

Amendments Highlight State Ballot

BRIAN WILMOTH

Editor

Four Tennessee Constitutional Amendments will be featured on the ballot during the November State and Federal General Election.

The amendments cover topics ranging from employment rights, to slavery, and language deemed unenforceable due to the U.S. Constitution. The state's constitution was last amended in 2014 when voters also approved four measures to change the document.

The first amendment on the 2022 ballot is the so-called "Right-to-Work" amendment. Tennessee has had right-to-work laws on the books since the 1940s, but a constitutional amendment would make it more difficult to overturn any such laws in the future.

The amendment's language states, "It is unlawful for any person, corporation, association, or this state or its political subdivisions to deny or attempt to deny employment to any person by reason of the person's membership in, affiliation with, resignation from, or refusal to join or affiliate with any labor union or employee organization."

Amendment 2 regards assigning an active governor if the current governor cannot execute their duties. Currently, the constitution states the speaker of the Senate is the first in line to take over if the governor is removed, resigns from office or if they die during their tenure. If there is no speaker of the Senate, then the responsibility of governing the state falls on the speaker of the House.

The amendment would add new wording to include situations where the governor is temporarily unable to perform their duties, such as for medical reasons. Like the existing constitutional rules, the speaker of the Senate is first in line to assume the governor's responsibilities as acting governor. Once the governor can return to their role, they would have to submit a written, signed declaration that they are able to resume their responsibilities.

Amendment 3 would semantically change Article I Section 33 of the state constitution to officially prohibit slavery of any for in Tennessee. Although the state's current constitution does prohibit slavery, the article in question reads, "Slavery and involuntary servitude are forever prohibited. Nothing in this section shall prohibit an inmate from working when the inmate has been duly convicted of a crime."

The updated language updates the language to clarify that slavery, itself, is prohibited, reading, "Slavery and involuntary servitude are forever prohibited. Nothing in this section shall prohibit an inmate from working when the inmate has been duly convicted of a crime."

The fourth proposed amendment would delete a section in the constitution that was written to prevent "ministers of the Gospel" and priests of any denomination from holding office in the state. The clause that it's trying to delete from the constitution hasn't been enforced for decades.

The U.S. Supreme Court struck down the clause as unconstitutional in 1978 in its McDaniel v. Paty ruling. In that case, Paul McDaniel, a Baptist minister and civil rights leader from Chattanooga running for a spot at the state's 1977 constitutional convention, was sued by his opponent, Selma Cash Paty, challenging his eligibility for office based on the law.

The amendments will be listed on the ballot as "yes" or "no" questions, with a "yes" vote to adopt the new language and a "no" vote to keep the current language.

Two things must happen for an amendment to pass and become part of the Constitution. The first is the amendment must get more yes votes than no votes. The second is that the number of yes votes must be a majority of the total votes in the gubernatorial election.

The voter registration deadline for the November election is Oct. 11. Early voting will run from Oct. 19 through Nov. 3.

HOW CLOSE ARE YOU TO HEAVEN?

Sponsored By: Burristown • Cubb Creek • Flynn’s Creek • Shiloh • New Salem • McCoinsville • Richmond Chapel • Zion • Bagdad • Hurricane • Union Hill • Stone Church of Christ

Do you have a favorite quote? One of my favorite quotes is not by a famous person. Although he's not famous, Lance Champion made an observation that has resonated with me, and I hope it. will do the same for you. He said, "For those who are Christians, the earth will be the closest they'll ever get to Hell; and for those who are not Christians, the earth will be the closest they'll ever get to Heaven." I find that statement to be profound. It is full of hope as well as sadness.

It makes me recall a vivid memory of riding in an auto-rickshaw in India. I was riding through an area where people's homes were tents made of found objects, and children were dirty, barefoot, and barely clothed. I remember sitting at a traffic light, watching the children, and telling my friend how sad I felt for those kids and the conditions in which they lived. I'll never forget my friend's response. He said, "Unless someone teaches them about Jesus, this is the best it will ever get for them."

When Moses grew up, he lived in the palace of the Pharaoh of Egypt. As the adopted son of Pharaoh's daughter, he had the best education this world had to offer, the most luxurious lifestyle available to man, and endless opportunities for what to do with his life. However, Moses didn't, choose to live the life of an Egyptian. He wanted to live the life of a Hebrew. He decided to live as one of his people and follow his God. "By faith Moses, when he was grown up, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter, choosing rather to be mistreated with the people of God than to enjoy the fleeting pleasures of sin. He considered the reproach of Christ greater wealth than the treasures of Egypt, for he was looking to the reward" (Hebrews 11: 24-26). Moses realized that this world was not the best he would experience. He trusted God. He was looking for a greater reward. Sometimes I forget this important principle. Have you?

