Breaking News, as they searched for a venue to host a separate dance. It didn't take long for both posts to gain traction, leading to an even larger discussion about the situation. One comment raised the question of why only 500 tickets were permitted, arguing that every GHS student should have the chance to attend homecoming. Others proposed holding the dance on two separate nights one for freshmen and sophomores and another for juniors and seniors.

Many comments criticized the school district for improper planning and for not holding the dance at a bigger venue to accommodate more students. Others were quick to defend, stating that students had more than enough notice to purchase their tickets and that the dance was moved indoors this year due to safety concerns.

Brianne Langdon, a culinary arts instructor at the high school, also commented on the post, confirming that students did have weeks to purchase tickets, as she encouraged students to plan ahead rather than waiting until the last minute. She also explained that safety is the school's top priority, and while the event could be held elsewhere, higher costs would make it less accessible for many students. She also touched on the rising student population and the ongoing challenges it presents to the district, as well as the amount of manpower, planning and time it takes to coordinate an event of this size.

"I promise you ... none of us are sitting around thinking about ways we can make the event crappy or less inclusive," Langdon's comment reads. "I know that it's not a perfect solution. I know that it sucks for some of the kids, but sometimes life lessons are learned best that way. All I ask is that you give us the benefit of the doubt before calling us out. We love your kids."

"I never wanted to start drama (with my post)," Wentworth told the Hood County News. "Of course, there's always drama, but I never wanted to start drama, and I didn't want the school taking any of the brunt of that. If they're doing what they can do, then that's fine. It is what it is."

Shortly after community concerns surfaced, however, GISD released a statement announcing that ticket sales were reopening and that capacity was extended.

"The GHS Homecoming Dance tickets were originally available Oct.

We will re-open online tickets to accommodate additional students who would like the opportunity to attend the dance."

t's that time of year when you need to be prepared for both cool weather and sunny hot weather. Launching in the a.m. and running down the lake can be quite cool, but as the sun rises, you'll be shedding those jackets quickly.

I don't know how many times I have folks with me who are not prepared for the weather, even if I warn them beforehand. It is a good idea to have a jacket this time of the year that will keep you warm enough for that morning run down the lake. It is also a good idea that this jacket should be waterproof/ water resistant for obvious reasons. Even if there is no rain in the forecast, you might need some protection from water spray from potential wave action. I do keep a couple of extra rain jackets in the boat just in case. They are not insulated at all, but the vinyl will break the wind for the run down the lake and they will keep your upper torso dry.

Most boats are relatively dry inside, but on occasion water will get in the boat. Some boats have self-bailing decks that on occasion will allow a small amount of water in the boat. Other days on the water, the wave action can cause water to splash into the boat. People climbing in and out of boats will also bring in water. For this reason, tennis shoes that can get wet are not the best choice on the boat. In the summer a shoe that is designed to get wet is a good idea. For the other times of the year, a good waterproof boat shoe/boot with good traction is a good idea. Having wet socks and shoes can make the day less favorable, especially if it is cold. Currently it is still fairly warm enough on most days that I still wear my shoes/sandals which are made to wade out in the water, but the time is near where I will use rubber boots when launching the boat to keep dry. Being wet when it's cold is not fun.

With these warm afternoons, don't forget the sunscreen. When on the water in the boat, you can still get burned. I believe the reflection from the water can actually be more intense than on land. The afternoons can still get pretty warm, especially if there is not any wind and we have had a bunch of days with no wind.

Bring plenty of water/fluids. Though the sun is not as intense in fall, you still need to hydrate. I know for me, I am more likely to have a headache if I don't hydrate. I know that after the day on the water is done, I am in a lot better shape if I drink plenty of fluids. It does make a difference.

It is also a good idea to have a first aid kit available on the boat. Bandages, antiseptic, aspirin/pain reliever and other items as needed. It may also be a good idea to keep the insect spray available, too. We haven't had a freeze yet and the bugs are still out.

I keep a lot of these items in the boat, but I keep many of these items in my truck. Some items, such as extra replacement batteries, sunscreen, insect spray and such I will keep in my truck tool box. If you can keep it all in the boat, that is a good thing but typically my vehicle is not out of reach if needed. If you are to venture far, it may be a good idea to put all you need on the boat.

HOOD COUNTY FISHING REPORT

Granbury water temperatures have been hovering around the middle 70s, depending on the time of the day, but will continue to cool with passing cool fronts. The lake is about 1.5 feet low and falling as we have had no rain in quite a while. The lake has turned over initially but will continue to turn as the surface cools. White bass (sand bass) are good to excellent on many areas of the lake on slabs and spinners. Lots of schooling small sand bass with some big ones mixed in. Striped bass are slow to fair to 10 pounds on live bait and trolled jigs from Blue Water

Shores to Indian Harbor. Largemouth bass are good in numbers with some good fish to 7 pounds possible. Largemouth bass are good on crankbaits and soft plastics fished in the back of sloughs near docks and near main lake points. Crappie, when located, are excellent on small jigs and minnows fished on structure from Indian Harbor to Bentwater. Catfish are good on cut shad and prepared baits. Blue catfish are fair to good with an occasional fish over 30 pounds possible

Comanche Creek (formerly Squaw Creek) continues to boast of limits of eater sized channel catfish being caught on prepared baits. Black bass are also excellent to 8 pounds on soft plastics and crankbaits with many boasting 50 plus fish a day. Tilapia, I understand, are getting big and you can catch all you want. Best bait for Tilapia continues to be worms.

Autumn delights: Cozy mysteries and giving back to the community

I think it's safe to say — it's finally here! We've all been eagerly awaiting (perhaps not so patiently) the arrival of autumn. The past two mornings have been crisp, brisk and simply beautiful. It's the perfect weather to curl up with a good book, especially a cozy mystery. Then again, I never need much of an excuse to settle in with a great read.

> ies, I have a recommendation for you — one I just finished with my book club, "How to Solve Your Own Murder" by Kristen Perrin. This mystery stands out with its intriguing premise. The main character, Frances, was given a fortune as a teen predicting her own murder. Since then, she's spent her life gathering potential evidence and motives from those closest to her, preparing for the inevitable. Fast forward 60 years — she updates her will and gathers her pos sible heirs. When they arrive at her home, they find Frances dead, and yes, she has indeed been murdered. The potential heirs are given the task of investigating her death, with a twist — the one who solves the murder will inherit her fortune. This book is available at the library and on our Libby App.

FOOD FOR FINES

We're excited to announce that Hood County Library is partnering with Mission Granbury for their annual Pantries of Plenty food drive! Our library will serve as a collection location for this important cause, and we're adding a special twist — Food for Fines!

For every nonperishable food item brought to the library, or any item from the Mission Granbury Wish List, $1 will be waived from accounts with existing fines. This applies to overdue fines and small fees related to tag or label replacements (not for lost or severely damaged books).

Bring your donations to the library, clear those fines, and help support our community in the process!

As the crisp autumn air settles in, there's no better time to indulge in a good mystery or give back to those in need. Whether you're curling up with a thrilling read like "How to Solve Your Own Murder" or dropping off donations for the Pantries of Plenty food drive, this season is all about warmth and community. Stop by the library, grab a great book, and help make a difference in Hood County — one page, and one donation, at a time.

"reach the new capacity number."

"It took us doing something like this and basically screaming from the rooftops for them to open up more tickets," Connor said. "It's like, 'Why didn't they do that in the first place?""

Connor shared that after the district reopened ticket sales, she debated on whether to proceed with plans for an alternative dance.

"I thought, 'Should we even do this since they've opened up more tickets?'" Connor reflected. "But both her (Wentworth's) son and my daughter expressed they still wanted to go to the high school dance because that's where all their friends were going to be."

She posted her uncertainty online, asking for feedback, and was surprised to receive a strong response from the community — including students — who encouraged her to continue with the dance. Initially, Connor said she was leaning toward canceling, but the support made her reconsider.

"I messaged Ashley, and I'm like, 'What do you think?' and she's like, 'Let's do it,'" Connor said.

