

County Covering Rising Insurance

BRIAN WILMOTH
Editor

Jackson County will cover the increase in health insurance for county employees.

The County Commission approved the costs of covering a 10% increase for insurance premiums at its meeting Oct. 24.

Mayor Randy Heady said the increase does not require a budget amendment. The county budget committee had already included an increase during the budget process.

According to Heady, the county's action will help around 45 county employees and will cost Jackson County an extra $486 each month.

"I think it's good that the people know that the county is really stepping up to the plate," Heady said. "There are counties around us that do pay more than we do, and I know that, but there are also counties who don't pay what we do...so I'm really proud that we do that. It shows that we do care, and that we're trying to compensate our employees for their hard work."

In other news, the commission also approved applying for a $50,000 solid waste grant to go toward recycling mechanisms. Heady said the grant pool had closed during the COVID-19 pandemic, but it had recently opened back up.

"The three things we are looking to go for is a new tow motor, our tow motors have been costing us quite a bit of money to try and keep up, it's an electric tow motor which should give us a real good advantage getting that," Heady said. "The quote that we got also included a charger so that's a good deal. Also, we're going for a portable dock. We've run into some issues with the dock that we've been using."

Heady said the other item he would like to consider is a trailer to transport cardboard.

"We're going to go as far as we can (with the money)," Heady said. "It's a $50,000 grant and it costs us $5,000, it's a 10 percent match. So, we can get $55,000 if we get $50,000. The only thing that might have to happen is with the trailer, we might have to look for a really good used trailer."

Although Heady said the funding has not been guaranteed, he hopes to hear back soon.

Rose Awarded Business Award'

U.S. Representative John Rose recently received the most prestigious legislative recognition from the nation's leading small business advocacy organization, the National Federation of Independent Business.

"The NFIB Guardian of Small Business Award is presented to Members of Congress who have proven themselves to be real champions of small business," said NFIB President and CEO Brad Close. "This Congress, small businesses emerged from the COVID-19 pandemic but faced continual threats of high inflation, workforce shortages, and supply chain disruptions. These NFIB Guardians demonstrated strong support of small businesses on key issues."

"I will always support pro-growth policies and oppose burdensome regulations and tax policies that stifle the entrepreneurial spirit on which the American dream was founded," said Rep. Rose. "I am honored to receive this award and to represent many small businesses across Middle Tennessee in Congress."

NFIB's Guardian of Small Business Award is reserved for lawmakers who vote consistently with small businesses on key issues identified by small business owners. Those who voted with small business on key issues 70% or more of the time during the 117th Congress earned the NFIB Guardian of Small Business Award. NFIB informs lawmakers in advance which votes will be considered NFIB Key Votes and asks lawmakers to support the consensus views of our members. We also remind them that the results will be reported back to the NFIB membership.

Rose is currently serving his second term representing Tennessee's Sixth Congressional District and resides in Cookeville with his wife, Chelsea, and their two sons, Guy and Sam.

The Sixth District includes Cannon, Clay, Coffee, Cumberland, DeKalb, Fentress, Jackson, Macon, Overton, Pickett, Putnam, Robertson, Smith, Sumner, Trousdale, White, and Wilson counties as well as portions of Cheatham and Van Buren counties.

Rose is an eighth-generation farmer, small business owner, and attorney, and currently serves on the House Financial Services Committee.

Early Voting Ends Thursday

BRIAN WILMOTH
Editor

Early voting for the November 8 State and Federal General Election will continue through Thursday.

Compared to the August election, the coming election's ballot is much shorter. A few state and federal offices are featured in next week's election, along with four Tennessee Constitution Amendments.

In the lone federal race on the November ballot in Jackson County is for the U.S. House of Representatives District 6, where incumbent John Rose is being challenged by Democrat Randall Cooper.

In the Tennessee House of Representatives District 40 race, Republican Michael Hale, who defeated incumbent Teri Lynn Weaver in the primary, is facing off against Democrat Tom Cook.

In Tennessee Senate District 15, Incumbent Republican Paul Bailey is running unopposed.

In the race for Tennessee Governor, Bill Lee is facing a crowded field of challengers in his effort to win a second term.