I hate to think that this troubled world with its wars, suffering, and injustice is the best some people will ever experience. It motivates me to be more zealous in sharing the gospel of Jesus Christ. However, I take great comfort in the fact that, because I am a child of God, this world with all it's heartaches and hardships, will be the worst I'll ever experience! I'm grateful for the reminder. What will you do to make sure this life isn't the best the people you love will experience?

Dear Editor...

At this time the President of the United States is not elected by the people. The President of the United States is elected be the Electoral College. That system was put in place about two hundred years ago. At that time, it was the best we could do. To get information from one place to another, it had to be done by horseback. At that time, we elected the Electoral College, sent them to Washington D.C., and they elected the President of the United States. In 1824, 1876, 1888, 2000, and again in 2016 the candidate who placed second in the popular vote was elected President. I believe it was wrong when it happened in the past, and it will be wrong when it happens again. The Electoral College should be ended. It is easy to count the peoples' votes now. This is a democracy. Whoever gets the most votes should win the election. When a candidate runs for President in the United States they do not have to run for President in all 50 states. Because of the "winner take all" laws, like Tennessee and most states, they only need to win the "swing states", Ohio, Florida, Pennsylvania, and six or so smaller states. Not the nation as a whole. In the 2020 presidential election 96% of general election campaign events were held in 12 states. Nearly 65% of the voters live in states, again like Tennessee, where candidates rarely, or never, visit during the campaign. Dr. Randy Dayhuff Allardt, TN

Do What You Enjoy While You Can

GLENN MOLLETTE
special to the Sentinel

Life and the world are always changing. What you can do today is not guaranteed for tomorrow. Do what you enjoy while you can. None of us want to face every day filled with fear. Worry about tomorrow only messes up today. Watching the news keeps our minds churning about what will happen next. When will China invade Taiwan? How much will it cost America in lives, money and hardship? Russia's invasion of Ukraine is of course, costing us. We have spent over 54 billion dollars on aid to Ukraine. Many of us want to help Ukraine. Yet, we struggle to cover the cost of our country's government. Here we are again spending money we don't have while we go into further debt to countries like China who is buying up our debt, land and businesses. Who operates a business like this? Only America.

earning under $50,000. Does the prospect of being harassed by the IRS inspire you to work harder, make more money and be entrepreneurial? Americans are already beat down by the high cost of groceries, gasoline, housing and rising interest rates. Emotionally, this planet has been in a dark place for two years with Covid-19, now Monkey Pox, financial strain and always, always an on-going war that we are involved in or supporting. America's universities continue to stick it to young families who want their children to have a good education. State funded universities and private colleges continue to increase tuition. Do you really have $160,000 to send your child to college? Most likely, the institution being consideration charges even more. The only hope for many American families is the two-year community college. Many teenagers would benefit greatly to have two more years to grow up, some before landing in a dorm room 200 miles from home. The prospects of making it academically, socially, and financially will be greatly increased. This gives them time to seriously consider the right institution to go to for the junior and senior years.

They will still have the degree and save some money. Finally, don't live in despair. Life goes by quickly even if you are young. Study, work, make money, be innovative, love people and be kind to everyone. Do some things you think you might enjoy. If you don't enjoy them, then move on to something else. Enjoy life and do what you can, while you can. *Dr. Glenn Mollette is a graduate of numerous schools including Georgetown College, Southern and Lexington Seminaries in Kentucky. ## Homeless Veterans Still Need Help

by Freddy Groves

Right about now the weather is cooling off. Or, if it hasn't, it soon will. Before we know it, hard winter will be upon us. As of this year, there are 38,000 homeless veterans who will be living outside in that weather.

Homeless people make up 7% of the population, but 13% of the homeless population are veterans. Over half have a disability. Nearly three-quarters have substance abuse problems. Fully half are over the age of 50. Kind of makes you think, doesn't it?

Despite all the programs the Department of Veterans Affairs has come up with to reduce veteran homelessness, our comrades are still out there by the thousands. Large dollars are budgeted for this, grants handed out to community homeless advocacy groups, studies done, numbers arranged in neat columns on print-outs, meetings held -- and the numbers just don't go down an appreciable amount. In fact, the point-in-time (PIT) count numbers (every homeless veteran counted in a single day) for the past several years have been inching upward, despite all the efforts to manage the problem.

We, on either an individual or group basis, need to step up. Start by making calls. Call Voluntary Services at the closest VA hospital and ask what they need. Hook up with the CEC (community employment coordinator) at the hospital and offer your help. Work at a Stand Down. Sign up to drive veterans to medical appointments and job interviews.

On a smaller level, band with others and prepare to open your wallets just a little bit. Remember: While what we do might seem negligible in the whole range of efforts, it won't be a small thing for the veteran who gets a thick winter coat, some dry socks, a ride to the VA clinic or your skills in drafting up a resume.