With the help of local veteran Kolton Krottinger — who generously offered his venue, Blue Branch Historic Ranch, for students to use for free — the event was officially formed.

"I felt so overwhelmed trying to find somebody to host us, but when he (Krottinger) said that he would host, I was ecstatic," Wentworth said. "I mean, that's the best way to put that. I was so ecstatic that these kids actually get an opportunity, and we have an opportunity to help the community."

But it wasn't only Krottinger who volunteered; numerous community members stepped up to offer their time and assistance, as well.

"Without even trying, we had so many people saying, 'I can do this,' 'I can do that,' and it was, like, almost planned within a couple of hours," Connor said.

Although the event was initially scheduled for the same day as GHS's homecoming Saturday, Oct. 26, it was moved to the following weekend, Saturday, Nov. 2, and named Autumn Fling (HOCO 2.0).

"We had so many people saying, 'I'll do this, and I'll help,' and we explained to everyone that if you're coming aboard, you're doing this for free, like we have no money," Connor said, chuckling. "We're trying to get some food trucks, but it's free admission ... They (students) don't have to pay for tickets. They can spend their money on the food, so the food trucks will make the money, but that's going to be the only money exchange."

The Autumn Fling will also be open to all ninth through 12th grade students in Granbury — including students who attend Premier High School, STARS Accelerated High School, and those who are homeschooled.

"We want to include everybody, like the band students," Wentworth said. "I know that that's been mentioned several times by several different parents. We want everybody to be able to come. Inclusion is definitely something that we need to focus on in this world."

While most of the event has already been planned, some minor details are still in the works, including a DJ and some local vendors.

"If people can just come together a little bit more and help us, I mean, I think that it would go off without a hitch," Wentworth said. "And you know what? You never know. Maybe we could do this every year. Make it a Hood County Autumn Fling or a Granbury Autumn Fling."

"If 50 kids show up, it was a success," Connor said. "If 500 show up, fantastic, but if there's only 50, I still think it will be a success, because 50 kids would get to have fun." Wentworth said the entire event is driven by a desire to create meaningful experiences for students — especially for those who have never attended homecoming before.

"I didn't expect it to really go anywhere, but I just want these kids to have fun and make memories," she said. "Because as I've always been told, making memories is number one."

As Connor and Wentworth have ultimately proven, the incredible power of moms joining forces is evidence enough that with determination and community support, anything is possible.

"Get a bunch of moms together, and this is what happens," Connor added, with a chuckle.

The Autumn Fling (HOCO 2.0) will take place at 6 p.m., Saturday, Nov. 2, at 2811 Clay St. near Lipan at Krottinger's Blue Branch Historic Ranch — home of Anxiety Solutions of America. Students are encouraged to "dress up or down" for the event.

No bouncing around it, Owens leaves legacy with Rattlers

Drake Owens of the Tolar Rattlers hauls in a catch. Owens, a senior, is a multi-position standout on both offense and defense.

Tolar linebacker Drake Owens (33) brings down an opposing ballcarrier. He has over 250 tackles in his career, including over 17 for a loss.

Drake Owens' path to playing football was a vertical one.

"Me and my brothers growing up, we'd like to get on the trampoline and tackle each other," Drake said, adding with a laugh, "We went through a couple of trampolines."

They've also gone through quite a few opponents en route to being a part of arguably the most successful span in the history of Tolar Rattlers football. Blake, who graduated in 2023, left his mark and now Drake, a senior, is doing the same.

"I miss playing with him every second," said Drake, adding that Blake, who now works at the nuclear power plant in Glen Rose, tries to be in attendance at every home game to see his little brother shine.

"Even when we were in peewee, I'd play up so we could play together," Drake said. They have a young brother, Ty, who is in eighth grade and also plays football.

KNACK FOR THE BALL

Wherever the football is, there's a good chance you might find Drake. As a linebacker this season he has 61 tackles, including 4.5 for a loss, a sack with an interception and two fumble recoveries.

For his high school career — he's been on varsity all four seasons — he has 258 tackles, of which 17.5 have gone for a loss, with five sacks, six interceptions and six fumble recoveries.

"I always just swarm to the guy with the ball. Nothing matters but the guy with the ball," he said, adding about interceptions, "You read the quarterback's eyes. You try to put yourself in his head."

Often, however, he's the guy with the ball. In his career he has 29 catches for 411 yards and five touchdowns, including a career best of 12 catches, 251 yards and two TD this season. "I'm getting a fow more

"I'm getting a few more chances this season. Sevenon-7 definitely helps with all the route running," Drake said.

Then he added, "If I had to truly pick one I'd go defense because I like to hit."

LEADERSHIP

First-year Rattlers head coach Blake Mouser praised Drake for being the kind of leader any new coach loves to inherit when he takes over a program.

"As much success as he's had, he's a well-rounded kid with great parents at home," Mouser said. "He comes from a really good family.

"He takes a lot of pride in what he's done. He's one of the best I've been around."

Mouser said Drake is exactly what a coach wants in a senior.

"One of the things I'm really proud of is the way he's led as a senior," Mouser said. "Between the whistles he's still a mad man, and he's a leader. He takes care of his friends."

MULTI-SPORT SUCCESS

In football, Drake was named the district defensive MVP last season, along with being named secondteam all-state by the Texas Sports Writers Association. However, he's also a standout in baseball, like his father, who played at Texas Wesleyan University, and his grandfather, a former minor league professional player. Drake began playing baseball when he was around 4 years old. However, don't ask him to choose between the two sports.

"I get asked that a lot," he said, smiling. "For me, it's whatever sport is in season."

Mouser, who also grew up in a small town, understands Drake's passion for more than a single sport.

"I got to play everything growing up," Mouser said. "And that would have been my answer.

"Play it until they tell you you can't."

Wakey wakey: How people got up before the buzz of alarm clocks

BY MICKY SHEARON

Special to the Hood County News micky@hcnews.com

Before the delightful sound of an iPhone blaring in your ear at 6:30 a.m., people had to get a little more creative about waking up on time. Turns out, our ancestors were just as desperate to avoid oversleeping, but without the sweet mercy of a "snooze" button. From nature's subtle nudges to downright quirky inventions, let's explore the fascinating — and often bizarre — ways people dragged themselves out of bed before the invention of alarm clocks.

NATURE'S ALARM CLOCK: BLADDER EDITION

Let's start with a method that most of us can still relate to: the good ol' bladder alarm. In the days before mechanical clocks and electricity, people were more in tune with their natural rhythms, largely thanks to their circadian cycles. But, beyond nature's rhythms, there was the undeniable nudge from biology itself. Back then, many relied on their need to use the restroom as a surefire wake-up call. Forget 7 a.m., when your bladder was full, it was time to rise and shine — whether you liked it or not.

THE GREEKS WERE WHISTLING

But some people wanted a more reliable way to wake up than just waiting for the bladder to send a memo. Enter the ancient Greeks, always ahead of their time. They invented a water-based alarm system called the clepsydra, which was as fancy as it sounds. Essentially, it was a water clock that, after a certain amount of time, would whistle as the water reached a specific level. Imagine your morning starting with a soothing (or probably shrill) whistle — though maybe not as effective as today's "Beep! Beep! Beep!" Still, not bad for ancient Greece.

YI XING'S TIMELY INVENTION

Meanwhile, in 8th-century China, the mathematician Yi Xing was perfecting one of the earliest mechanical clocks. His invention, built in 725 CE, was no pocket-sized gadget, but it did the job. It was a massive water-powered contraption that triggered gongs to signal the time. Let's be real: who wouldn't wake up to a massive gong sound echoing through their home? Subtlety was clearly not the goal here.

KNOCK KNOCK! IT'S TIME TO GET UP!

Fast forward to the industrial era, and things got even more interesting with the rise of "knocker-uppers" in England. You heard that right — actual people whose job was to wake up their neighbors. Armed with long sticks, they'd tap on bedroom windows until the unfortunate soul inside stirred. It's unclear how knocker-uppers managed to wake themselves up first, but hey, that's just one of life's mysteries. The practice was surprisingly widespread, with some people relying on it well into the 1970s. Because, why let an alarm clock do the work when you can pay someone to poke at your window every morning?

