City Council hears report on Kirksville Active Mobility Plan

By Marty Bachman Daily Express

The Kirksville City Council discussed the Kirksville Active Mobility Plan (KAMP) at a Feb. 14 study session.

After some delays presented by COVID-19 and other issues, the hope is that some of those street changes will begin popping up this year.

The street plan was originally put in place in 2016 and by the fall of 2019, KAMP was approved. KAMP is a revamp of the city's current Master Trails Plan and focuses more closely on improvements to bike and pedestrian mobility in the community. It's a way to better allow multiple forms of transportation in the city, such as bicycles or walking.

According to a staff report that detailed the history of the plan, the city had a master trail map and a sidewalk map for a number of years but the maps did not align with each other. As a result, city staff explored the concept of "complete streets", roads that take a more encompassing approach to thoroughfare development. Despite the city's best intentions, the plan has been slowed considerably due to the pandemic.

In a presentation made to the City Council, Assistant City Manager Ashley Young updated the council on the plan. Young said the "biggest breakthrough" in moving the project forward was the city's decision to have street-striping done inhouse due to being unable to find a bidder for the striping project.

Young said that outside of striping, KAMP includes trails and sidewalks and that grant-funded projects are in the works to analyze the city's historic areas for historic properties while at the same time analyzing the sidewalks in those areas, primarily north and northeast of downtown, to determine where there are sidewalks, where there should be sidewalks and the conditions of the sidewalks as well as ADA compliance issues.

"We held a kick-off meeting for this project last week, so we're already moving forward with that, which is very encouraging,"

The city entered into a lease with the state of Missouri last year for the building to be rented out to the community.

Justice Department sues Missouri over new gun law

By Summer Ballentine Associated Press

JEFFERSON CITY. Mo. — The Department of Justice on Wednesday sued Missouri over a contested new law banning local police from enforcing federal gun laws just days after pulling out of a state crime-fighting partnership.

The Justice Department has said the law, which declares "invalid" federal gun regulations that don't have an equivalent in Missouri law. has scared police departments away from helping the federal government fight violent crime. Agencies risk being sued for $50,000 by private citizens who believe their Second Amendment rights have been violated.

U.S. Attorney General Merrick Garland said in a statement that the law "impedes criminal law enforcement operations in Missouri.'

"A state cannot simply declare federal laws invalid," said Principal Deputy Assistant Attorney General Brian Boynton, head of the Justice Department's Civil Division, in a statement. "This act makes enforcement of federal firearms laws difficult and strains the important law enforcement partnerships that help keep violent criminals off the street."

Federal laws without similar Missouri laws include statutes covering weapons registration and tracking, and possession of firearms by some domestic violence offenders.

Conflict over Missouri's law also wrecked the crime-fighting partnership with U.S. attorneys that Missouri's Republican Attorney General Eric Schmitt has touted for years. Under Schmitt's Safer Streets Initiative, attorneys from his office were deputized as assistant U.S. attorneys to help prosecute violent crimes.

A spokesman for the Missouri Attorney General's Office said the Justice Department on Friday dropped out of the program.

"Time and again, the Biden Administration has put partisan politics ahead of public safety," Schmitt said in a statement in response to the lawsuit. "Make no mistake, the law is on our side in this case, and I intend to beat the Biden Administration in court once again."

The Justice Department lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court for the Western District of Missouri, seeks to block the state from enforcing the law.

A separate state lawsuit seeking to overturn the law is pending in the Missouri Supreme Court. Supreme Court judges earlier this month heard arguments in that case. They did not indicate when they might rule.

you don't like in your newspaper."

Publisher Ron Wallace, who will attend the seminars as well, said that he hopes to build a stronger relationship with readers and the business community.

"I have some ideas but we want to mostly hear from you," Wallace said. "Our company believes in supporting local businesses because they are the foundation of this strong, vibrant community. And since we're all in this together, when we invest in you, then we are investing in ourselves."

Wallace said that considering the significant changes in the overall consumer marketplace over the last two years, the Daily Express felt it was necessary to invest in the community by hiring a marketing consultant to help provide solutions, answer questions and share success stories. Perry and Bachman will be working hand-in-hand with him.

"We're going to explore some ways we can all work together to make our local economy grow in this post-Covid society," Perry said. "We'll take a look at things we can all do in our own businesses to increase profits and increase awareness of the advantages of doing business on a local level.'