Lee's main challenger in the General Election is Dr. Jason Martin, the Democratic Party Nominee. They will be joined on the ballot by eight independent candidates: Constance Every, John Gentry, Basil Marceaux, Charles Van Morgan, Alfred O'Neil, Deborah Rouse, Michael Schantland, and Rick Tyler.

In addition to the races, four ballot initiatives will also be decided next week.

Perhaps the most divisive of the four, Amendment 1, is also expected to be the closest of the four. The so-called "Right to Work" amendment would codify existing state laws into the state constitution preventing companies from denying employment based on union membership.

Amendment 2 lays out a temporary plan of succession in the event Tennessee Governor was unable to perform their duties. The Speaker of the Senate, followed by the Speaker of the House if there is no Speaker of the Senate, could step into the role without having to resign their position as speaker.

The third ballot initiative would forever prohibit slavery in Tennessee. However, it does acknowledge that prisoners convicted of crimes can perform work without pay.

Amendment 4 would delete a portion of the Tennessee Constitution that prohibits ministers and priests from holding a seat in the state legislature.

Unemployment Falls Half-A-Percent

BRIAN WILMOTH
Editor

Unemployment fell half-a-percent last month in Jackson County.

According to the latest data from the Tennessee Department of Labor and Workforce Development, unemployment in the county dropped 3.4% in September, down from 3.9% in August.

Two other counties in the area also saw a 0.5 percentage point decrease last month, including Cumberland falling to 3.8% and Putnam falling to 2.9%.

Macon County continues to have the lowest unemployment in the area. Its rate also fell by 0.4% to 2.6% last month.

Other counties that saw unemployment rates falling by 0.4 percentage points include Fentress falling to 3.4% and Pickett falling to 3.3% last month.

The highest unemployment rate in the area remains in Clay County, although it did see its rate fall to under 4%. Clay's rate fell to 3.9% down 0.4 percentage points.

Overton County saw the lowest growth in the job market in the area. Its rate only fell by 0.3 percentage points to 2.8%.

Across the state, every county unemployment rates below 5% in September. September also marked the second consecutive month that rates decreased in each of the state's 95 counties. Williamson County continued to have the lowest rate in the state at 2.1%, which was down 0.2 of a percentage point from August's rate of 2.3%.

Cheatham and Wilson counties each had a rate of 2.3%, while the rates for Sevier, Rutherford, Sumner, Knox, and Moore counties all came in at 2.4%.

Perry County had the highest unemployment rate in September at 4.9%. But, that still marked a 0.7 of a percentage point decrease when compared to its rate for August.

Bledsoe County's rate of 4.8% was the second highest and represented a decrease of 0.5 of a percentage point from the previous month. Lake County had the next highest rate at 4.7%, which was 0.6 of a percentage point lower than its August rate.

September's statewide seasonally adjusted unemployment rate held steady at 3.4% for the second consecutive month.

The national seasonally adjusted unemployment rate dropped in September to 3.5%, down 0.2 of a percentage point in a month-to-month comparison.

County unemployment rates are not seasonally adjusted to account for different seasonal impacts on the workforce.

Frost Flowers

GLEN CONNER
State Climatologist Emeritus for Kentucky

Frost flowers are thin layers (perhaps credit card thickness) of ice that are extruded through slits from the stems of white or yellow wingstem plants, among others. Their formation requires freezing air temperature, soil that is moist or wet but not frozen, and a plant’s stem that has not been previously frozen. (Practically speaking, a once per year event, although not all individuals produce frost flowers on the first day of good conditions). The water in the plant’s stem is drawn upward by capillary action from the ground. It expands as it freezes and splits the stem vertically and freezes on contact with the air. As more water is drawn from ground through the split, it extrudes a paper thin ice layer further from the stem. The length of the split determines if the frost flower is a narrow or wide ribbon of ice. It curls unpredictably as it is extruded, perhaps from unequal friction along the sides of the split, to form “petals”. These flowers, no two of which are alike, are fragile and last only until they sublime or melt.

To find them, look for tall weeds, especially in locations that are seldom mowed. They seem to like the same habitat as purple ironweed, blackberries, and wingstems.

Dear Editor...

Many Churches are preaching “Republicanism”, not Christianity, turning places of worship into political platforms, preaching hate toward marginalized groups of people.