For those living on upper floors, don't worry — the knocker-uppers had longer sticks. That's right, a professional with a six-foot pole

At 34, O'Neill's life began crumbling even faster — a 1983 UPI Archives article regarding the star stated, "The last eight months have been filled with plenty of bad luck.'

The report indicated that "O'Neill was driving her BMW when she lost control on wet pavement and collided with another vehicle, resulting in neck pain."

In that same period, she accidentally shot herself in the stomach with her unlicensed .38 caliber pistol, leading to charges of illegal possession with her husband, John Lederer. After pleading guilty in March that year, she received a conditional discharge. Shortly after, her husband accidentally slashed himself, requiring stitches.

The UPI article notes O'Neill also experienced fainting spells, prompting a hospital visit for tests. Amid these challenges, she struggled to sell her 22-room mansion, hindered by negative publicity. Rumors of marital issues had surfaced, and her NBC-TV series, "Bare Essence," was canceled after less than six months.

A recent article by Leonora Cravotta for The American Spectator revealed that O'Neill, who made more than 30 films, was blackballed in Hollywood after she found her faith.

"I was 38 when I came to God," she told the Times-Union, although she admits wanting to be the driving force in all outcomes and decisions, which led her to write a book, "From Fallen to Forgiven."

In a live interview on Pastor Allen Jackson's Culture and Christianity Podcast, O'Neill recounts an appearance on "The View," where she was attacked for her pro-life stance.

She explained that after discussing her "born again" experience on various shows, she took her pastor's advice and committed to years of Bible study before publicly speaking out again.

O'Neill's exploration of apologetics laid the foundation for her ministry efforts, including women's conferences and writing projects — she has authored over 20 books. She expressed that true peace only came after embracing Christ.

Recognizing her relationships often influenced her career decisions — according to IMDB.com — she famously stated, "My need for love owned me." Her journey toward healing and self-forgiveness is a central theme in her autobiographies.

O'Neill emphasized the importance of letting go of guilt and embracing forgiveness, particularly in her involvement with organizations like Silent No More, which aids women recovering from the trauma of abortion.

Today, O'Neill is a motivational speaker and a devoted advocate for faith-based initiatives. Through her nonprofit organization, Hope and Healing at Hillenglade, in Tennessee, she has provided equine-assisted therapy to veterans and first responders dealing with PTSD since 2010, reports Cristina Corbin for Fox News.

In the recently released movie "Reagan", O'Neill portrays Ronald Reagan's mother, who significantly influenced her son's faith and values. Reagan's use of his mother's Bible during his inauguration is noteworthy, O'Neill explained to Jackson, highlighting the relevance of 2 Chronicles 7:14 in today's culture and drawing parallels between the moral challenges of Reagan's time and those faced today. O'Neill's story exemplifies

O'Neill's story exemplifies how faith can guide individuals through life's darkest moments and lead them toward a fulfilling purpose, echoing Khalil Gibran's words: "Out of suffering have emerged the strongest souls; the most massive characters are seared with scars."

As she prepares for her event Nov. 3, O'Neill continues to inspire others to seek healing, hope and a deeper connection with God. The gathering will feature local leaders, praise, worship and fellowship, uniting the community as one body of believers. Attendees will come together in prayer for repentance, restitution, refreshing and revival in the nation as they seek to honor the Lord and His name.

Tarleton State University

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — Tarleton State Volleyball earned its first conference win Thursday, Oct. 17 against California Baptist. The Texans notched their first win in Riverside and extended their win streak to two matches against the Lancers.

Lady Rattlers move into tie for district VB lead Lady Pirates positioning for playoffs

BY RICK MAUCH

Special to the Hood County News

The Tolar Lady Rattlers (27-9, 11-1 in District 8-3A) are closing in on their first district championship since 2021 — or at least a share. It would also be their first title at the Class 3A level.

The Lady Rattlers won 3-0 at Eastland Oct. 18 before returning home to win one of the biggest regular season matches in program history, topping perennial power Peaster 3-2 to move into a tie for the district lead.

It's the second thrilling match this season against the Lady Greyhounds, ranked 18th in the state in Class 3A by the Texas Girls Coaches Association. Tolar fell 3-2 in Peaster Sept. 27.

"It was such a good match," first-year Tolar coach Amber Terrell said.

The Lady Rattlers overcame an 8-2 deficit in Game 5 to win 17-15. Tolar also rallied to win Game 4 by a 25-21 score to force a fifth game.

Tolar won the first game 25-22 before Peaster took the next two 28-26 and 25-20.

Standout against Eastland was Sophia Walters with sevPeaster finish tied for the district championship, if the teams will play a third time or flip a coin. Either way, Terrell said Peaster will enter the playoffs as the top seed from the league for Division I (large 3A) and Tolar will be the top seed for Division II (small 3A).

GRANBURY VOLLEYBALL

The Lady Pirates (24-19, 7-3 in District 5-5A), having wrapped up a playoff berth, had a bye Oct. 18 and defeated visiting Saginaw 3-0 Oct. 22. Now they are positioning themselves for playoff seeding as the regular season winds down.

Following Tuesday, Granbury and Chisholm Trail were tied for second place in district behind league champion Aledo and a game ahead of fourth-place Azle. The Lady Pirates were hosting Azle at press time and finish the regular season at Brewer Oct. 29 at 6 p.m.

GRACE CLASSICAL FOOTBALL

The Gryphons (1-6 at press time) are hoping for another late-season surge following a 77-53 home loss to Azle Christian Oct. 18. They were hosting Brownsville Harvest Christian (2-4 at press time) and travel to Temple Centex Homeschool (1-5 at press time) Nov. 1 at 7:30 p.m.

Premier of Lost in Texas Music Festival to debut new artists

BY LAUREN DAVIS

Staff Writer lauren@hcnews.com

Laramie Rhodes Hargrove, who goes by the name of Rhodes, is a passionate musician advocate making waves in the Texas music scene with her new venture, the Lost in Texas Music Festival, so named for its vastness.

Scheduled for Nov. 2 at Granbury's Reunion Grounds, the festival aims to provide a platform for emerging artists while featuring headliners like Wade Bowen and Dylan Wheeler.

"These younger artists will perform before the headliners, allowing them to showcase their talent to a crowd that might not know them yet," said Rhodes, president of Rhodes Entertainment Group.

The festival is not just a launchpad for artists; it reflects

Harvest Moon Festival of the Arts takes place Oct. 26-27. The 46-year-old festival offers a weekend full of activities on Granbury's historic square.

One of Granbury's most beloved events transpires this weekend with the Harvest Moon Festival of the Arts Saturday and Sunday Oct. 26-27 on Granbury's Historic square.

This year's event includes more than 100 artists from all over the country. Crowds come for miles to celebrate fine art and fine art craft, and to enjoy the somewhat cooler temperatures.

HISTORY

In the decades since its inception, the festival has gone through many changes. Previous to the Harvest Moon Festival of the Arts was the 1974 Harvest Festival sponsored by the Bicentennial Commission to support its plans for the Bicentennial Celebration of 1976. The celebration included booths and barbeque.

In 1978 the first Harvest of the Arts Festival was celebrated. In 1988 the county celebrated the 10th annual Harvest of the Arts, sponsored by the Hood County Arts Council — one of at least three arts councils the county saw over the years.

The event was inherited by the Historic Granbury Merchants Association. By the 1990s the event was renamed The Harvest Moon Festival of the Arts.

The Harvest of the Arts/ Harvest Moon Festival of the Arts of earlier decades included children's art, featured artists and demonstrations, visiting book authors and book signings, scarecrow decorating contests, decorated pumpkin contests, tractor shows and races, light plant displays, country food contest and a harvest moon dance.

For some years, the vision of an event focused on fine art seemed to be lost. The 2000s brought more art tourism to Granbury and a return to a celebration of fine art and fine art craft at the Harvest Moon Festival of the Arts. Artists would then be required to submit images of their work to be considered; this helped to maintain the high quality we see today.