Keep this number handy: National Call Center for Homeless Veterans 877-424-3838. They answer 24/7 and have help for homeless veterans or those who are in danger of becoming homeless.

Tips To Help Kids Learn A Foreign Language

Bilingualism benefits children in myriad ways. For example, a 2014 study published in the Journal of Experimental Child Psychology found that bilingual children have a higher vocabulary range than monolingual kids. In addition, a 2010 review published in the Review of Educational Research found that bilingual students typically have stronger working memories and attention spans than their monolingual counterparts.

The benefits of bilingualism are undeniable, but learning a foreign language can be challenging. However, that challenge could be less significant for youngsters. Though there are different theories regarding why children seem to learn languages more readily than adults, Dr. Eleonore Smalle of Tilburg University in the Netherlands indicates that adults tend to translate from their first language when trying to learn a new language. In an interview with the United Nations in Western Europe, Dr. Smalle said that adults’ attempts to adopt language rules they already know results in a “less stable consolidation of the new language into memory.” Children, on the other hand, unconsciously implement the new language rules and even use newly acquired words in everyday life. That, Dr. Smalle says, benefits long-term memory consolidation.

It’s important to note that researchers, including Dr. Smalle, feel that children may find it easier to learn a foreign language up to adolescence, at which time their conscious memory begins to develop more strongly. So parents who want to help their children learn a foreign language have a relatively long window of time to get that ball rolling before kids could find it more challenging. Parents also can try some additional strategies to help kids learn a foreign language.

Bring Lessons Home From The Classroom

Children learning a foreign language in school or via a private tutor can be encouraged to bring those lessons home and continue to develop those skills in a fun way. Play games in a foreign language at home on family game night. Young children just beginning foreign language lessons can be encouraged to count to 10 when playing hide-and-seek at home.

Shop For Groceries In A Foreign Language

When grocery shopping with children in tow, parents can point to foods around the store and ask kids to say each item in the foreign language they’re learning. Make a list before going to the store and reward kids who name all of the items on the list with a special treat at checkout.

Read Books In The Language The Child Is Learning

This could be tricky if parents are not bilingual. However, in that scenario, reading books to children in a foreign language provides a great way to reverse roles and let children teach their parents everything they’ve learned from their teachers or tutors. Keep stories simple and even seek recommendations from teachers or tutors.

The benefits of bilingualism are significant. Parents can try various strategies to ensure foreign language lessons learned in the classroom are reinforced at home.

Protecting Reptile And Amphibian Health

More than 250 scientists from 25 countries gathered in Knoxville on August 4-10, either in person or virtually, for the inaugural Global Amphibian and Reptile Disease Conference. Pioneering research on amphibian diseases conducted through the University of Tennessee Center for Wildlife Health at the UT Institute of Agriculture resulted in Knoxville’s selection as host city for the seven-day conference.

The conference included seven workshops and 149 scientific presentations. Topics ranged from herpetofauna mortality investigations to mathematical modeling of amphibian and reptile diseases to the importance of diversity, equity and inclusion in science. Research field trips, social events and evening activities for participants rounded out the event.

Conference participants included students, scientists, veterinarians and natural resource practitioners, as well as policy makers and other stakeholders. Despite the diversity of their backgrounds, individuals at the event were united in the goal of using the conference as a springboard to find solutions to emerging infectious diseases that are plaguing global amphibian and reptile populations.

Participants came from across the world and included students, scientists, veterinarians, natural resource practitioners, policy makers and other stakeholders. Photo courtesy of M. Gray.

Prominent among the conference’s 21 sponsors were the National Science Foundation, Deutsche Gesellschaft für Herpetologie und Terrarienkunde, Environment, and Climate Change Canada, Morris Animal Foundation, Wildlife Disease Association, Amphibian Survival Alliance, U.S. Geological Survey and the Association of Zoos and Aquariums.

Gray and other organizers successfully raised more than $85,000 to increase diversity, equity and inclusion at the conference. The funds supported participation by students and early career professionals from five continents. In total, organizers were able to provide 44 travel grants to participants from nine countries and 13 U.S. states.

Gray says organizers accomplished their goal of fostering discussions among researchers on various amphibian and reptile disease threats. They also fostered unity among globally dispersed scientists and students, he adds.

“To me, the most impressive outcome of this inaugural conference was its inclusive atmosphere. More than half of the presentations were delivered by students, and they frequently engaged in discussions without inhibition. It was inspiring to see the next generation of scientists enthusiastic about solving the complexities of global emerging herpetofaunal diseases. Our hope is that the knowledge participants took away about the similarities and differences among host-pathogen systems and disease management strategies will help set research agendas and foster conservation of herpetofauna species for years to come.”