If you believe something is wrong or a sin, then do not do it, but do not hate or mistreat those who are committing what you deem to be a sin. God commands us to love, period. If you are in a Church and the Minister is preaching politics or hate toward others, don’t get up and walk out, run out, wiping your feet off at the door.

As for our Republican legislators using religion as a basis for legislation that limits the rights of the people is simply wrong. The first amendment of the constitution speaks against that, as did the founding fathers, who created it. God gives man the freedom to choose and may He have mercy on the Republican legislators who are trying to take that away.

Will Under 2% Of People Fix Finances?

GLENN MOLLETTE
special to the Sentinel

According to the IRS, a $400,000 or more annual household income represents America’s top 1.8% income-earners. Per IRS Publication 6292, there were 154 million tax returns filed in 2019, thus about 2.8 million people earn over $400,000.

About 330 million people live in the United States. Millions of undocumented immigrants have and are coming, so this number is on steroids.

About 69.1 million people received benefits from programs administered by the Social Security Administration in 2019. And 5.7 million people were newly awarded Social Security benefits in 2019.

Roughly 2.8 million people making over $400,000 a year cannot solve the financial problems of America’s government. Telling Americans that we are going to stick it to the rich or 1.8% of our country to carry 70 million retirees and millions of illegals flooding into our country is just political rhetoric.

Most people aren’t doing great when it comes to saving for the future: A 2020 SSA study found that 40% of Americans rely on Social Security as their sole source of retirement income. The average annual Social Security benefit for a worker is nearly $20,000, hardly enough money for most retirees to subsist on.

The U.S. Department of Labor data shows that there were 113,062 pension plans in 1990, but only 46,869 in 2018. The average private pension in the United States today is about $10,788, according to data from the Pension Rights Center.

In 2023, the year in which the legislation will increase tax revenue most, individuals making less than $10,000 per year will pay 3.1% more in taxes and those making between $20,000 to 30,000 per year will see a 1.1% tax increase, the Joint Committee on Taxation analysis showed. Tax revenue collected from those making $100,000 a year or less would increase by $5.8 billion in 2023 under the Inflation Reduction Act.

In addition, the share of tax revenue collected from all Americans making more than $200,000 per year would remain at the current percentage, according to the Joint Committee on Taxation. Taxpayers with an annual income of $200,000 or greater pay more than 57% of all federal income taxes.

Will America’s seniors eventually pay more in taxes? Retirees may pay income tax on up to 85% of benefits if combined income is more than $34,000. Combined incomes between $32,000 and $44,000 may be taxed up to 50% of the total, and above $44,000 may be taxed up to 85% of the total. if you’re married and filing a joint return. Do you think these numbers will go down? There is only one way that taxes have gone in America – up.

Our problems cannot be fixed by one small group of America’s people. We must have a flat tax for everyone making over $50,000. We must stop the influx of illegals. We must be self-sufficient in energy and manufacturing. Many retirees who are physically able may have to go back to work to survive inflation.

In the meantime, government must help us by eliminating the billions of dollars wasted each year. Also, they need to stop trying to convince us that they are going to fix our problems by only going after 1.8% of the American people.

Expanded Help For Veteran Caregivers

by Freddy Groves

The Department of Veterans Affairs is giving a helping hand to veteran caregivers of all eras. The Program of Comprehensive Assistance for Family Caregivers (PCAFC) has been expanded to include eligible veterans who served after May 7, 1975, and before Sept. 11, 2001.

At-home caregivers have been the glue that held together any number of veteran programs, and now more of them will get the assistance they need. The program assists caregivers with health insurance and access to health care through CHAMPVA, peer support, respite care (30 days per year), education and training, financial assistance and monthly stipend, certain travel expenses, resources and more. The program includes both primary and secondary (backup) caregivers, although there are different services for secondary.

At the same time, the VA is extending the length of time that Legacy participants, veterans and their caregivers can stay eligible for the program. This date now runs through Sept. 30, 2025. “Legacy” means that a veteran was designed as eligible before Oct. 1, 2020.

Eligible veterans include those who had a serious injury or a serious illness during active duty during any service era. The veteran must have a disability rating of 70% or higher, have been discharged or have a medical discharge and need at least six months of personal care services for assistance such as feeding, supervision, safety and bathing.

To learn more about the Caregiver Support Program, call them at 855-260-3274 on Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. EST, and on Saturday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. EST.