TODAY

Granbury saw the fruition of the work of many people over many years in establishing Granbury as a destination for art tourism, and the Harvest Moon Festival of the Arts was part of that grass roots movement. The event is now sponsored by the Historic Merchants Association in partnership with Visit Granbury and the Granbury Arts Alliance.

In 2023 during the Harvest Moon Festival, Granbury received a designation from the Texas Commission on the Arts for its Cultural Arts District. Cultural districts are designated zones that harness cultural resources to stimulate economic growth and community vitality.

"We are so excited for the 46th Annual Harvest Moon Festival of the Arts which is a vibrant celebration that showcases the incredible talents of over 100 juried artists circling around the beautiful Granbury Square. This festival not only highlights a diverse range of artistic expressions, but also fosters a sense of community and appreciation for creativity, making it a mustvisit event for art lovers and enthusiasts alike," shared Cheshe Langford, president of the Historical Granbury Merchants Association.

Visitors to the event look forward to the yearly tradition of the Harvest Moon year after year. Some art patrons have specific booths they look forward to visiting.

"Granbury Arts Alliance has our longstanding tradition of selling our 'moons' that are painted by local artists and art students. These moons are collected by many year after year. We

Gobble Give: CenterPoint Church offers Thanksgiving hope to families in need

BY LAUREN DAVIS Staff Writer lauren@hcnews.com

As Thanksgiving approaches, Granbury's CenterPoint Church is preparing to brighten the holiday for local families with its annual initiative, Gobble Give.

Reservations can be made by calling or texting the church office, and the deadline is Nov. 7. Families can pick up their boxes Nov. 23 from 1 to 5 p.m.

The Gobble Give program, launched in 2019, provides families in need with everything they require for a traditional Thanksgiving meal, emphasizing togetherness and community spirit.

Pastor Kevin Spencer, leader of CenterPoint Church, explained the mission behind Gobble Give. "We wanted to package everything so that a family could go home and cook their Thanksgiving meal to enjoy as a family."

Each Gobble Give box feeds up to six people and contains a whole turkey, stuffing mix, potatoes, gravy, corn, green beans, mac and cheese, rolls, cranberry sauce, fruit cocktail and brownie mix — everything needed for a festive feast and a chance to create holiday memories around the dinner table.

The initiative is designed to assist families struggling during the holiday season. "We ask people if they feel like they're in need that year or know someone who could use the meal to reserve a box," Spencer stated.

Over the years, Gobble Give has gained traction in the community. "The response has been encouraging," Spencer shared. "As word spreads, we've seen a growing number of families participate each year."

Community involvement is a vital part of the program. Local businesses, including HEB and Home Depot, have partnered with CenterPoint Church to support the initia-

Why we all need a little Great Pumpkin in our Halloween

BY MICKY SHEARON Special to the Hood County News micky@hcnews.com

As the crisp air settles in and the leaves crunch beneath our feet, we know that fall has officially arrived. For me, fall isn't just about pumpkin-spiced everything or the allure of cozy sweaters — it's about one iconic Halloween tradition: watching "It's The Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown."

This 1966 animated classic, featuring the beloved Peanuts gang, has become a staple of Halloween nostalgia. No matter how many new Halloween movies come out, from slasher flicks to feel-good family films, there's something special about the quiet charm and simplicity of this cartoon that brings a smile to my face every October.

LINUS AND HIS UNDYING FAITH IN THE GREAT PUMPKIN

The heart of the story centers around Linus, the blanket-toting philosopher of the Peanuts gang, and his passionate belief in the Great Pumpkin. While most kids his age are gearing up to collect mountains of candy, Linus takes a different path. He spends Halloween night sitting in a pumpkin patch, waiting for the Great Pumpkin to rise and bring toys to all the good boys and girls.

Is Linus delusional? Perhaps. But there's something undeniably charming about his unwavering faith in the unseen. As adults, we often lose that sense of wonder, so it's refreshing to see someone so committed to believing in magic — even if it's just a pumpkin deity that never shows up.

Of course, his friends and even his own sister, Lucy, think he's out of his gourd (pun intended). While the other kids are gleefully collecting candy, Linus remains steadfast in the pumpkin patch, missing all the action. This blend of innocent hope and comedic disappointment makes Linus a character we can't help but root for. And who among us can't relate to getting our hopes up, only to be met with crushing disappointment when reality sets in?

CHARLIE BROWN'S INFA-MOUS HALLOWEEN WOES

Meanwhile, poor Charlie Brown is dealing with his own misfortunes, as usual. His Halloween costume — a classic ghost sheet with far too many eye holes — ends up earning him nothing but rocks. Yes, rocks. Every single house he visits rewards him with a rock instead of candy, because, apparently, the universe just loves to pick on Charlie Brown.

As a kid, I couldn't help but feel bad for him. As an adult, I still do, but I also can't stop laughing. There's something about Charlie Brown's perpetual bad luck that manages to be both tragic and hilarious at the same time. His simple "I got a rock" is a line that never fails to get a chuckle, even decades later.

And let's not forget Lucy, who, despite her often bossy and self-centered ways, shows a flicker of kindness at the end of the night. She wakes up in the early hours to drag Linus back home after his long (and ultimately fruitless) wait for the Great Pumpkin. It's a subtle reminder that, at the end of the day, even bossy older sisters have a heart.

THE MUSIC, THE MAGIC, THE MEMORIES

Another thing that makes "It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown" so unique is its iconic music, composed by jazz pianist Vince Guaraldi. That cheerful, bouncy piano melody is instantly recognizable and adds to the lighthearted, whimsical tone of the special. There's something soothing about the soundtrack, which feels like the auditory equivalent of a warm blanket on a chilly fall evening.

Watching "The Great Pumpkin" is like returning to a simpler time, when Halloween was all about carving pumpkins, bobbing for apples, and wearing your mom's hastily throwntogether costume (which usually consisted of cutting two eye holes in an old sheet, just like Charlie Brown's). It reminds us that Halloween doesn't have to be scary or extravagant to be fun — it can be about silly traditions, childlike wonder, and, yes, a little bit of candy (hopefully not rocks, though).

WHY IT STILL RESONATES

So why has "It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown" stood the test of time? I think it's because the Peanuts gang, with all its quirks and flaws, feels timeless. We've all known a Linus, who's a little too idealistic for his own good, or a Charlie Brown, whose well-meaning efforts always seem to fall short. We see ourselves in these characters and laugh because, deep down, we know that life is a little like trick-or-treating: sometimes you get the candy, and sometimes you get a rock.

As I settle in with my blanket, a cup of hot cider, and "It's The Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown" playing on TV, I'm reminded of why this special is so dear to my heart. It's more than just an animated show — it's a celebration of childhood, of hope, and of the magic we carry with us, even into adulthood. Linus may never meet the Great Pumpkin, but for the rest of us, the joy of revisiting this classic every Halloween is enough to keep the magic alive.

across Texas.

The friendly, relaxed vibe at the Reunion Grounds, with its indoor and outdoor rodeo arena, makes it a perfect place for new artists to connect with fans and showcase their music.

The venue has plenty of open areas for stages and seating, surrounded by green trees and lovely views of picturesque Lake Granbury.

Attendees will have an opportunity to bid on a piece of music history while supporting local education. Rhodes will auction off a wrapped guitar, signed by all the artists performing at the event. Proceeds will go to the Granbury Education Foundation.

There will be many food trucks and an assortment of retail vendors so people can enjoy a fun festival atmosphere.

CONNECTING ARTISTS AND FANS

Rhodes hopes to connect artists with audiences across Texas. "I want to help artists gain fans in every part of Texas. I'm not an agent," she stated. "It's about creating a network and a community, and my superpower is networking." Rhodes is well-connected in the music industry — not only in Texas but Nashville as well.

Rhodes assisted 14-yearold Alabama musician Maddox Batson after discovering him during a live online jam session with his dad. Captivated by their performance, she suggested Maddox perform in Texas.

Despite the challenges of booking a 12-year-old from another state, Rhodes made it happen. Since then, amassing over 2 million TikTok followers, selling out shows across the U.S., and signing with two major agencies.