Positive impacts are needed. When pathogen infection causes disease, populations of amphibians and reptiles can be reduced and even species extinctions could occur. Such losses threaten to unleash a chain of harmful consequences. Reptiles and amphibians are important food sources for various birds and mammals, and frogs, toads and lizards are important consumers of insects, many of which are agricultural pests or, in the case of mosquitos and ticks, carry and transmit zoonotic diseases. The loss of amphibians or reptiles from an ecosystem can have cascading effects that influence natural processes such as nutrient cycling and climate change, and also can negatively impact human health.

“From a One Health perspective, it’s hard to predict all the consequences that loss of populations of specific amphibians and reptiles could have,” says Deb Miller, UT professor of forestry, wildlife and fisheries and director of the UT One Health Initiative. “What we do know is that high-concern diseases such as snake fungal disease, pond turtle shell disease, ranaviral disease and chytridiomycosis have already resulted in die-off events and, in some cases, extinction of herpetofauna species across the world.”

Diverse factors causing diseases to emerge in amphibians and reptiles include changes to the environment that negatively affect the health of species and give pathogens an advantage over their immune systems. Humans also affect host-pathogen interactions by unnaturally transporting pathogens long geographic distances during international trade or on footwear and other gear when traveling abroad.

Gray and his team along with collaborators at four other institutions have for years engaged in basic and field science to characterize environmental threats to amphibians. Now their studies are branching in a new direction.

In August 2022, three federal agencies awarded a $2.75 million grant to a UT-led team to conduct a study that will identify and assess how pet amphibian trade networks may amplify pathogens. Funding for the project comes from the National Science Federation (NSF), the National Institutes of Health (NIH) and the U.S. Department of Agriculture National Institute of Food and Agriculture (USDA NIFA). The project’s leadership reflects the teamwork and strength of UTIA and UT Knoxville with principal investigators being Gray; Neelam Poudyal, a professor of natural resource policy and human dimensions in the Department of Forestry, Wildlife and Fisheries; and Nina Fefferman, professor in the Department of Mathematics and Department of Ecological and Evolutionary Biology, director of the National Institute for Mathematical and Biological Synthesis (NIMBioS) and associate director of the UT One Health Initiative. Project collaborators include scientists at Washington State University, Michigan State University, University of Massachusetts, and Rutgers University. The Pet Advocacy Network is an important partner.

A Week In Jackson County History

Robert Kirk Reeve, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Reeve of Gainesboro, has been named to the Dean's List at Martin College in Pulaski, according to Dean Harold Bass.

Students having a grade point average of 3.50 to 4.0 qualify for this honor, according to the school spokesman. Students named to the academic achievement list have completed a minimum of 18 hours semester work.

Two East Tennessee men have been fined and given jail sentences for trapping wild hogs on the Tennessee Game and Fish Commission's Tellico Wildlife Management Area near Madisonville. Roger Don Taylor, 23, and Worth Shaw Jr, 20, both of the Coker Creek Community in Monroe County, were each fined $50.00 and court cost of $18.50 on charges of possessing and transporting a wild hog in closed season. In addition, Monroe County General Sessions Judge Albert Martin imposed 30 day jail sentences on each, then barred both men from the Tellico WMA for a period of one year by court order. Game and Fish Officer Charles Mountain arrested the pair near Indian Boundry Lake with two hogs in their possession. A 1966 automobile owned by Shaw and used in the violation was confiscated by Game and Fish officers.

 1 1/2 cups sugar
 1/3 cup all purpose flour
 3 tablespoons baking cocoa
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1 1/2 cup water
 1 can (12 ounces) evaporated milk
 5 large egg yolks, lightly beaten
 1/2 cup butter
 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 Dough for single crust pie
 Whipped topping and baking cocoa (optional)

On a lightly floured surface, roll dough to a 1/8-in.-thick circle; transfer to a 9-in. pie plate. Trim to 1/2 in. beyond rim of plate; flute edge. Refrigerate 30 minutes. Preheat oven to 425°.

Line crust with a double thickness of foil. Fill with pie weights, dried beans or uncooked rice. Bake on a lower oven rack until edge is golden brown, 20-25 minutes. Remove foil and weights; bake until bottom is golden brown, 3-6 minutes longer. Cool completely on a wire rack.

In a large saucepan, combine the first 6 ingredients. Cook and stir over medium-high heat until thickened and bubbly, about 2 minutes. Reduce heat; cook and stir 2 minutes longer. Remove from the heat. Whisk 1 cup hot mixture into egg yolks. Return all to the pan; bring to a gentle boil, stirring constantly.

Remove from the heat; stir in butter and vanilla. Cool slightly. Pour warm filling into crust. Cool for 1 hour. Chill until set. If desired, top with whipped cream and sprinkle with cocoa to serve.