For an online application and specific eligibility criteria, go to www.va.gov/family-member-benefits/comprehensive-assistance-for-family-caregivers. Look for the link to VA Form 10-10CG. In addition, the veteran needs to be enrolled in VA health care. Apply for that on VA Form 10-10EZ on that same webpage. Don’t send any medical records with your applications. The VA will ask for those later.

For even more information on PCAFC, go to www.caregiver.va.gov/support/support_benefits.asp and click on “Fact Sheets.”

Easy Ways To Cut Grocery Costs

Consumers might not think it, but eggs are an expensive commodity. As of August 2022, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported the average price of a dozen Grade A, large eggs was $3.12. Eggs are just one example of foods that have become significantly more costly over the last year or more.

Flour, butter/margarine and dairy products also have become more expensive. According to CNBC, food prepared at home now costs 10 percent more than it did a year ago. Comparatively speaking, restaurant prices have risen by 6.9 percent, making it more affordable for some people to eat out than prepare meals at home. Despite rising food costs, it is possible to save money by cooking at home. Purchase generic brands Switching to generic brands can immediately bring about savings over “premium” counterparts. Generics cost less because manufacturers don’t have to offset the cost of advertising. Many generic brands are made in the same facilities that produce name brand items.

Plan weekly (or monthly) meals Take a few moments to jot down meal ideas for the week. This can streamline the process of buying meals and help a person use fewer ingredients. Plus, meal plans can be based around which items are on sale. One can meal plan from scratch, or utilize a meal plan from a website that helps utilize all ingredients in various ways, such as turning leftover meatloaf from one night into sloppy Joes on another.

Stick to a list When meal planning, check out the pantry first to see what’s on hand, and then mark down the items needed. Buy only what is listed, resisting the urge to make impulse purchases. For those who can’t avoid throwing a few extra items in the wagon, utilize stores’ shop from home services, where it’s possible to keep track of what’s being spent in real time. Simply check out and then do a curbside pickup. Check product prices When comparing prices, be sure to check out the net item, net pound or net ounce price.

This enables shoppers to see if a sale is really a value, including whether it’s best to buy pre-packaged products or individual items. Consider cheaper meals Make the bulk of meals with less expensive ingredients, such as beans, whole grains and vegetables. Chicken drumsticks or thighs are generally cheaper than steaks or even chicken breasts and cutlets. Reduce reliance on bottled beverages Opt for water at home rather than bottled, if possible. Purchase iced tea powder or tea bags and whip up brews. Water with lemon juice can replace lemonade. These are just a few ways to save money on groceries as prices continue to rise.

DID JESUS REALLY CURSE THE FIG TREE ?

IT IS RECORDED THAT JESUS, ON HIS WAY FROM BETHANY TO JERUSALEM, AND BEING HUNGRY, STOPPED TO PICK FRUIT FROM A FIG TREE (MARK 11:12-14). BUT, ALTHOUGH THE TREE WAS IN LEAF, THERE WERE NO FIGS AND JESUS SAID, HEREAFTER, NO MAN WOULD EVER EAT FRUIT FROM THAT TREE! SOME AUTHORITIES SAY JESUS, FOLLOWING THE ORIENTAL CUSTOM OF HOLY MEN, PUT A CURSE ON THE TREE, FROM DISAPPOINTMENT AT NOT FINDING FRUIT. OTHER AUTHORITIES STATE THAT, BECAUSE THE TREE WAS IN LEAF AND THEREFORE SHOULD HAVE HAD FIGS, JESUS WAS POINTING OUT THAT, WHEN ONE OUTWARDLY SHOWS A GOOD CHARACTER WITHOUT THE FRUITS THEREOF, HE IS A HYPOCRITE, OF NO VALUE TO THE KINGDOM OF GOD, BUT....

...STILL FURTHER AUTHORITIES MAINTAIN THAT, FOR JESUS TO CONDEMN A TREE, FOR NOT GIVING FRUIT, DOES NOT SEEM COMPATIBLE WITH HIS GENTLE LOVING NATURE AND, SINCE JESUS WAS AT JERUSALEM FOR THE PASSOVER, THIS PLACES THE TIME OF YEAR AT EARLY APRIL WHEN THE FIG TREE HAS JUST BEGUN TO LEAF AND GROW FIGS, WHICH THEN MATURE IN LATE JUNE... THUS, ALL JESUS MERELY DID, WAS REMARK THAT, BECAUSE THE TREE HAD ALREADY BEGUN GROWING LEAVES, BUT NO FRUIT, IT WAS BARREN, AND NO ONE WOULD HARVEST FIGS FROM IT WHEN THE FRUIT SEASON ARRIVED!