"This time next year, I hope to be back in Granbury doing the second annual," Rhodes adds, "But really, I plan on doing one festival a quarter in each part of the regions of Texas."

Her extensive networking skills and unwavering dedication position her to significantly impact the Texas music landscape for performers and music lovers alike.

MUSIC IN HER BLOOD

Music runs deep in Rhodes' family. Her grandfather, Leon Rhodes, is a legendary self-taught guitarist who played with icons like George Strait, Dolly Parton, Willie Nelson and more.

His dedication to music began as a child, watching his older brothers play the guitar. In a vintage video interview with Leon Rhodes upon his induction into the Nashville Hall of Fame as a "Nashville Cat," he explained that at just 17, he sold his bed to buy a guitar when his father couldn't afford one, and the rest, as they say, is history.

Fiercely determined not to let opportunities pass by, especially for the artists she works with, Laramie Rhodes says she didn't inherit her grandfather's musical talent. However, she has a keen ear and sharp eye for spotting potential in others — like a talent scout.

IMPORTANT OPPORTUNITIES

Laramie Rhodes shared that her grandfather was playing a gig with Ernest Tubb and the Texas Troubadours. "Elvis apBut Leon Rhodes was loyal to Tubb and would chuckle recounting the story of an invitation from the King of Rock' n Roll.

"My grandfather turned down the offer, telling Elvis, 'Son, you'll never be as big as Ernest Tubb," Laramie Rhodes said, noting his decision occasionally left him pondering the "what ifs" of his choice.

Inspired by this story, Laramie Rhodes is committed to creating opportunities for aspiring artists and providing the support they need to succeed.

A SWEET START

Her journey into the music industry began unexpectedly while working as a bartender at the Sweetwater Grill. "They are really big and largely known for live music — usually every night of the week," Rhodes said. She discovered her passion for artist development after witnessing the challenges musicians faced.

"I would guide artists who know they can sing or play but need the tools and resources to thrive," she explained.

In 2015, Rhodes forged a fortuitous friendship with entertainment marketer Charlie Diggs, known for organizing up to 18 festivals a year and his commitment to giving back to the community. "Charlie basically taught me everything I know about festivals," Rhodes said.

Fast forward several years, and her experiences led her to create the Rhodes Entertainment Group, a platform that empowers fresh talent.

ial spirit shines through in her plans for Rhodes Entertainment Group, which she envisions as a comprehensive resource for artists. From marketing and branding to booking and social media management, her goal is to provide aspiring musicians with everything they need to navigate the industry successfully.

As a mother of two, Rhodes balances her business aspirations with family life, drawing inspiration from her children's interests. "My daughter has a natural singing ability, and I'm keenly aware of the challenges of the music industry," she shared. "I want to guide her and other artists away from the pitfalls I've seen."

Diggs partnering with Rhodes for The Lost in Texas Music Festival represents the culmination of her efforts thus far to showcase talented newcomers alongside established acts.

Rhodes encourages music lovers to attend and support the next generation of artists making their mark in the industry. With this festival, she looks forward to embarking on an exciting journey for herself, the artists she supports, and music lovers everywhere.

Blue Horse Sanctuary open house

From Staff Reports

The Blue Horse Sanctuary will greet visitors for an open house Saturday, Nov. 9 from noon to 4 p.m. The sanctuary was founded by Mel Auberty on her family's ranch near Chalk Mountain in 2015. Auberty is also an equine artist. There will be a raffle for a chance to win an Auberty print, and prints will be available for purchase. Auberty has rescued 34 horses to date, as well as 14 donkeys. Working with Bluebonnet Equine Humane Society, law enforcement, and individuals who can no longer keep their horses or donkeys, the sanctuary gives a forever home to the injured, elderly and unwanted.

Featured at the open house will be renowned natural horsemanship trainer Michael Battenfield of Gorman at 1:30 p.m. At 2:30 p.m., Battenfield's daughter Brooklyn will display her skills in teaching as she uses body language to direct her horse without the use of a halter.

There will be opportunity

Spices of the season: Hidden histories of fall's favorites

BY MICKY SHEARON

Special to the Hood County News micky@hcnews.com

As the air turns crisp and the days grow shorter, many of us reach for familiar spices like cinnamon, nutmeg and the ever-popular pumpkin spice to enhance our meals and drinks. These warming flavors are synonymous with fall, but did you know they carry a rich and fascinating history that spans centuries and continents? From guarded secrets to global trade, here are seven surprising facts about the spices that make autumn so irresistible.

1. Pumpkin spice: An American tradition with colonial roots

Pumpkin spice may seem like a modern craze, but its history goes all the way back to America's colonial days. In fact, the first known recipes for pumpkin pie, flavored with a mix of nutmeg, ginger and allspice, appeared in Amelia Simmons' American Cookery, published in 1796. The nowiconic spice blend gained even more popularity when canned pumpkin puree hit the market in 1929, and by 1934, McCormick had released its own version of pumpkin pie spice — a combination of cinnamon, ginger, nutmeg and allspice that remains unchanged to this day.

2. Cinnamon: A spice once wrapped in myth

Cinnamon is beloved for adding a cozy sweetness to everything from desserts to beverages, but its origins were once shrouded in mystery. Ancient spice traders spun elaborate tales, claiming that cinnamon was harvested from trees guarded by dangerous creatures, a story designed to inflate the spice's value. The truth? Cinnamon comes from the bark of Cinnamomum trees native to India, Sri Lanka and Myanmar. This valuable spice remained a closely guarded secret for centuries, fetching high prices on the international market.

3. Cloves: The original ancient breath freshener

Long before chewing gum or mints, cloves were used as a remedy for bad breath. In ancient China, visitors to the emperor's court would chew on cloves to ensure fresh breath before an audience with royalty. These aromatic flower buds, harvested from the Syzygium aromaticum tree, were also prized in Europe during the Middle Ages. Spice traders went to great lengths to maintain their monopoly on the clove trade, destroying trees to control supply. Today, cloves are still used in many fall recipes, adding warmth to dishes like pumpkin pie and spice cake.

4. Ginger: The cultivated cure-all

Ginger, a spicy root known for its medicinal properties, has been cherished for over 2,500 years. While it can ease nausea and digestive issues, ginger's legend grew out of proportion in medieval times when it was believed to cure the plague. Interestingly, ginger does not exist in the wild; it is a "cultigen," meaning early humans cultivated and bred it from its ancestral plants until it became the ginger we know today. This root eventually made its way to Europe, where it became a favorite of Queen Elizabeth I, who is credited with inventing gingerbread men.

5. Cardamom: A Nordic favorite

Though cardamom is native to India and is a staple in Indian cuisine, it has an unexpected fan base in Scandinavia. Norway and Sweden are among the world's biggest consumers of this spice, using it to flavor everything from sweet buns to traditional holiday drinks like glögg. Historians speculate that Vikings may have introduced cardamom to Scandinavia between the eighth and 13th centuries, and the spice has since become a key ingredient in many Nordic winter recipes.

6. Nutmeg: Once as valuable as gold

Today, nutmeg is a common addition to fall dishes, but centuries ago, it was a luxury spice worth its weight in gold. Native to Indonesia's Banda Islands, nutmeg was first cultivated over 3,500 years ago. By the 14th century, it was highly prized across Europe, so much so that wealthy individuals carried personal nutmeg graters to season their food on the go. While it's no longer reserved for the elite, nutmeg remains a quintessential spice for fall treats like pies and warm drinks.

7. Allspice: One spice, many flavors

Despite its name, allspice is not a blend of spices but a single dried berry from the Pimenta dioica tree, native to the West Indies. The spice earned its name because its flavor is reminiscent of a mix of cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves. First brought to Europe in the 17th century, allspice quickly became popular in both sweet and savory dishes. Today, it's a staple of autumnal favorites such as apple cider and spiced wine.

These fall spices, whether used to enhance the flavor of pies, cakes or warm drinks, carry centuries of history and tradition with them. As you enjoy your favorite fall recipes, you're also partaking in a legacy of trade, discovery, and culinary innovation that has shaped the way we flavor the season.

have the Coates Art Exhibition as well. Visitors can hop on the trolley to ride from the conference center to downtown and even to Shanley to see LGAA's art show. It's a big weekend of art in Granbury," said Teresa Houston, president of the Granbury Arts Alliance.