HEARING

This was Rijos' second appearance in court, following an appearance to schedule Wednesday's hearing. Now he is scheduled for an arraignment hearing on Feb. 28, but that is likely to not happen on that date.

The impending retirement of 2nd Circuit Judge Russell Steele will add additional time to this case. Steele hits mandatory retirement age this month and Feb. 27 will be his last day.

Further prolonging the process is figuring out who will serve as judge and potentially as prosecutor.

To fill Steele's vacancy, there is an application process with the Governor's office to select an interim judge. That process closed this week, and Adair County Prosecuting Attorney Matt Wilson has applied for the position. An announcement and selection from the Governor's office should happen in the coming weeks.

So with no judge yet in place for the end of the month, Rijos' next hearing would move back. And if Wilson is selected as the new judge, he would have to recuse himself from this case since he was part of the prosecution.

A similar application process will also happen to select a new interim prosecutor. So that adds time to what is already a long process. If Wilson is selected as the interim judge and recuses himself, a new judge will be sought out. The prosecution and defense could look to find one, but if they can't agree, then the Missouri Supreme Court will assign a judge.

That would mean the eventual trial will not happen in Adair County.

There's already an extensive backlog of cases in Adair County due to COVID-19 and ongoing construction at the Adair County Courthouse. Wilson said Wednesday that there are 150 jury trials scheduled for the court between now and August.

The charges of Rijos and Anquan Glover were updated this week to reflect the third death that occurred following the shooting. Parker Sizemore, 18 months, and Braxton Cottrill, 22, were pronounced dead at the scene. Alissa Anders, 18, had survived and received care at University Hospital in Columbia, but died nearly a month after the shooting on Jan. 25.

So instead of two counts of first-degree murder and two counts of first-degree attempted murder, Rijos and Glover now face three murder charges and the one attempted murder charge. One first-degree murder charge warrants life in prison without the possibility of parole.

There remains the chance that these cases become capital cases, which would seek the death penalty.

Glover is scheduled to have an arraignment hearing on Feb. 23. The prosecution has submitted for Glover to do that virtually since he is currently held in Fulton. Glover would need to waive his right to an in-person hearing.

Wilson said Glover has not filed paperwork for a public defender or indicated any other representation.

The investigation for this case remains open and Wilson said additional charges for other people could come. Eden Tracy, Glover's sister, was charged on Feb. 4 for hindering a prosecution after allegedly driving Glover to Kansas City after the shooting happened.

Missouri House seeks to raise bar to amend Constitution

Missouri's GOP-led House is trying again to raise the bar for voters to amend the state's Constitution

By SUMMER BALLENTINE Associated Press

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Missouri's GOP-led House on Wednesday again sought to raise the bar to amend the state's Constitution, this time by requiring a majority of registered voters to pass amendments proposed by voters.

It would make it almost impossible for voter-referred constitutional changes to pass, and critics said it would effectively kill the initiative petition process.

House members advanced the proposal in a voice vote. If passed in the Republican-led Legislature, the proposal would go to a statewide vote.

The change would be sweeping. Currently, a majority of people who cast ballots are needed to change the Constitution. That means if 1 million people vote, 500,001 votes are needed to approve an amendment. If 500,000 people vote, 250,001 votes are needed. The new proposal would change the requirement to a majority of registered voters. In November 2020, there were about 4.3 million registered voters. That would mean it would take roughly 2.15 million votes to pass a constitutional amendment under Republican Rep. Bishop Davidson's plan, regardless of the number of votes cast in any given election.

"What this aims to do is that, if we were to change our Constitution again, we're going to ensure that there really is a genuine consensus," Davidson said, "so much so that it gets people to come out and vote for that very issue."

Republican Rep. Dan Shaul, of Imperial, said the change also would pressure voters and election officials to ensure voter registrations are up to date. If voters are registered in Missouri but have not voted in years, that would inflate the voter registration number and Democrats said the change could mean that in a low-turnout election, a constitutional amendment couldn't pass even if 100% of voters support it.

Roughly 4.2 million Missouri voters were registered during the August 2020 primary election, when the constitutional amendment to increase access to Medicaid health care to hundreds of thousands more low-income adults was up for a vote.

Only about 1.2 million votes were cast in that election, and Medicaid expansion won with about 53% of the vote, or 677,000 votes. That's far short of what would be required to pass amendments under Davidson's plan.

Republicans have been trying to make the initiative petition process harder following the recent passage of several Democratic-backed policies at the polls, including expanding eligibility for Medicaid. Other proposals advancing in the Legislature would require more voter signatures to put an issue on the ballot and other ways to increase the number of votes needed to change the Constitution.

St. Louis Democratic Rep. Peter Merideth said the proposals "disrespect" voters.

"We keep seeing these efforts to try and make it harder for Missourians to amend the Constitution (and) to pass laws that ... the majority in here doesn't like," Merideth said.

Merideth said Davidson's measure would also give the governor, currently Republican Mike Parson, the power to sabotage amendments by putting initiative petitions on the primary ballot, which traditionally have lower voter turnouts compared to general elections.

Davidson said only one constitutional amendment would have passed under his rules in the last several decades: a proposal enacting term limits on lawmakers in 1992.

Davidson said the intent of his proposal would be to raise the bar to enact voter-referred constitutional changes but keep the current, lower standard for any constitutional changes proposed by the Legislature or changes to state law proposed by voters. But several Democrats said as written, the proposal would apply the higher standard for any ballot measure proposed by voters.

National Guard deploys for new emergency: Teacher shortages

By CEDAR ATTANASIO Associated Press / Report for America

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. — On past deployments Army National Guard Spc. Michael Stockwell surveilled a desolate section of the U.S.-Mexico border during a migrant surge, and guarded a ring of checkpoints and fences around New Mexico's state Capitol after the January 2021 insurrection in Washington.

On his current mission, Stockwell helps students with assignments as a substitute science teacher at Alamogordo High School.

"You can't act Army with these kids. You can't speak the same way you would with another soldier with these kids. You can't treat them the same way. You have to be careful with corrective actions," he said with a laugh.

Dozens of National Guard Army and Air Force troops in New Mexico have been stepping in for an emergency unlike others they have responded to before: the shortage of teachers and school staff members that has tested the ability of schools nationwide to continue operating during the coronavirus pandemic.

While many other states and school districts issued pleas for substitute teachers amid omicron-driven surges in infections, New Mexico has been alone in calling out its National Guard members. In 36 of the state's 89 school districts, guard members have traded in mission briefs for lesson plans to work for school systems.

Stockwell has been filling in since late January when his students' teacher moved to an administrative role in another school. One recent day, he shuffled through the rows of school desks, kneeling to meet students eye-to-eye as he helped them with assignments calculating the depth of the earth's crust, and other layers of the planet.

Gov. Michelle Lujan Grisham, a Democrat, called out the guard to help with the acute shortages in a state that like several others has struggled to find enough educators. At least 100 schools had reported closing down for at least one day this school year. New Mexico saw a surge of teacher retirements last fall, and there are currently around 1,000 open teaching positions in a state with about 20,000 teachers. Grisham stressed the guard deployment is a temporary measure and state officials are working to bolster the teaching force and school staff through increased pay and other strategies. In Alamogordo, the teacher shortage peaked on Jan. 13, when 30 teachers, about a third of the teaching staff, were out due to illness, professional training, or family emergencies. "Everybody was enjoying their holiday and things like that, and then they came back and were sick," said Raeh Burns, one of two Alamogordo High School secretaries tasked with filling teaching slots each morning. "I know I'm going to have Mr. Stockwell every morning and that he's OK to go where I need him to go."

Santa Fe, the school district was asked if soldiers would wear uniforms and carry guns, school district spokesperson Cody Dynarski said. Guns were always out of the question. The district decided that soldiers would wear civilian clothing.

Ultimately, Santa Fe and Albuquerque, two of the largest urban school districts, did not receive any soldiers despite their requests as the deployments have prioritized smaller and more rural school districts. Elsewhere, when given the choice, some soldiers have opted for military fatigues over civilian clothes to command respect in the classroom, particularly if they're not much older than their students.

make it more difficult to pass amendments, Shaul said.

"It will provide the encouragement to all involved, from the voter to any of the officials involved in an election to clean up the rolls," Shaul said. "And it will put a spotlight on it for sure."

was a great event," Sadler said, noting that many council members had attended.

Other events scheduled for the armory include the State of the City Address later this month and a diversity festival to be held in April.

"Those are great uses for the facility," he told the council.

He said that the Parks and Recreation Department has been using the armory for indoor activities they were unable to provide to city residents in the past, including pickleball, a sport that involves paddles and a ball similar to a whiffle ball.

He said that they painted some pickleball lines but the slick, concrete floor wasn't so good for playing and the glare from the windows would require some large curtains. He said that they may put more courts in the building and that while there was interest from the community, some local churches, the YMCA and other institutions in the area were already providing pickleball space.

"People aren't banging down our door right now for that use," he told the council.

Sadler said that the Nerf birthday parties being held at the armory were really taking off. A social media post promoting the parties garnered 270 shares in the first day, the most social media action the department has ever received. He said that the department A second vote of approval is needed to send the measure to the Senate.

has already hosted two parties and that 11 more are scheduled.

"We learned very quickly with the Aquatic Center, that people are looking for things to do in the winter for birthday parties," Sadler told the council. "We had 20-something Aquatic birthday parties in February, so there's a lot of use for that."

He said that they are thinking of adding new programs including a "Daddy and Daughter" dance, a play day with inflatables, Imagination Library activities and possibly archery. He said that while many kids received new bicycles for Christmas, it might be a good idea to let them try them out indoors at the armory rather than making them wait until spring.

Sadler spoke of Missouri House Bill 1597, which would convey the armory from the state to the school district. He said that he made an informational presentation on Jan. 25 to state legislators but that the bill is neither in any oversight committee or on any legislative calendar.

Mayor Zac Burden said that while the city continues to make the issue a priority, it was important to get the community involved and lobbying support for the transfer as well.

"This isn't something that can just be passed over," Burden said. "This is an easy thing that doesn't seem to have any opposition, that the state is willing to do and locally, we'd like to see happen — so there may be a way to get our community engaged on this as well: Write your congressman." When Stockwell first walked into the freshman science class, wearing camouflage fatigues and combat boots, some students thought he was just visiting, like a recruiter. Then he took a seat in the teacher's chair.

"When he started taking attendance, I was like, 'whoa,'" said Lilli Terrazas, 15, of Alamogordo. "I was kind of nervous because, like, you know — a man in a uniform. But it was cool. He helped me."

Roughly 80 service members have volunteered to work in schools. The troops have gone through background checks and taken brief courses required for substitute teachers. As substitutes, they don't have to learn much about curriculum, but they need to be attentive to students.

In some communities, there have been concerns raised about soldiers going in classrooms. In Sierra already works with kids in her day job as a student coordinator at a military boarding school in Roswell, which has given her an edge as a substitute.

"Kids just need patience," she said. "I think I just have a lot of patience."

At a middle school on Alamogordo's Holloman Air Force Base, students are used to seeing people in uniform, but not in classrooms.

"I was like, 'Oh, we have somebody in the uniform that's going to teach us. That's kinda awkward.' It was weird," said Andrew George, 12, of his computer classes led by a woman trained in combat and with experience leading a platoon overseas. "Once she introduced herself I was like 'Oh yeah, this is going to be fun."

The substitute, Lt. Amanda Zollo, works in the 911 dispatch center in Albuquerque when she's not training or serving with the guard. She kept students on task during a lesson about cybersecurity, as they created and then attempted to break each other's passwords.

She was subbing for a teacher who was having trouble finding childcare. The principal, Whitney Anderson, said that having Zollo's services meant that for the first time that week she didn't have to take over a classroom herself.

Zollo doesn't talk about her work as an infantry officer with her students, which, after a nervous laugh, she describes as "engaging with and destroying the enemies of the U.S. in close-quarter combat."

Answer to Previous Puzzle

"D'you think you'll be writing a book about it after you get out?"

SUDOKU

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) -- Discuss sensitive issues with care. Information you share may be used against you. Listen and observe to avoid backing yourself into a corner. You'll accomplish the most if you stick close to home.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) -- Offer to help those who lack your skill set. A partnership will prove to be lucrative and engaging. Be open to suggestions and quick to offer a unique twist.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) -- Aligning yourself with like-minded individuals will help you advance faster. Refuse to let anyone use manipulative tactics to push you in a direction that compromises your beliefs.

SUDOKU

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ASTROGRAPH BY EUGENIA LAST

A trendy new look and positive attitude will help make your life easier. Focus on money, health and cleaning up loose ends. A positive change will lift your spirits and give you the push you need to pursue something meaningful. Speak from the heart, share your feelings and join forces with someone who can help you shape a better future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) -- Put the word out there for all to hear. Say what's on your mind and share your plan to make things better, more efficient or fun. Be a participant, make a difference and get more in return.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) -- Take a moment to reflect and digest recent events before commenting. A kind and thoughtful response will make a difference when dealing with people who don't always share your point of view.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) -- A heartfelt discussion will bring you closer to someone who can help you bring about positive change. Put a plan in place and forge into the future with optimism, hope and discipline.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) -- Explain your intentions to people in positions of authority. Taking care of fundamentals first will ease stress and make it easier to reach your goal. Organization and planning are essential.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) -- Stick to your original plan. Don't let anyone sway you in a different direction. Trust in your intellect, common sense and know-how to stay on course. Be wary of meddlesome people.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) -- Emotions will get the best of you if you give in to someone who wants to control you. Make your needs and wants clear.

Be responsible for your happiness instead of letting someone else set the rules.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) -- Stand by close friends, relatives and loved ones. Refuse to let anyone interfere in your personal life. A professional change that can affect your domestic life should be carefully scrutinized.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) -- Don't wait for something to go wrong. A positive move can change the dynamics of meaningful relationships and the path you choose to follow. Don't make others responsible for your happiness.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) -- Walk the walk until you reach your destination. Refuse to give in to unrealistic demands just to keep the peace. Sometimes you must step out on a limb and speak your mind to get what you want.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) -- Keep your plans secret until you have everything in place. The element of surprise will work in your favor and make others take note. It's time to hustle, lead the pack and set the rules.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) -- Do what needs to be done and move along. Don't look back or give someone the chance to derail your objective. Do your own thing, and stop worrying about what others think or do.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) -- Learn from experience and your mistakes. Listen carefully and react accordingly. Put a plan in place that helps you use your money wisely and live your life efficiently. Make needed adjustments.

Truman forward Cade McKnight puts up a shot in the paint during the first half of a win against William Jewell on Feb. 17, 2022. AUSTIN MILLER/DAILY EXPRESS

Bulldogs bury William Jewell to keep momentum going

By Austin Miller Daily Express

Jeff Horner knows the level his players are capable of reaching. He saw the bulk of this year's Truman team power the Bulldogs to the Elite Eight last season, but hasn't always seen that cutthroat mindset this year.

So his message at halftime of Thursday's regular-season home finale against William Jewell was simple.

Put the other team away. He certainly got that Thursday as the Bulldogs (19-6, 13-4 GLVC) bulldozed the Cardinals (12-13, 8-9 GLVC) for an 82-62 win. "For the first team in probably five or six games, we put a team away. It's good to see. With three left, you want to start seeing that as you roll into the tournament — a killer instinct to finish a game off," said forward Cade McKnight, who had a gamehigh 29 points.

"I think he knows how close we are to getting to that next level as a team," McKnight said. "He just expects that out of us going into the tournament, so trying to bring that out of us in these last few games here. So we kind of expect him to be that way with us."

Truman had its chances to run away early but the Cardinals almost always answered the call with an outside shot. Truman led 39-30 at halftime, and Horner wanted that to be the last time the game was close.

"I feel like we've had some good years since I've been here. This is my fourth year and we've won quite a bit," Horner said. "So I think sometimes you get comfortable going out there, thinking you can step on the floor and play." A few minutes into the second half, he liked what he saw.

"Probably about three or four minutes in I was like, 'All right, now we're going,'" Horner said. "This is the team we need to be. You're not going to play a perfect game ever, I understand that, but you can make some mistakes here and there that are the same as what you did before. I thought we shored up some of those mistakes that we had been making — even just from the first half to the second half."

Daily Express

Favoring the even quarters on Thursday night, the Truman women's basketball team used a big fourth quarter to put away William Jewell, 73-61.

The Bulldogs (17-8, 13-4 GLVC) have made a bad habit of starting slow following its 10-game win streak. That was a glaring issue Thursday with Jewell (1-22, 0-17 GLVC), the bottom-ranked team in the conference.

The Cardinals led 16-14 after the first quarter, riding a great night of 3-point shooting. Jewell went 4-for-9 from outside in the first quarter.

Truman bounced back in the second quarter, outscoring Jewell 22-13 to pull away. But that gap closed in the third as Jewell battled back and outscored Truman 20-14 in the quarter. Truman held a one-point lead heading to the fourth.

After an Allison Thomas bucket just before the third quarter ended, the Bulldogs found some momentum. They started the fourth quarter on an 11-2 run, getting a double-digit lead that wouldn't disappear.

"We've been struggling to come out hot, and that's kind of been what's happening to us the last four or five games," said forward Ellie Weltha, who had 21 points and 14 rebounds for the Bulldogs. "We tried to make an emphasis the last couple games to come out hot — both starting the game and out of halftime. It wasn't working too well and we settled in and did what we are supposed to do in the fourth. I'll take that."

Hannah Belanger joined Weltha with 20 points.

Thursday ended up being a bounce back offensive night for the Bulldogs, largely because they needed it. Jewell went 12-for-26 from outside, keeping itself in the game with that great shooting. Truman coach Theo Dean felt their perimeter defense was solid and there were only a couple of Jewell 3s he was unhappy with the defense on. The Cardinals just hit shots when it mattered.

Truman ended up 9-for-25 outside, one of its better nights from deep. For a team that prided itself on 3-point shooting last year, the Bulldogs have had dry spells out there this season. Dean and the Bulldogs remain confident those shots will fall at some point, hoping it's a matter of when.

And looking at last year, the third quarter was Truman's highest-scoring. Fourteen points in a quarter isn't really alarming on some nights. The Bulldogs' offensive irregularity is the reason that sticks out.

"Even if you have a down quarter — you don't want to have them, but you'd want to have them early and not late," Dean said. "Lucky for us, we were able to make up for that down quarter we had in each of the second and fourth quarters today."

Following Truman's program-best 10-game win streak, where the Bulldogs beat then No. 1 Drury, the team has been on a roller coaster, going 4-3 since a Jan. 22 win against Lindenwood.

A 12-point loss at home to Southern Indiana. An 11-point loss at Indianapolis. A 14-point loss at home last Saturday against Illinois-Springfield. Southern Indiana is the only team in that mix below Truman in the current GLVC Point Rating System.

And Jewell, a team that hasn't won a conference game all season, gave Truman an early scare.

The Bulldogs have lacked that mojo they had a month ago. Now is the time to find it again.

"There's nothing that's really changed other than maybe our mentality," Weltha said. "Right now, we're not really playing to win — we're playing not to lose. When do you things like that, you end up losing. You play timid and scared. So just getting our confidence back and getting back into things like we were in January."

Dean believes offense is the key to finding that magic again. Finishing with strong offense in the fourth quarter Thursday, maybe Truman can keep that going.

"That's been the biggest thing for us, our shots," Dean said. "We were scoring 73, 80, we had a 90-point game in that streak as well. Lately, I think the difference has been us not making shots. We haven't touched 70 in a while, so that was good to see (today).

"They can drop their shoulders and take some weight off. They put a lot of weight on those shoulders, and rightfully so. They know how good they are. But you can't put too much pressure on yourself, then the game gets harder." Brashear 49, Bucklin-Macon Co. 35 Brashear — Aubrey Borgmeyer, 16 points; Paige Stutsman, 11 points.

Schuyler Co. 59, Westran 10 Schuyler — Jacie Morris, 12 points.

Green City 42, Linn Co. 39 Green City — LillyAnn McCabe, 16 points; Celeste Athon, 10 points.

No bats, no balls, no fans: Pitchers, catchers don't report

Pitchers and catchers are not starting spring training workouts as scheduled Wednesday

By RONALD BLUM AP Baseball Writer

Max Scherzer won't be starting spring training workouts Wednesday in the warmth of Mets camp in Port St. Lucie, Florida. Marcus Stroman won't be shaking off rust amid the cactus at the Cubs complex in Mesa, Arizona.

No crack of bats or thwacks of balls popping into mitts.

No free agents putting on new uniforms for the first time.

No veterans hugging teammates following months apart.

No kids leaning on chain-link fences waiting for autographs.

No sign of getting ready for an opening day that may not happen on March 31.

Not even a negotiating session.

Neither side made any public statement this week to acknowledge the obvious: Spring training is failing to start on schedule for the first time since 1995, victim of a lockout that stretches into its 77th day Wednesday as players and management squabble over how to apportion an industry with $10 billion annual revenue.

So instead of debating RBIs and ERAs, Major League Baseball has been reduced to disputing CBTs and AAVs.

Pitchers and catchers won't be reporting to camp as scheduled, but MLB doesn't plan to announce a disruption to spring training until Feb. 26 exhibition openers can't be played.

If talks stretch into March — all signs are they will— season openers are likely to be pushed back.

"I am an optimist and I believe we will have

Major League Baseball commissioner Rob Manfred makes comments during a news conference at MLB baseball owners meetings, Thursday, Feb. 10, 2022, in Orlando, Fla. Manfred says spring training remains on hold because of a management lockout and his goal is to reach a labor contract that allows opening day as scheduled on March 31. JOHN RAOUX — STAFF, AP the lockout started: a Zoom gathering on Jan. 13 followed by in-person meetings on Jan. 24-25 and Feb. 1 and 12. Reliever Andrew Miller has been the only player to attend in person and Rockies CEO Dick Montfort the only owner.

Players have demanded significant change, angered that payrolls were $4.05 billion last year, down 4.6% from their record high of just under $4.25 billion in 2017, the first year of the just-expired labor contract.

The union has asked for salary arbitration eligibility to be expanded to two years of major league service, its level from 1974-86, proposed a decrease in revenue sharing and wants new methods for top young players to be credited with additional service time, which the union says would address its allegations of service time manipulation.

Management has said it won't consider cutting revenue sharing or expanding arbitration. The sides are far apart on minimum salaries, the amount of a proposed bonus pool for young stars, and luxury tax thresholds and rates.

"The league was not required to declare a lockout," union head Tony Clark said on Dec. 2 in his when we were most vulnerable because of the proximity of the large revenue dollars associated with the postseason. We wanted to take that option away and try to force the parties to deal with the issues and get an agreement now, which is what we continue to believe is best for the fans."

Both sides seem to believe the other won't make significant moves until the verge of opening day being threatened. Manfred said last week that perhaps four weeks of training would be needed, with additional time for ratification and players to travel to camps.

When players were locked out in 1990, the sides said a minimum three weeks of training were needed ahead of April 2 openers. When March 12 passed without an agreement, MLB said it would wait four additional days before making any announcement. Owners made a new proposal on March 16, leading to weekend negotiations and the announcement of an agreement at 1:18 a.m. EST on March 19.

Training camps opened March 20, exhibition games began March 26 and opening day was pushed back a week to April 9. After announcing on the night of the agreement that a 158-game schedule was contemplated, the sides struck a deal on March 22 to extend the end of the regular season by three days and have each team play a full 162.

US minus Decker comes up short in Olympic final vs. Canada

By STEPHEN WHYNO AP Hockey Writer

BEIJING — The United States may have lost the gold medal 10 minutes into the Olympics.

Two weeks before facing Canada in the women's hockey final, the Americans watched first-line center and arguably their best player, Brianna Decker, get stretchered off the ice with a broken leg early in the tournament opener.

Try as they might to fill the gaping hole in their lineup, missing Decker proved to be too much to overcome in a 3-2 loss to the Canadians in the gold-medal game Thursday.

"I think that we did a good job coming back with it and sticking together as a team," said winger Amanda Kessel, whose goal with 13 seconds left was part of a frantic finish. "But it definitely didn't help us, and we definitely missed her out there."

Replacement Abby Roque couldn't cash in on the scoring chances that Decker might have. Even though Hilary Knight scored her sixth goal in Beijing and Kessel made things interesting in the final minute, the top-end talent for Canada came through in the clutch. With Decker watching on the glass steps away from the bench, the U.S. fell short and settled for silver for a fourth time since women's hockey was introduced at the 1998 Nagano Games.

"It's devastating. It's heartbreaking," Knight said. "It definitely stings. It hurts. It feels like we let our country down."

The U.S. never recovered from Decker getting tripped from behind 9:32 into the first game against Finland, breaking her left fibula and tearing ligaments in her ankle. USA Hockey opted not to bring the six-player taxi squad allowed by International Ice Hockey Federation officials in case of virus outbreaks, and potential replacement Britta Curl couldn't join because she tested positive for COVID-19 before traveling.

All of it added up to adversity that hardened the Americans but eventually caught up to them.

"You lose your best player to a broken leg, you lose a coach, you have a coach go to isolation, you try to bring a player in (and) you can't get that player in — these are just things that happened every day," captain Kendall Coyne Schofield said. "We were able to overcome those. We have so much to be proud of." even more adversity in the weeks before traveling to Beijing. Goaltender Alex Cavallini tore the medial collateral ligament in one of her knees Jan. 14, an injury that did not require surgery but prompted plenty of rehab — and doubt.

"(I) didn't even know if I was going to make it on the flight here," she said after starting the gold-medal game. Cavallini said she felt numb after the loss and added, "I feel like I didn't hold it in there for the team today."

Knight, Kessel, Coyne Schofield and other stars of the golden generation that won five consecutive world championships and gold in Pyeongchang made sure the Americans got to the final, even with a scare or two along the way. Once they were there, the depleted depth showed.

While Canada dressed the full complement of 13 forwards and seven defenders, the U.S. had only 12 forwards at the Olvmpics and coach Joel Johnson played 11. When his team fell behind by multiple goals, he shortened his bench: Knight, Kessel, Coyne Schofield, Roque and fellow forwards Alex Carpenter and Hannah Brandt all played over 20 minutes, while some got little to no ice time in the second and third periods.

an agreement in time to play our regular schedule," baseball Commissioner Rob Manfred said at a news conference last Thursday. "I see missing games as a disastrous outcome for this industry, and we're committed to making an agreement in an effort to avoid that."

Those were Manfred's first comments to media since Dec. 2, the day base-ball's ninth work stoppage began, its first since 1995.

Pace of bargaining has been even slower than pace of games.

There have been just five negotiating sessions on core economics since only comments to media since the lockout began. "Players consider it unnecessary and provocative. This lockout won't pressure or intimate players into a deal that they don't believe is fair."

Manfred said the lockout was "defensive," citing the union's decision to strike late in the 1994 season, which led to a 7 1/2-month stoppage and the first canceled World Series in 90 years.

"If you play without an agreement, you're vulnerable to a strike at any point in time," he said. "What happened in 1994 is the MLBPA picked August, In the meantime, these negotiations appear to be a game of chicken.

"The issues that the players are interested in engaging on has been the same leading up to bargaining, throughout bargaining and will continue to be the same moving forward," Clark said on the day the lockout began. "A fair contract that maintains a market system and addresses the competitive integrity issues that we've highlighted for some time."

A McKnight 3-pointer with 7:44 left put Truman ahead 64-50. The Bulldogs powered ahead from there to finish the job.

Eric Northweather finished with 14 points, Elijah Hazekamp scored 13 and Masen Miller scored 12 for the Bulldogs.

If the Bulldogs needed something or someone to rally around, they got it last Saturday against Illinois-Springfield. Freshman Trey Shearer, who had taken over as the starting point guard, broke his collarbone after diving for a ball. It was a moment where he put his body on the line just for one possession. As Horner has questioned his team's energy at times this season, Shearer's unselfishness has been a spark for every player to leave everything on the floor.

"He risked his season for these guys, to help them get a win. I hope they repay the favor," Horner said. "I'm sure he's our biggest fan and just had surgery today, and I know he watched the game. I hope our guys saw that and are willing to put it on the line for him, too."

Truman has now won six straight, a good rebound after a funky end to January and start to February, where it lost back-to-back games by double figures to Lindenwood and Southern Indiana, and a home loss to Lewis on Feb. 3.

Truman gets a week off before heading to Southwest Baptist, a big game for regional ramifications, before finishing the season at Rockhurst on Feb. 26.

McKnight sat out the game against UIS after hurting his shoulder late. He returned for Monday's win at Maryville and dominated on Thursday. He didn't look hurt at all to start, scoring 10 of Truman's first 13 points against William Jewell. Thursday was a season-high in points, just a few shy of his personal high of 34, which came is last year's Elite Eight bout with Flagler.

"These are the games where I need to kind of assert myself, be a bit more aggressive, and that opens everyone else up," McKnight said.

Horner still feels Truman's best basketball is ahead of them. With the postseason around the corner — an opportunity these players have been waiting almost a year for — the time to play that way is now.

The Bulldogs were the No. 1 seed in the Midwest Region in the first batch of regional rankings. But there are still two games for the Bulldogs to contend for a regular-season conference title, as well as the GLVC Tournament before then.