EACH OF THESE THEORIES SEEM TO HAVE VALID POINTS, SO IT REMAINS FOR THE STUDENT TO MAKE HIS OWN CHOICE —WHICH DO YOU THINK ?

State Celebrates Forest Products

Gov. Bill Lee proclaimed last week, Oct. 16 – 22 as Tennessee Forest Products Week.

He encouraged residents to recognize and celebrate our forests and the renewable resources they provide as an important part of our state’s history, economy, culture, and well-being. The Tennessee Department of Agriculture’s Division of Forestry (TDF) celebrated with the Tennessee Forestry Association and their shared Forestry-Works program.

“To meet our mission to protect, conserve, and enhance all forest resources for all citizens we must work with forest landowners and forest industry stakeholders to encourage active forest management,” State Forester David Arnold said. “Actively managed forests are more productive, healthy, and resilient and provide the broadest scope of forest benefits. Diverse, competitive, and sustainable forest products markets provide the best incentive for landowners to manage their forests.”

Planned activities throughout the week included social media posts to raise awareness about Tennessee’s forest industry and a supply chain tour on Thursday with state lawmakers. The group toured timber management sites in Chickasaw State Forest and visited Speyside Bourbon Stave Mill in Bolivar.

Fifty-two percent (13.9 million acres) of Tennessee is forested, providing raw material to the forest products industry, as well as recreational opportunities and vital ecosystem functions. Most of the state’s forests (83 percent) are privately stewarded by an estimated 335,000 landowners owning an average size of 44 acres. Oak-hickory is the dominate forest type covering nearly 10 million acres, making Tennessee one of the top hardwood lumber producing states in the nation.

Active forest management provides a renewable resource to meet the global demand for forest products. Encouraging the use of sustainably-harvested wood products fosters growth of the forest products economy in our state. TDF offers forest landowners information to help them make informed decisions in pursuit of their forest management objectives.

The forest products sector makes essential contributions to Tennessee’s overall economic prosperity, especially in rural communities, generating $21.7 billion in goods and services annually and employing more than 85,500 Tennesseans across the state. Tennessee’s average annual sawtimber removals on timberland are estimated at 1.3 billion board feet, 84.6 percent of which comes from family forest landowners.

The Tennessee forest products industry needs workers to fill a variety of jobs. With ForestryWorks, TDF partnered with the Tennessee Forestry Association to provide K-12 and post-secondary programs to encourage students to consider a career in the industry. Learn more at www.forestryworks.com/tennessee.

Tennessee’s working forests also play an essential role in providing a wide array of ecosystem services, including providing for clean air, clean water, wildlife habitat and biodiversity.

TDF protects and promotes the responsible use of forest resources in Tennessee. Focus areas include assisting landowners with a variety of services, providing quality tree seedlings, supporting forest health programs, collecting forest inventory data, assisting forest industries, and fighting wildland fires.

Focusing On Heifer Health

Could Improve Sustainability

While cattle production has historically focused on increasing the feed efficiency of steers to produce a marketable beef product, researchers at the University of Tennessee Institute of Agriculture are studying the feed efficiency of heifers, whose health and pregnancies set production up for success.

Funded by the Tennessee Beef Promotion Board, the research is led by Phillip Myer, associate professor in the Department of Animal Science, who specializes in microbiology of the four-chambered stomach of grazing animals. Gabbi Martin, a graduate student in the Department of Animal Science, is working with Myer. The team is examining the nutritional physiological changes that occur during pregnancy, the impact those changes have on the rumen (stomach) environment, and the resulting feed efficiency in Angus heifers. The information will allow beef producers to modify strategies to improve overall sustainability of heifers and their calves.

“Ideally, the cow is a long-term constituent of a herd and it is important to examine the rumen environment to improve the cow-calf enterprise,” says Myer. “This work is important for determining the rumen microbial changes that occur in heifers during pregnancy and their impact on nutrition and feed efficiency.”