It seems the goal of becoming an art tourist destination has come to fruition as the festival adds not only value to the community but a draw for tourists to visit Granbury.

"Events like the Harvest Moon Festival power Granbury's tourism economy. Tourism is Granbury's number one industry. The added benefit of a festival dedicated to the arts really propels it to another level.

"The City of Granbury supports new events, and the growth of existing events by providing support through Visit Granbury. As the official 'Celebration Capital of Texas' and now the Cultural District Designation, it really showcases the level of commitment to art and our community provided from the City of Granbury/ Visit Granbury," said Tammy Dooley, director of Visit Granbury. Though the activities have changed over the years, the festival continues to provide education, entertainment and opportunities for patrons to meet artists.

Volunteers are always needed on distribution day, and interested individuals can contact the church office for more information.

Beyond providing meals, Gobble Give aims to create a supportive environment. Spencer noted that teams from the church are available to offer prayer and emotional support for those who seek it. "It's primarily about meeting the physical need, but we're also here for everything else," he explained.

The church is also working to reach families with schoolaged children. "We want to be more effective at getting the word out and ensuring that those who need help can access it," Spencer said.

The impact of Gobble Give is evident in the gratitude expressed by families who have benefited from the program in the past. Spencer shared, "Every year, there's always that one person that stands out. They come in on two wheels, and they had forgotten or didn't have a way to get their box ... all of their life circumstances seem to be going against them, and you're able to help them. "They're so thankful. They're so appreciative. They say, 'Thank you,' and you realize how much this means to them," Spencer explains. "There's always that moment where you have a volunteer who says, 'That was the one. If it was just one family that I came to do this for, that was the one.'"

These moments remind volunteers and church members of the difference they are making in the community.

FULL CIRCLE

"We have families that are here and attend now because of Gobble Give, or they came one year and received a box, and then they'll call us and say, 'Hey, when is Gobble Give?" Spencer said.

"They often call to ask when Gobble Give is happening, excited to pay for a box or help out as volunteers. One person explained, 'You guys helped me when I was in need, and now I want to make sure others get that same support" he said. "It's touching to see how someone can come full circle, moving from receiving help to giving it back, showing how much it means to them."

THE IDLE AMERICAN Hope, Highways and Byways

BY DON NEWBURY

Dr. Newbury, longtime university president, continues to speak and write. The Idle American, begun in 2003, is Texas' longestrunning syndicated column. Contact: 817-447-3872. Email: newbury@speakerdoc.com. Website: www.speakerdoc.com.

Bob Hope, beloved humanitarian, comedian and patriot, may have been America's best ambassador of international goodwill — ever. He was able to "localize" his jokes and stories no matter where he appeared.

Always on the road, this British-born icon became a naturalized American at age 4. He spent some 80 of his 100 years starring in vaudeville, on Broadway, in movies with Bing Crosby, and on both radio and TV. Little wonder he received more than 2,000 significant awards, including 54 honorary doctoral degrees from universities, but - sadly never an Oscar. He spent most Christmases on the road entertaining military personnel, often in war-torn places. Remembrances of this masterful entertainer make us smile. We are thankful for the memories ..

Hope was a frequent visitor to Texas, where he always had jokes — new, clean, clever and localized. He once said of West Texas: "Miles and miles of nothing but miles and miles.' He joked that if the snow ever melted in Alaska, Texas would again be the biggest state.

My guess is that he (and his writers) keenly watched for joke ideas. They probably even took notes from the many Burma-Shave sign ditties once nailed to fenceposts across the nation. Maybe they also found material on iconic Route 66, America's "main street."

We so need Hope in these strife-pocked times.

We could use some Burma-Shave signs, too. And, how about some clean TV ads, like the late Clara Peller taking Wendy's to task about the beef location?

Instead, we get smutty innuendo ads, some by national companies that should know better ...

What little humor remains often is found on bumper stickers. Some have religious overtones, including one spotted on a rear bumper in heavy traffic. In small lettering, it asked, "Are You This Close to Jesus?" Another on a "five o'clock freeway" said:

"Jesus Would Let Me Merge." Admittedly, some are at the other end of the propriety spectrum. A couple appeared on trucks hauling sewage.

One identified its company, "Duty Calls." The other warned: "Back Off. We Ain't Haulin' Whipped Cream."

Then, there are real life situations involving churches AND, uh, sewage, in want of a better word.

I learned about one recently while addressing a senior adult luncheon in Bono, a tiny Johnson County community few people pass through on the way to town. Parishioners defused a recent "duck problem," and are at the ready to take on a nearby buffalo should it decide to storm a fence, looking for greener grass on the other side ...

A while back, ducks owned by a grandmotherly lady nearby took to meandering on the church yard.

Some days, uh, "duty" called, leaving church grounds untidy, fouled by the fowls. Bono folks practiced The Golden Rule concerning the issue. The duck owner was immediately sympathetic, positively responding in a manner akin to Granny on "The Beverly Hillbillies".

She cut to the chase, issuing terse instructions in a note on the front door of the church should the annoyance continue: "Shoot 'em." This little church, serving a picturesque rural area since 1876, is now "duckless," and no shots have been fired. Spotting the buffalo on my drive home, I sang, "Oh give me a home, where the buffalo roam, and the deer and the antelope play." ...

Now, with the election at hand, let's all exhale. Look for reasons to smile, even if we have to watch old Bob Hope re-runs, chuckle at dozens of old Burma-Shave ditties on its website or simply think of "what ifs," such as ducks learning hard lessons about trespassing.

Still another "what if" concerns Valley Ranch, home of the Dallas Cowboys, where there is said to be a buck that moves about aimlessly, but never stops.

It was Dallas columnist/author/speaker Dave Lieber's line: "God absolutely does NOT answer every prayer. Jerry Jones still owns the Dallas Cowboys." ...

VETERAN'S VOICE Pecan Valley launches veterans peer support group

BY LINDA MALLON

Linda Mallon, a retired Army master sergeant, found her niche working with veterans and their families in Granbury. She is a former claims administrator for Blue Shield of New Jersey and later senior personnel sergeant, taking care of soldiers' careers for more than 20 years. linda. mallon@co.hood.tx.us | 817-579-3292

Jeffrey Harz, veteran service coordinator at Pecan Valley Centers for Behavioral and Developmental Healthcare, notified us recently he is hosting a weekly Veterans Peer Support Group meeting covering new topics of discussion relevant to our veteran community. This is an excellent opportunity to get together and meet other veterans and connect with resources they can use or share.

Although we have a number of service organizations here in Hood and Somervell County, this group offers veterans a weekly meeting to learn what Pecan Valley Centers is all about, work with its peer support staff and enjoy the camaraderie that comes with having served in the military. For more information, contact Pecan Valley Centers peer support line at 817-579-4489 ext. 3 or you may email

Jeffrey at jharz@pacanvalley.org. Pecan Valley Centers Veterans Peer Support is known for its grant to help with mental health care, drug and alcohol recovery, financial hardship and referrals but it is also a place to get to know other veterans, network and share life hacks veterans have learned over the years.

In other news, we are seeing letters coming from the Department of Veterans Affairs Pension Management advising veterans that their Pension benefit will be reduced based on the VA and Social Security data match. I addressed this last year when we were first notified there was a glitch in data matches from Social Security so the VA did not have accurate income verification and had corrected the problem, which meant veterans and surviving spouses had been overpaid. The VA is not penalizing those benefit recipients because the mistake was due to no fault of their own; however the benefits will be reduced based on social security offset. The best way we can get some of this pension increased is to make sure you keep track of all nonreimbursed medical expenses and report those annually to the VA.

Our office will assist you in preparing a VA form 21P-8416 Medical Expense report because nonreimbursed medical expenses, which include Medicare Part B, supplemental health insurance premiums, home care attendants (even if they are paid family members) and home care facilities to name a few, reduce your income for VA purposes. The VA counts total household income to qualify for pension benefits, which means it also counts total household nonreimbursed medical expenses including spouse's out-ofpocket medical expenses. If you are housebound or in need of aid and attendance, you will need a VA Form 21-2680 completed by your physician and this may also increase your benefit if you are just receiving pension alone.

Reminder: home care means assistance with daily living, not a housekeeper who does not assist with bathing, dressing, medication management, transferring and other modalities of daily living. As always, if you have any questions or you receive a letter stating that your benefits will be reduced, prepare for that if you can and call this office so we can assist with reporting any medical expenses the VA has not considered when determining your benefit amount.

The office will be closed Nov. 25-29 for the Thanksgiving holiday. You may call during that week and leave a message or email lmallon@HoodCounty.Texas. gov. Please note the new email address.

ART MATTERS ART Celebrities and their events

Animals as a favorite topic of Artist Marc Burckhardt.

BY STACEY WATKINS-MARTIN AND CORA WERLEY

Stacey Watkins-Martin and Cora Werley are local artists and members with several others of the Granbury Cultural Arts Commission. Both work diligently with many other people and organizations to promote Granbury as the exciting arts destination it has become.

As you check out this column, let us be the first to welcome you to not just one, but two amazing art events. First, the iconic fine art event — HGMA's Harvest Moon Festival of the Arts starts this Saturday morning at 10 a.m. and runs through Sunday. This is the 46th year and the quality and availability of art is definitely worth the visit. Please don't miss it.

At the same time, the Coates Western Art Exhibition hosted by the Granbury Arts Alliance will open also at 10 a.m. This will be a wonderful showcase of Western art to view and buy, held at the large Granbury Conference Center close to downtown.

We've had this past week the opportunity to meet Marc Burckhardt, a Texas state artist. Burckhardt generously donated his time to teach a workshop at the Lake Granbury Art Association and offered these insights in an interview with Stacey Watkins-Martin:

"Like most kids, I never didn't love to draw; ever since I could pick up a pencil. My dad built a special table so I could watch TV and draw. My drawings were like any other kid's drawings, but I was obsessed, and just kept going to get better by doing it all the time.

"Sometimes I look back and see clues as to how I ended up this way. A lot of my drawings were done to get out of doing other things. Drawing was a way to communicate and get out of trouble. Art was my way of navigating life. Both my parents were professors at Baylor. By chance, they taught foreign languages in the same building as the art department, which gave me occasional instruction although I'm mostly self-taught.

"Now I live in Austin, Texas and northern Germany, and do a lot of traveling. I've spent my whole life in professional art. When I studied art in college, I realized I needed to give some structure to what I was going to do. So I sold everything and moved to New York where I could get commissions and work in publishing. I responded to stories in music and writing, doing many book covers, illustrations for books and the like. I would sometimes see 15 to 20 people a day with my portfolio to get work. I worked at Time, Rolling Stone, National Geographic, Gucci and countless others.

"My art feeds my soul. I create my own visual vocabulary to speak; balancing what I get from outside (like a commission) and my own interpretation. I have very clear ideas of my stories to tell - I paint for myself, whether or not others understand; I'm responding to something. Most of my work is autobiographical on some level; you connect to it, but I might have meant something else. I have had and achieved goals, and by far the coolest were those I couldn't have imagined or thought."

Texas has multiple State artists; you can locate them at Texas Commission for the Arts website: https://www. arts.texas.gov/initiatives/ texas-state-artist/currentstate-artists/. Enjoy!

You're irresistibly attracted, like a moth

BY TERRI SCHLICHENMEYER

You crave that light. You need it like you need food and oxygen; in fact, you don't feel entirely whole without it. If you can bask in its glow, you're good. Just be careful, as in the new book "We All Shine On" by Elliot Mintz, of the lure of the limelight.

Laurel Canyon, California, is still just where it's always been, a mile or so off Sunset Boulevard and up the hill. It's there, but not like it was in 1970, when Elliot Mintz was a resident.

Then, Laurel Canyon was affordable and rustic, and Mintz knew most of his neighbors: David Cassidy, Joni Mitchell, David Crosby, Mickey Dolenz, and others. Because he'd landed a job interviewing people on the radio and he was unimpressed by celebrity, it took a while for him to realize it wasn't your normal, everyday kind of neighborhood.

That ease with the limelight served him well: one afternoon at work, Mintz called Yoko Ono's record label and asked for an interview. Label execs said "yes" and just like that, he spent an interesting 40 minutes talking to the controversial wife of a former Beatle.

The following day, she phoned Mintz at home to thank him — which began an odd friendship: one call became another call, which became daily chats that sometimes lasted for hours as he and Ono discussed everything and nothing. Talking with her felt easy. Eventually, Mintz felt comfortable enough to ask to speak to John Lennon.

Lennon, too, began calling Mintz at home every day, also sometimes for hours.

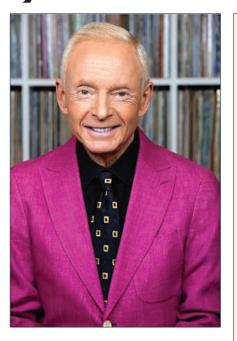

Through the years, Mintz was privy to Lennon and Ono's withdrawal from drugs, their infertility issues, anger and marital problems. He set up appointments for them. He introduced Lennon to other talents and acted as sleuth for Ono's hobbies.

And later, in the days after Lennon was shot and killed in Manhattan, Mintz catalogued the former Beatle's possessions

There are basically two ways to look at "We All Shine On." If you're a firm, at-all-costs fan of the Beatles or of Lennon and Ono in particular, you'll enjoy this insider's look at their lives.

If you've got an ounce of skepticism in you, however, you'll consider it differently.

Though his stories about his work in radio are lively and highly entertaining, author Elliot Mintz writes mostly here about his rather one-sided friendship with John Lennon and Yoko Ono. It's an account that seems to include a large amount of personal-assistanttype tasks done gratis, that appear to have gone largely unappreciated by their recipients.

This ultimately makes the tale feel uncomfortable, even cringey at times. Add the fact that this book is loaded with direct quotes from 50-plus years ago, which are most likely fictionalized, and you have a story that you'll want to read with eyes and mind both wide open.

Readers who don't care, who'll read anything Beatlerelated regardless, will enjoy this story. If you're doubtful at all about "We All Shine On," though, just let it be.

Halloween soirée, pumpkin carving and trunk or treat at PAC today

BY DIANE LONG

A Mississippi native who has been a Texas transplant for 30 years, Diane Long is a wife, mother, and former English teacher who has written Pecan Plantation Bits for 17 years cumulatively. She spends her time both gathering neighborhood news and collecting new books to read. dianedlong@ yahoo.com | 817-579-9360

With Halloween coming later this month, "Trunk or Treat" is happening today, Saturday, Oct. 26, in the PAC parking lot from 2 to 4 p.m. Volunteers will be on hand to make the day happen and provide candy for the plethora of trick or treaters who will attend.

In addition to Trunk or Treat, a Halloween party will happen inside the PAC. and the event will include a cupcake walk, games, crafts, balloon animals and a pumpkin carving contest. Contenders will compete in two age groups (13 and over and 12 and under) with prizes awarded for the top three places in each category. Pumpkins should be delivered to the PAC between 8 a.m. and noon on event day to be eligible for judging. Winners will be announced at the Halloween party.

WELCOME HOME

Pecan's next new member class comes Saturday, Nov. 2 at 10 a.m. in the Terrace Room of the clubhouse. The event is open to new neighbors as well as long-timers ering neighborhood news and new books to read. dianedlong@ 1 817-579-9360 who would like a refresher on the amenities of our community. Contact Sarah

Lord for a reservation: 817-

573-2641 extension 335.

VETERANS DAY

A very special observance happens in Pecan Plantation in honor of Veterans Day, and the event for 2024 will arrive Wednesday, Nov. 6. Folks planning to attend should call the clubhouse to reserve a spot as attendance is limited, and seats will fill quickly: 817-573-2641.

GIVE LIFE

The American Red Cross will be in the PAC gym Wednesday, Nov. 6 from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. for a blood drive. Donors may make an appointment at RedCrossBlood.org and enter Pecanplantation; walkins are also welcome.

TEACHER MEETING

The Pecan Educators Network (PEN) will hold its second meeting Wednesday, Nov. 6 at 5:30 p.m. at the Pecan clubhouse. Refreshments will be provided. The group held its first gathering earlier this month where it discussed organizational goals, shared stories, and enjoyed fellowship with other educators. PEN is a new, nonpolitical organization open to any Pecan residents who are currently working or have worked in education, including the positions of teachers, paraprofessionals and administration. For more information on the group or its upcoming event, contact Teela Watson: 817-393-3070.

ELECTION TIME

Pecan's Volunteer Fire Department/Emergency Medical Service is seeking volunteers to assist with its upcoming election process. The group needs approximately 30 volunteers Thursday, Nov. 7 from 3 to 5 p.m. followed by assistance Friday, Nov. 8 beginning at 8 a.m. and running until all ballots are counted. Sign up has begun and will end at 5 p.m. Friday, Nov. 1 in the EMS office. Volunteers should be adult residents of Pecan and may contact Dan Brunner for more information: dybrunner@gmail.com.

EVENING EVENT

Pecan Plantation's Widows and Widowers Club's next meeting is on the calendar for Thursday, Nov. 7 beginning at 5:30 p.m. with a "thankful month" theme for the gathering. Folks will meet in the Pecan ballroom to share their many blessings as well as bring gifts for BeeHive Assisted Living and provide assistance to Joseph's Locker, both located in Granbury. Some folks have cards designating which group to support, but if not, attendees may choose one for a contribution. Joseph's Locker president Cindy Tow will be at the meeting to discuss how the organization supports residents of our community. To further promote the theme of thankfulness, Donna Thompson will present "Choose Gratitude" to the attendees. Items helpful for BeeHive include toiletries (for men and women), magazines, games and playing cards. Joseph's Locker will also appreciate receiving the same items in addition to canned and boxed food items and paper products. Donations should be bagged and ready to add to the receptacle in the ballroom.

Reservations for the Nov. meeting are due by Wednesday, Oct. 30 to Caryl Mahaffey (caryl.mahaffey@ charter.net). Attendance is open to any widow or widower who lives in Pecan, and securing a seat is necessary.

GOLF GAME

Pecan's MGA will hold its annual breakfast and meeting Saturday, Nov. 9 at 7:30 a.m. in the clubhouse ballroom. All MGA members are invited to attend as voting on future officers and making golf-related decisions are on the agenda for the day. Following the meeting, the MGA will host its monthly Saturday tournament at 9 a.m., and the competition's format is a twoman scramble/shamble, choose your own partner. Pecaners received an email with a sign-up link, and registration may also be completed in the golf pro shop.

TOURNAMENT TIME

A veteran-exclusive ninehole golf tournament is coming to Pecan's course Tuesday, Nov. 12 in honor of our neighbors who have served in our country's military. The tournament is a four-person scramble with an entry fee of $10. Folks may assemble their own teams or be placed on one by the golf pro shop and scoring and a social gathering will happen in the pavilion following the tournament. Pecaners are invited to attend and cheer on our veterans playing in the tournament.

CLUB FITTING

A Titleist club fitting event is coming to the Pecan driving range Wednesday, Nov. 13 from 11 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Attendees must have an appointment. Residents received email with both a link and a QR code for securing a spot during the day.

HELPING HAND

The PAC is participating in Mission Granbury's annual food drive, "Pantries of Plenty." A collection bin will remain by the front entrance through mid-November.

FLU SHOTS

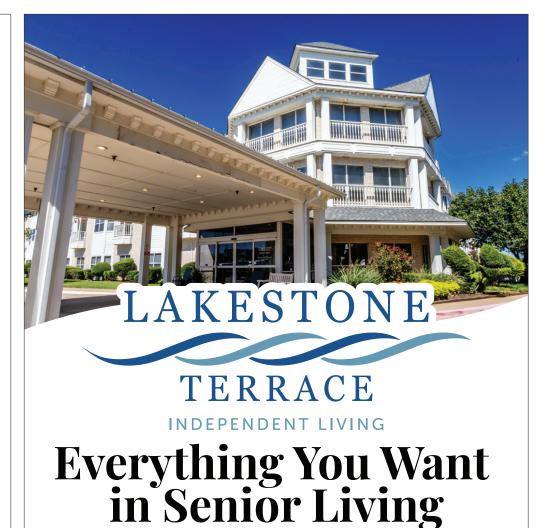

Pecan residents may receive their flu shots at the Charlie Lee Memorial Building on the emergency services compound from our EMS staff from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Cost per vaccine is $25.

PROGRESS UPDATE

Road resurfacing work on Wedgefield Road is continuing, and culvert pipes are being replaced on Airpark Drive with the milling to follow in preparation for the road's new surface. In addition, new railings for the clubhouse front steps are a lovely addition, and since this is the final stage of the project, the front doors to the clubhouse should reopen (barring any setbacks) next week.

SYMPATHY

Our deepest sympathy goes to the family of Patricia Garner, who passed away Oct. 16.

Hood County Hospital District Proposes to Reinstate $0.02 Property Tax Rate.

Voters Must Approve the Tax Rate Before Its Implementation.

Texas law requires local governments to take financial responsibility for ensuring persons living in their jurisdictions and who do not have health insurance or qualify for other healthcare assistance programs receive medical services. (The District does NOT fund or operate Lake Granbury Medical Center.)

26.7 percent of the county's residents are 65 and older. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, 10.4% of its residents are living in poverty, and 15.4% are medically indigent. Moreover, 72 percent of all emergency calls are made by persons aged 60 plus.

What is the Hospital District's budget?

The District Board of Directors has approved a budget for Fiscal Year Oct. 1-Sept. 30, 2025, totaling $2,861,330. Included is approximately $2 million in supplemental funding for Hood County's two EMS providers.

Who provides Emergency Medical Services?

Texas EMS is a nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization providing 911 emergency medical services county-wide. Operations include 31 full-time staff and eight licensed ambulances, four of which operate 24-hour shifts staffed by two personnel with one on-duty supervisor. Plans are to operate out of two stations and add two new ones. The Pecan Plantation VFD and EMS, Inc. serves this community.

What happens to EMS if voters do not approve the tax rate?

The following will likely occur; a reduction in ambulance service and staffing; no new stations, and no equipment and vehicle replacement.

The Hood County Hospital District could be dissolved. However, Hood County Commissioners Court would be responsible for paying for healthcare (including EMS) for the medically indigent living in Hood County.

Use this link to read a full overview of the Hood County Hospital District, its purpose and statutory obligations, and reasons why a $0.02 property tax provision is on the Nov. 5 general election ballot.

ur Best of Hood County 2024 section marks the official notification to the world of the winners of our Best of Hood County contest. This is the 15th year of the competition, and I believe the excitement of this year's event was even greater than it has been in the past. There is little reason to wonder why! With over 2,300 business entries in 139 categories, and a total of 76,106 votes cast, Best Of is a community event which people look forward to every year. Earning the right to display the Best of Hood County logo at a place of business allows the entity to serve notice to the world that they stand out and are a step above the competition. I have been present when business owners learn they have won the Best of Hood County and have seen tears come to their eyes or their voices raised in triumphant jubilation over their accomplishment. Smart business owners know and appreciate the value of the designation and are proud and sometimes overwhelmed to be recognized.

What makes Best Of so popular is the contest is a positive for both businesses and consumers. It allows the average citizen, the man or woman who spends their hard-earned money on a variety of different goods and services, to express their heartfelt belief about which company best meets their needs. They cast a vote because a company provides great value, terrific customer service, and how they relate to their customers.

Hood Cou HCNews × 20

For a business, they know that when a consumer is looking to buy, they will shop with confidence when they shop at a location which is a Best Of award winner. Buyers know they are shopping with a time tested, proven commodity, and they can feel comfortable in their transaction. When new people move to town, Best Of winners are a good road map of places to shop first.

Thank you to all the entries and to the thousands of voters who participated. Congratulations to all!