For producers, it’s optimal to have cows that can produce efficient calves while maintaining a stable, efficient rumen through all stages of production, including pregnancy. To achieve this, Myer and his team are looking at the changes occurring within the rumen environment and determining the impact those changes have on the host. This information will improve the sustainability of the cow-calf enterprise.

“I am excited about the current and future implications of this work in context of production and promotion of high-quality beef for the producers of Tennessee,” says Martin, who is a fifth-generation agriculturalist.

Research for the project titled “Pregnancy influences on the feed efficiency and rumen environment of Angus heifers in producing a quality beef product” began in October 2021 and is being conducted at the East Tennessee AgResearch and Education Center near Knoxville and the Plateau AgResearch and Education Center in Crossville. Since the project’s start, the team has produced one publication that details several potential biomarkers of feed efficiency in both low- and high-feed-efficient heifers. Additionally, the research team found correlations between rumen bacteria and metabolites found in the rumen fluid.

More publications are expected to follow.

Through its land-grant mission of research, teaching and extension, the University of Tennessee Institute of Agriculture touches lives and provides Real. Life. Solutions. utia.tennessee.edu.

Drying gourds

Clean gourds with soapy water and air dry; hang them in a dark area, making sure they do not touch, for about 6 months. Discard any that decay, shrivel or get soft. If mold appears, wipe it with a cloth dipped in bleach. When the gourds become light, solidly hard and you hear the seeds rattling inside when you shake them, they can be carved or painted. – Brenda Weaver

Alfalfa Aided By Grazing After Killing Frost
Alfalfa fields can be grazed after the first killing frost to utilize the extra growth and to reduce the number of stems or egg laying places for the alfalfa weevil, suggests Joe D. Burns, Associate Agronomist with the University of Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service. "Most farmers have found fewer alfalfa weevils in the grazed areas." But still it has usually taken two sprays to kill the weevil in Middle and East Tennessee where the weevil population is highest. Be sure to fertilize and lime alfalfa by soil test recommendations this fall. The alfalfa plants will be able to survive better the rough winter conditions, and will be in much better condition to give fast growth in the spring in order to combat the alfalfa weevil.

Feed Beef Cows Properly For Strong Healthy Calves
Beef cows should be fed adequate during the winter in order to produce strong healthy calves and to have good reproductive efficiency, assistant animal husbandman with the University of Tennessee Agricultural Extension Service. The winter period is the most critical period in the life of the beef cow. She must receive adequate nutrition during this time in order to develop, give birth to, and suckle a strong healthy calf. She also needs a sufficient amount of properly balanced feed for her own self-preservation. Beef brood cows should go into the winter in fair to good flesh. Cows in such condition can lose some weight during winter without detriment to their reproductive efficiency or productivity, provided the ration is otherwise adequate. A 120 to 140-day feeding period may be necessary for winter in Tennessee. The winter feeding period may be shortened by saving a well-sodded pasture for the brood cow herd after frost. The U-T specialist suggests several wintering ration for the cow herd:

Wild Animals Source Of State Rabies

Charles D. Maberry, Sanitarian, Jackson County Health Department said yesterday that statistics indicate that the rabies problem in Tennessee has become one of wild animals rather than of domestic animals. During the first half of 1965, the Davidson Laboratories, Tennessee Department of Public Health found 520 positive animal heads. Three hundred and eighty-three of three-fourths were of wild animals and 137 or one-fourth were domestic animals. Of these numbers, Jackson County was found to have submitted one positive head, a fox. Laboratory statistics show that the positive wild animals were composed of 319 foxes, 85 skunks, four wildcats, three bats and two opossums. The positive domestic animals were 78 cats, 32 dogs, 15 cats, six horses, four swine and three goats. For the past nine years foxes have comprised the largest number of positive heads examined in the State Laboratories. In view of the rabies reservoir of rabies infection in the wild animal population, the continued large number of positive foxes is noteworthy. Also of significance is the fact that while only 28 per cent of the total number of animal heads submitted for examination during the first half of 1965 were of foxes, 61 per cent of the total number of positive heads were of foxes. It is believed that the fox probably is the responsible agent for the large number of positive heads. The number of positive skunks (85) was nearly twice the number for the entire year of 1964 (30 heads). According to Dr. L. E. Fredrickson, Director, Rabies Control, Tennessee Department of Public Health, "This wild animal rabies problem emphasizes the need for all dog owners to keep their pets' rabies vaccination up at all times. "If it were not for the dog vaccination program in the State, we would be confronted with large numbers of rabid dogs as well as the many rabid wild animals and consequently even more serious human exposures. "Dogs may be vaccinated at the offices of veterinarians as well as at the animal clinics organized by the Health Department." Dr. Fredrickson also issued a word of caution against making pets of skunks and also warned against the handling of apparently sick or paralyzed bats found on the ground. The total number of 520 animal heads found to be positive by the Division of Laboratories, Tennessee Department of Public Health, during the FIRST HALF of 1965 is almost as many as for the ENTIRE YEAR of 1964 when there was a total of 572 positive heads.

Wild Animals Source Of State Rabies

Charles D. Maberry, Sanitarian, Jackson County Health Department said yesterday that statistics indicate that the rabies problem in Tennessee has become one of wild animals rather than of domestic animals. During the first half of 1965, the Davidson Laboratories, Tennessee Department of Public Health found 520 positive animal heads. Three hundred and eighty-three of three-fourths were of wild animals and 137 or one-fourth were domestic animals. Of these numbers, Jackson County was found to have submitted one positive head, a fox. Laboratory statistics show that the positive wild animals were composed of 319 foxes, 85 skunks, four wildcats, three bats and two opossums. The positive domestic animals were 78 cats, 32 dogs, 15 cats, six horses, four swine and three goats. For the past nine years foxes have comprised the largest number of positive heads examined in the State Laboratories. In view of the rabies reservoir of rabies infection in the wild animal population, the continued large number of positive foxes is noteworthy. Also of significance is the fact that while only 28 per cent of the total number of animal heads submitted for examination during the first half of 1965 were of foxes, 61 per cent of the total number of positive heads were of foxes. It is believed that the fox probably is the responsible agent for the large number of positive heads. The number of positive skunks (85) was nearly twice the number for the entire year of 1964 (30 heads). According to Dr. L. E. Fredrickson, Director, Rabies Control, Tennessee Department of Public Health, "This wild animal rabies problem emphasizes the need for all dog owners to keep their pets' rabies vaccination up at all times. "If it were not for the dog vaccination program in the State, we would be confronted with large numbers of rabid dogs as well as the many rabid wild animals and consequently even more serious human exposures. "Dogs may be vaccinated at the offices of veterinarians as well as at the animal clinics organized by the Health Department." Dr. Fredrickson also issued a word of caution against making pets of skunks and also warned against the handling of apparently sick or paralyzed bats found on the ground. The total number of 520 animal heads found to be positive by the Division of Laboratories, Tennessee Department of Public Health, during the FIRST HALF of 1965 is almost as many as for the ENTIRE YEAR of 1964 when there was a total of 572 positive heads.

DEMOCRAT

A MESSAGE FROM THE JACKSON COUNTY DEMOCRAT PARTY

Dear Friends,

The Lord gave you a brain. It is a capital offense not to use it. Much is being thrown at you to try to stir up hate and fear. Scam artists abound. The panderers of hate and fear would have you convinced that Democrats are sinners and Communists. Democrats believe we are all sinners,. but we are clearly not Communists. Here is a short list of what Democrats have worked for and which you now probably enjoy: REA rural electrification, Rural running water systems, Rural telephone systems, Rural wi-fi and TV systems. The list goes on. We, Democrats have fought for and won for all the people: Social Security, Medicare, child nourishment care, etc. This is not Communism. It is good government providing what the people cannot provide for themselves. We believe that we have gained certain precious rights and we believe that if Republicans have their way these rights will be taken from us and given to the rich. If you do not care and do not vote, the Republicans will take or very much diminish you realistic expectations to ALL these rights:

1. Access to quality health care for All.
2. Respectable Public Education for All our children.
3. Your Social Security and Medicare rights.

VOTE

Please consider and vote for our DEMOCRAT candidates:
For Governor - Dr. Jason Martin
For U. S. House - Randal Cooper
For Tennessee House - Tom Cook

Dr. Martin decided to run because he directly witnessed much suffering and death that could have been stopped with competent government administration. For more information on the candidates and the issues please visit our website:
