Wanted man charged with murder

By Marty Bachman
Daily Express

The Adair County Prosecutor's Office has filed 1st degree murder charges against Jesse Darrell Rongey, 38, of Adair County, who has continued to evade police. Rongey became a suspect when the Adair County Sheriff's Office began an investigation into human remains found in the area of Youngstown Trail in Adair County on July 10. Sheriff officials later identified the victim as Stephen G. Munn.

A warrant was issued for Rongey's arrest and the sheriff's department has asked the public to help locate him. They say he may have changed his appearance by shaving head and beard. He is described as a White, male, 5'7" and 145 pounds. He has brown eyes and black hair. His last know location was in the area of Youngstown Trail. Sheriff officials say that if located, Rongey should be considered armed and dangerous and should not be approached.

In addition to the murder charge, prosecutors have added five other felony charges: Armed Criminal Action, Unlawful Possession Of A Firearm — Dangerous Felon, Tampering With Physical Evidence In Felony Prosecution, Unlawful Use Of Weapon — Subsection 4 — Exhibiting, and Abandonment Of A Corpse.

According to a probable cause statement by the Adair County Sheriff's Office, on the afternoon of July 10, law enforcement officers were dispatched to 22067 Youngstown Trail to conduct a well-being check of Munn and that information given to Central Dispatch was that Munn had been shot and killed by Rongey.

Barricaded subject apprehended without injury, charged with multiple felonies

By Marty Bachman
Daily Express

Kirksville police responded to the 400 block of North Mulanix Street in reference to a reported assault with injury at approximately 3:28 p.m. on Friday, July 22. Police were informed a male suspect, Patrick Myres, 52, of Kirksville, was armed with a firearm and cutting instrument and had committed an assault in that area.

Police attempted to make contact with the Myres, who barricaded himself in a house in the 300 block of East Illinois Street.

Police established a perimeter and attempted to call the Myres out of the house. The Kirksville Special Response Team was activated and responded to the scene. After multiple attempts to call Myres out, police made entry into the home and located Myres hiding in an attic. Myers was taken into custody without further incident and no further injuries were reported.

Myers was charged with three felonies: Assault — 1st Degree Or Attempt, Armed Criminal Action and Unlawful Use Of Weapon — Subsection 4 — Exhibiting.

According to a probable cause statement filed with the Adair County Circuit Court, Kirksville police were dispatched to the 400 block of North Mulanix where a witness told police that Myres was on a bicycle waving a golf club with two steak knives attached to it, at a female. The witness then told poice that he had seen Myres pull a black 9mm handgun in a brown holster from a backpack and point it at another man's head.

Police spoke to the female victim who had a cut on her finger that was bleeding, and the male victim who affirmed that the gun had been put in his face.

Myres retreated into a home on Illinois but was found in the attic by a police SWAT team. He told police that the victims had taken money from his "old lady" and that he was trying to get the money back. He said that the female victim had attacked him and that he was defending himself.

He told police that there was no gun and that he had taped two remotes together to resemble a gun for "the purpose of subliminal messaging."

The male witness told police Myres was within six feet of him when he pointed the gun at him.

"Myres is a danger to the public because of recent events with Myres being violent or fleeing from officers," police wrote in the probable cause statement, noting that in April, a loss prevention agent at Walmart had a knife pulled on him by Myres when he attempted to make contact.

Kirksville Police were assisted by the Adair County Sheriff's Department, Missouri State Highway Patrol, Truman State University Police, Adair County Ambulance and Kirksville Fire Department.

City to launch app that showcases historically significant buildings

By City of Kirksville

Get ready for a fun, free and new way to learn local history with the launch of a historic site tour app. The city of Kirksville received a grant through the National Park Service Historic Preservation Fund, and partnered with app company TravelStorys to create a tour that showcases historically significant buildings in Kirksville. The tour is officially launching on Wednesday, July 27.

Join city staff at 4 p.m. in the council chambers at City Hall for a meeting to kick-off the tour's availability, as well as to instruct residents on how to use it. In total, 100 locations are highlighted as points of interest on the app. Mayor Zac Burden narrates the history for 36 of them.

The TravelStorys app uses GPS to trigger the narration once you get close to the location. People can walk or bike the tour in any order they want, at any time they want.

"The hope is that the app will engage a broader population in historic preservation, and make the rich history of Kirksville more tangible and visible to both residents and visitors to the city," said Kirksville City Planner Mary Turner.

Also found was a large black folder that contained a government issued ID card that belonged to Rongey. Officers found a burn pile approximately three feet in diameter that contained what appeared to be steel cords from several burnt tires, a burnt bone with human characteristics, and at least two partially burnt logs. A search warrant for the property was then obtained and a search of the property yielded more human remains in the burn pile. DNA testing confirmed the remains were Munn.

Other items located during the search was a battery operated DeWalt brand reciprocating saw, a small yellow hand saw that had fibers on the end of the blade, and a pair of overalls hanging from a tree with red stains on the front..

During the investigation, two eyewitnesses to the shooting were located. One of them stated that he/she was close enough to hear Rongey tell Munn that Rongey was going to shoot him, and when Munn raised his hands above his shoulders, Rongey fired a round, striking him in the side. The shooting occurred close to the shed where Rongey was staying at on the property. The eyewitness also stated that the weapon fired at Munn was a shotgun. The eyewitnesses both stated that the shooting occurred during the late morning hours on July 5.

This wasn't Rongey's first brush with the law. On Nov. 24, 2009, Rongey was convicted in Circuit Court of Buchanan County on 1st degree child molestation, and sentenced to four years in the Department of Correction.

The Missouri State Highway Patrol, Missouri State Highway Patrol's Division of Drug and Crime Control, Missouri State Highway Patrol's Violent Crime Support Unit, Missouri State Park Rangers, NEMO Major Case Squad, FBI, FBI's Evidence Response Team, and the Adair County Prosecuting Attorney's Office are assisting the Adair County Sheriff's Office with the investigation.

Anyone with information related to this investigation is urged to call the Adair County Sheriff's Office, Adair County E911 Center, or 660-627-BUST with any information into the whereabouts of Rongey.

Survey seeks worker input on recovery friendly workplaces

By Press Release

COLUMBIA, Mo. – A statewide survey asks workers how well their employers understand substance use and support employees in recovery. Survey results will help design programs to create Recovery Friendly Workplaces across Missouri.

The Recovery Friendly Workplace initiative seeks to foster workplace cultures that promote employee safety, health and well-being; reduce the stigma associated with addiction; and provide resources related to the challenges surrounding substance use disorders.

"We've got to move beyond the 'just say no' employment practices of the 1990s," said Doug Swanson, an MU Extension labor and workforce development specialist. Swanson is a researcher on the federal Rural Opioids Technical Assistance grant that supports the initiative.

"The status quo of drug testing and termination for failed tests just isn't working in today's society when we're facing such different workforce needs and stresses," he said. "Especially now, when the worker shortage has become even more prevalent, we have to look at ways of keeping people in the workforce and supporting their journeys toward recovery."

The online survey asks workers about employer policies and resources related to substance use, addiction and workers in recovery. The questionnaire, at mizzou.us/RFWsurvey, takes about 10 minutes to complete. All responses are anonymous.

Results will build on data from a 2021 survey of employers conducted by MU Extension in partnership with the Missouri Chamber of Commerce and Industry. Other partners in the initiative include the Missouri Hospital Association, the Missouri Department of Mental Health and the Missouri Rural Health Association.

Almost half of the 619 businesses surveyed said they had experienced absenteeism due to drugs, and 19% have had accidents tied to substance use disorder. Nearly 40% cited decreased productivity due to substance use disorder. The problem was especially acute in the manufacturing sector.

Key to recovery friendly workplaces is helping employers develop supportive policies and eliminate barriers to reemployment, Swanson said. Tower Rock Stone Co. in Ste. Genevieve leads the way in showing how it can be done, he said.

Recovery Friendly Workplace success story: Tower Rock Stone Co.

When Tory Turlin, a heavy equipment operator for Tower Rock Stone Co. in Ste. Genevieve, tested positive for meth, his employers did the unexpected. Instead of firing him, they helped him into recovery and supported his return to sobriety, keeping his job waiting for him throughout.

"We know how hard it is to find and keep good employees," said company safety director Tim Dobbela. "The money and time we spend with an employee to work in our type of business is a pretty big investment. We also get to know each other as co-workers and friends. Why would you want to lose all that?"

Turlin says Tower Rock — one of the nation's largest open-pit limestone operations — gave him the support he needed to turn himself around. He recently celebrated receiving his 25-year employee pin and five-year sober pin.

On Aug. 3, Tower Rock will be the first company in the state to be designated a Recovery Friendly Workplace, receiving a certificate recognizing the company's efforts.

Employers want to know if the Tower Rock experience can be replicated, Dobbela said. "Absolutely other employers can do it."

Becoming a Recovery Friendly Workplace

Recovery Friendly Workplace training from MU Extension gives employers greater confidence in hiring workers in recovery. Learn more about being designated a Recovery Friendly Workplace at recoveryfriendlymo.com/rfw-designation.

The online curriculum was developed with input from employers and addiction recovery specialists through surveys and extensive community conversations. The training includes practical issues such as administering Narcan if an employee relapses and how to support an employee's recovery.

The initiative helps address the needs of Missourians devastated by addiction and provides a much-needed path back to the workforce, says Ann McCauley of MU Extension's Community Health program. McCauley is project director for the federal Rural Opioids Technical Assistance grant that supports the initiative.

Four reasons you may get a computer virus

By Special to The Express

The world was given a crash course on how viruses spread when the novel coronavirus COVID-19 rapidly moved across the world in 2020. Biological viruses easily can spread from person to person, but computers can be afflicted by their own types of viruses that also can spread quickly.

Stopping computer viruses involves becoming familiar with just what they are and where viruses originate. According to Malwarebytes, a cybersecurity company, a computer virus requires a host program. It then requires user action to transmit that virus from one system to another. At that point, the virus attaches a bit of its own malicious code to other files or replaces files outright with copies of itself.

While viruses and malware tend to be grouped together, some forms of malware, like computer worms, are able to spread across systems and networks on their own. That can make them even more dangerous and widespread.

Computer viruses do not generate naturally. They need to be created by programmers. These programmers may do so to steal victims' identities, to get around restricted data, for bragging rites, or to damage organizations or competing businesses. A virus, for example, may sit undetected on your computer monitoring online usage, recording credit card information, passwords or identity information, advises Interworks, a technology company.

Most of the time viruses make entry to your computer or other device through attachments or links. Here are four common places viruses and malware lie in wait.

1. Downloaded purchases: Downloading software, games, files, and other technology from the internet is not without risk. There are many reputable sites, but unknown downloads may carry viruses.

2. Network links: More than one device hooked up to a network means any computer on that network is vulnerable should one device pick up a virus. All connected computers can be compromised by one virus.

3. Email attachments: Computer How To Guide states that emails are one of the most common ways viruses are downloaded onto computers. Opening an email from someone you don't know can trigger malware or a virus. Never click on a link or open an attachment from an unknown sender.

4. Messaging apps: Apps that enable people to communicate through chat on desktop or mobile systems can be spreaders of viruses, too. Do not visit links posted in messaging applications unless you are sure they are from safe sites. Sometimes messenger services can be hacked, so even if links come from relatives or friends, verify those links before clicking on them.

Adair County Covid cases jump to 81

By Adair County Health Department

After newly reported Covid-19 cases fell from 77 to 66 during the seven-day period from July 5 to July 11, they rose from 66 to 81 in the most recent period, July 12 through July 18. The jump reflects what is occurring across the country with steady increases in the number of cases.

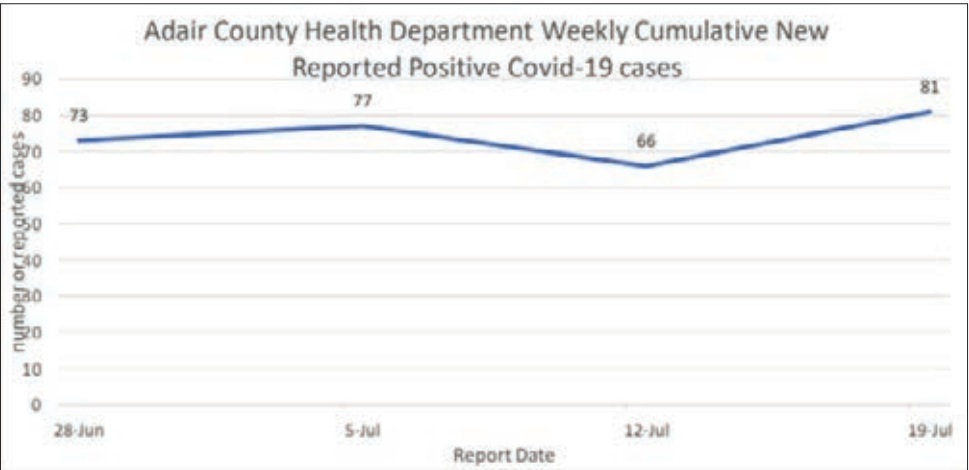

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), the Omicron BA.5 subvariant is now responsible for 78 percent of the new cases nationwide. The subvariant appears to get around immune protections in those people who have had prior Covid-19 infections. The CDC also says there is evidence that the BA.5 subvariant and has rendered existing vaccines less effective, although the vaccines continue to provide protection against serious disease and death.

The CDC recommends that children ages 6 months to 4 years be vaccinated, and that everyone ages 5 and older be fully vaccinated and receive one booster dose. Moreover, it recommends that those ages 50 and older and some individuals ages 12 to 49 who are moderately or severely immunocompromised also receive a second booster.

The Adair County Health Department continues to administer Pfizer Covid-19 vaccines and boosters. Vaccines are administered to those ages 12 and older on Tuesdays from 2 to 4 p.m., and to those ages 5 through 11 on Thursdays from 3 to 5:30 p.m. The Health Department is now administering the Pfizer vaccine to children ages 6 months to 4 years old from 9 to 11 a.m. on Thursdays.

To schedule an appointment for the appropriate dose of vaccine or booster, or if you have questions regarding the timing of primary vaccines and booster doses, call the Adair County Health Department at 660-665-8491.

How to spot mold in your home

By Special to The Express

Homes are safe havens and relaxing spaces for their residents. No one wants to imagine the place they call home putting their health in jeopardy, but that's precisely the case for people who live in homes where mold is present.

The United States Environmental Protection Agency notes that molds are not usually a problem indoors. However, when they are, molds produce allergens, irritants and potentially toxic substances. Molds can become problematic when spores land on wet or damp surfaces and begin growing. If inhaled, those spores can cause allergic reactions in people with asthma who have mold allergies. Even people without such allergies may suffer from irritated eyes, skin, nose, throat, or lungs due to exposure to mold. Mold also can affect the home itself, as the EPA notes that mold gradually destroys the things it grows on, potentially leading to costly remediation and renovation expenses.

Mold is sometimes visible in parts of a home. For example, mold problems in a bathroom may be recognizable when tiny black spots are present on surfaces that frequently get wet. Those areas may gradually expand from small spots and cover larger areas, such as windowsills and areas around the bathtub. Other signs indicating the presence of mold may be less recognizable though potentially just as harmful. That's one reason why it makes sense for everyone to learn how to spot mold in a home.

- Learn what mold looks like. Not all molds are black. Some are white and look like thread, but they also can have a gray-brown or gray-green tint. When peeling old wallpaper, some people may notice orange, pink or purple growth on the newly exposed walls, and that's likely mold.
- Identify problems with paint. If paint is peeling, bubbling or cracking, it's likely indicative of a mold issue. In such instances, contact a mold remediation specialist rather than simply painting over the affected areas with a fresh coat of paint.

- Conduct a smell test. Most molds will emit a damp, musty odor. However, a lack of this distinct and unpleasant smell should not lead individuals to conclude they don't have a mold issue, as some molds do not produce an odor. In addition, the EPA notes that the smell of indoor molds can differ depending on the type of mold present in the home. Homeowners who have experienced mold issues in the past should not ignore a foul odor simply because it smells different from a previous infestation. Contact a mold remediation professional if you suspect an unpleasant smell could be a byproduct of mold.

Mold can be harmful to homes and humans. Anyone who suspects their home has a mold problem is urged to contact a remediation specialist as soon as possible.

Missouri delegation makes the case for ARPA-H Headquarters to be located in Missouri

By Press Release

WASHINGTON – This week, the entire Missouri congressional delegation, led by U.S. Senator Roy Blunt (Mo.), the top Republican on the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and related agencies, sent a letter to U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) Secretary Xavier Becerra urging the department to select Missouri for the new Advanced Research Projects Agency for Health (ARPA-H) headquarters. ARPA-H will utilize public-private partnerships to dramatically accelerate the development and approval of new treatments and technologies, and to respond to the most daunting health problems Americans face today.

“We write to express our strong support to locate the Advanced Research Projects Agency for Health (ARPA-H) in the State of Missouri, where an extraordinary biomedical ecosystem already exists,” the delegation said. “Missouri is home to world-class universities and the health and technology innovation districts created in tandem with hospitals, a convergence of a wide variety of technical specialties with health as a unifying theme, entrepreneurial talent, cutting-edge independent research centers, multinational health companies, and unique research facilities.”

In the letter, the members highlight Missouri universities whose innovation districts and partnerships with hospitals combine traditional health sectors with emerging technologies to help prepare for future health challenges. The members cite successful partnerships across the state, including the Cortex Innovation Community in St. Louis, the UMKC Health Sciences District in Kansas City, and the One Health and Mizzou Forward initiative in Columbia.

The delegation continued, “With the state’s heritage of life science, biopharmaceutical, veterinary medicine, and health care services, we are integrating nanoscience, IT/software, law, and finance. ... Leveraging Missouri’s universities, innovation districts, health corporations, and unique research facilities will serve as a benefit to ARPA-H and we hope the state will receive due consideration when choosing a location for ARPA-H.”

NFL enters media streaming marketplace with ‘NFL+’ service

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The NFL is making its move into offering its own media streaming platform.

The league announced that “NFL+” launched on Monday. Owners were briefed about it during the league meetings in May, while Brian Rolapp, the NFL’s chief media and business officer, confirmed in a column for “Sports Illustrated” last week that it would be starting this season.

Commissioner Roger Goodell said in a phone interview with The Associated Press that the direct-to-consumer offering gives the league the ability to understand what fans and non-fans are seeking in terms of content and customize it for them.

“We think this is a major step forward. It will evolve, build and get better as more and more content becomes available on this platform. The work that we’ve done either with other offerings or research has helped us sort of frame this in a way that we think would be very attractive and engage our fans.”

The launch of “NFL+” comes as 15 games on Thursday night will be carried exclusively on Amazon Prime Video.

The “Sunday Ticket” package of out-of-market Sunday games currently will expire at the end of this season. Amazon, Apple and Google have emerged as the front-runners to take over the rights that DirecTV has held since 1994.

“NFL+” will allow fans to view out-of-market preseason games on all devices; local and national regular-season and postseason games on mobile devices; team and national radio feeds, NFL Network shows on-demand along with the NFL Films archive. It could also include content produced by teams. It will be able to be accessed through the NFL app and website.

It is an upgrade of the “Game Pass” service that has been available to fans in the United States since 2015. The league began offering a package in which fans could watch replays of games online — appropriately called “Game Rewind” — in 2009. It started to gain favor among fans and analysts in 2012 when it added coaches film, including two angles where all 22 players on the field could be viewed.

The league has also offered out-of-market preseason games either through a separate package or “Game Pass” in previous seasons.

The key to the package is the live regular-season and playoff games. The league regained the mobile rights after its contracts with mobile carriers expired at the end of last season.

“NFL+” will be available for $4.99/month or $39.99/year. A premium package — which includes full and condensed game replays as well as the coaches film — is $9.99/month or $79.99/year. The “Game Pass” package was previously available for $100/year. “NFL+” will part of fans who purchase season tickets for their teams.

“We’ve had our toe in the water with ‘Game Pass,’ but this is our next step forward,” said Hans Schroeder, the executive vice president of NFL Media. “We think this will be attractive for fans and sort of bring down the price point for fans on a monthly basis. There is an eye on future content down the road. We’re excited to see where this can go this year and beyond.”

Goodell said recently the league is hoping to make a decision about “Sunday Ticket” and possibly selling an equity stake in NFL Media properties by the end of the year.

Big Papi a big hit at his Baseball Hall of Fame induction

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — David Ortiz promised to speak from the heart. As usual, Big Papi delivered.

His megawatt smile tinged with a tad of emotion, the former Boston Red Sox slugger was inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame on Sunday — after his daughter Alexandra sang the national anthem — and was humbled by his surroundings.

“I want to thank God for giving me the opportunity to be here today and for giving me the joy of being able to travel this path, this path that has allowed me to be here today and hopefully inspire everyone to believe in yourself,” Ortiz said.

Ortiz was greeted by a raucous crowd chanting “Papi! Papi!” as many fans made the four-hour drive from the vicinity of Fenway Park to attend the festivities.

When he took the stage, Ortiz pointed skyward as is his wont in special moments, a way of honoring his late mother, who died two decades ago after a car accident.

“I always tried to live my life in a way ... so I can make a positive influence in the world,” said the 46-year-old Ortiz, just the 58th player elected in his first year on the ballot. “And if my story can remind you of anything, let it remind you that when you believe in someone you can change the world, you can change their future, just like so many people believed in me.”

Ortiz, who survived a nightclub shooting in the Dominican Republic three years ago, soaked in the celebration.

Legions of fans crowded onto the field adjacent to Clark Sports Center, sun umbrellas and Dominican Republic flags sprinkled all around. Ortiz’s No. 34 was seemingly everywhere as fans chanted and sang in Spanish. A sign that read ‘I Love U’ summed up the admiration for Big Papi on his special day.

Six Era Committee selections also comprised in the Class of 2022 — former Twins teammates Jim Kaat and Tony Oliva, the late Minnie Miñoso, former Dodgers star and Mets manager Gil Hodges, and Black pioneers Buck O’Neil and Bud Fowler.

In 14 years with the Red Sox, Ortiz hit 500 homers — 17 of them in the postseason.

If there was a blemish, there was a report by The New York Times that said he tested positive during the 2003 survey drug test conducted by MLB and the players’ association. Ortiz was never penalized for performance-enhancing drugs, and MLB and the union never confirmed there was a positive test. The sides said the survey test results never were vetted to the point of the testing with penalties that started in 2004.

That was far from the mind on this day as Ortiz paid tribute to many in both English and Spanish.

The 83-year-old Kaat, now a broadcaster for the Twins, pitched for a quarter of a century, winning a World Series a year before retiring in 1983. He thanked his dad for instilling the discipline needed to succeed, his wife for always being there, and his former minor league manager, 94-year-old Jack McKeon, who was in the audience.

“I am humbled and honored to be included in this fraternity, some of the greatest players to play the game, and I thank you for being part of this wonderful day,” said Kaat, a native of Zeeland, Michigan.

Oliva was the American League Rookie of the Year in 1964, led the league in hits five times, and became the first player in major league history to win batting titles in each of his first two seasons, finishing with a lifetime average of .304 in 15 seasons with the Twins.

Oliva got his chance in part because of Miñoso, the Cuban Comet.

“I’ve been so blessed, so lucky,” said Oliva, who turned 84 four days ago. “I appreciate it very much. I’d like to say thank you to all those friends, all those wonderful friends, all those friends from all over the world. I appreciated it very much, very much.”

Miñoso grew up on a sugar plantation and played ball on weekends as a kid and became a star with the New York Cubans in the Negro Leagues before becoming the first Black Latino player in the major leagues in 1949, two years after Jackie Robinson broke in. To Cuban players, Miñoso was the Jackie Robinson of Latino America and starred for the White Sox in the 1950s. He was a nine-time All-Star and finished his career with 2,110 hits and a .299 batting average. He died in 2015.

Newgarden out of hospital, Ferrucci on standby for IndyCar

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DES MOINES, Iowa — Two-time IndyCar champion Josef Newgarden was released from a Des Moines hospital on Monday and returned to his Tennessee home, where he will wait for an evaluation to determine if he can race this weekend at Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Team Penske named Santino Ferrucci as its standby driver in case Newgarden is not medically cleared to compete on the road course at Indianapolis. Newgarden collapsed in the motorhome lot Sunday at Iowa Speedway following a late crash in a race he had dominated.

Although the American was cleared by the IndyCar medical staff after his crash, he later lost consciousness and fell to the ground in the bus lot, striking the back of his head. He was airlifted from the track in Newton to MercyOne Des Moines Medical Center to speed the 45-minute journey and avoid traffic from the post-race Blake Shelton concert.

Team Penske said Sunday night that all tests on Newgarden had been negative but he was hospitalized overnight for further evaluation.

Newgarden was already scheduled for a Thursday evaluation in Indianapolis to determine if he can compete Saturday. Per IndyCar regulations, a driver receives a secondary evaluation when a crash registers more than 80 G-forces.

There was no immediate word from IndyCar or Team Penske on the force of Newgarden’s hit, but the scheduled second medical check would indicate his hit exceeded the threshold.

Newgarden, who won Saturday’s race, dominated and led 148 of the 300 laps while trying to sweep the doubleheader weekend. But something on his Team Penske car broke with 64 laps remaining, and the 31-year-old from Tennessee spun hard into the outside wall — creating an opening for Pato O’Ward of Arrow McLaren SP to win the race.

Newgarden was visibly rattled after his mandatory check in the infield care center after the crash. He said the crash into the wall “definitely rocked me. I got a little bit shaken from it, but I’m OK.

“Definitely was a bit of a shot. I want to cry, so sad for my team. I don’t know what happened,” New-

Chevrolet’s initial diagnosis was that the suspension broke on Newgarden’s car.

Newgarden was showing as the IndyCar points leader at the time of his crash; he’s now tied for third in the standings with Scott Dixon.

Ferrucci is also scheduled to race the Xfinity Series event this shared weekend between NASCAR and IndyCar.

Rare 1952 Mantle baseball card going up for auction

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — A decades-old, mint condition Mickey Mantle baseball card could break a record at auction.

The collector’s item from 1952 features one of baseball’s most celebrated and charismatic legends, and is widely regarded as one of just a handful in near-perfect condition.

It’s estimated the final cost of the card could exceed $10 million when the auction ends Aug. 27. The record is $6.6 million for a 1909 Honus Wagner card that was sold at auction a year ago, months after another 70-year-old Mantle card fetched $5.2 million.

Interest was already heavy Monday when the auction debuted online, with bidding already up to at least $4.2 million.

No matter the final price for the rare Mantle rookie card, it will be a hefty profit for the current owner, a New Jersey waste management entrepreneur who bought it for $50,000 at a New York City show in 1991.

“Every time he got up to the plate, the crowd would go crazy, the roars would be there. And he never disappointed you. ... He had that aura about him,” card owner Anthony Giordano said of Mantle, who spent his entire career with the New York Yankees from 1951 to 1968. “Whether you’re from the New York area or not, or a Yankees fan, it was always Mickey Mantle that was highlighted.”

The switch-hitting Mantle — “the Mick” — was a Triple Crown winner in 1956, a three-time American League MVP and a seven-time World Series champion. The Hall of Famer, who died in 1995, was considered a humble player on the field. When he hit a

“I figured the pitcher already felt bad enough without me showing him up rounding the bases,” Mantle once said.

Sudden arena idea angers, unnerves Philadelphia’s Chinatown

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PHILADELPHIA — Wei Chen wants people who visit Philadelphia’s Chinatown to look through the community’s gateway arch and see the residents chatting in Mandarin on the steps to the apartments above or the vendors selling traditional Chinese food to families walking by, not a giant Philadelphia 76ers arena a block away.

“These apartments are full of people who are low-income, who are elderly people, and people who are new immigrants,” said Chen, the community engagement director for Asian Americans United. “You have to think about how Chinatown was created. We weren’t welcome in other neighborhoods.”

Chen, along with other organizers and members of Chinatown, said they were surprised by the Philadelphia 76ers’ announcement Thursday of a proposal to build a $1.3 billion arena just a block from the community’s gateway arch. They said neither the organization nor the property owner reached out for community input before the announcement.

A spokesperson for 76 Devcorp, the development company behind the arena, said in an emailed statement that the process is in its early stages — years from “anything changing” — and that the company planned to work with the community to help shape the project and ensure

“We are very sensitive to the Chinatown community’s concern in light of prior Center City proposals and are committed to listening to and working with the community in a way that hasn’t happened before,” the statement read.

Those are promises many in Chinatown have heard before. After decades of developments — like the Pennsylvania Convention Center, which took homes from 200 families; Interstate 676, also known as the Vine Street Expressway, which threatened to cut off parts of the community — and proposals for a jail, a casino and another sports facility that all were beaten back by the community, residents have a deep playbook of their own to choose from.

Across the country, there are fewer than 50 Chinatowns, some more vibrant and larger than others. Many took root in areas of cities that were thought of as red light districts. And as cities grew and changed around those communities, many Chinatowns have been under threat from gentrification or development.

Like others, the community in Philadelphia is just bouncing back after losing business during the pandemic, when Chinatown’s restaurants were shuttered for dining-in. Much of the senior population didn’t want to leave the neighborhood because of the fourfold increase since 2019 in hate crimes against people of Asian descent.

“This is an ongoing struggle for Chinatowns and other downtown communities of color and of low income,” said historian John Kuo Wei Tchen, director of Rutgers University’s Clement Price Institute on Ethnicity, Culture and the Modern Experience. “In the case of Chinatowns that play important symbolic roles for the cosmopolitan claims of the city, sport authority interests often trump such roles.”

The 76ers’ current home is in south Philadelphia, a few miles from downtown, along with most of the city’s other pro sports teams.

Many Chinatown residents and business owners are concerned that if a new arena is built, affordable street parking will disappear, traffic will increase, and holding traditional celebrations and festivals could become more difficult. But they are also worried that already-increasing property values could spike and force many who depend on the community to leave.

Debbie Wei is a founding member of Asian Americans United, started in Philadelphia in the 1980s to unite people of Asian ancestry to build the community and fight oppression. She was also an organizer of the protests against a proposed Phillies baseball stadium that city officials wanted to place at Chinatown’s door in 2000.

“If it’s not a stadium, it’s a highway or a convention center. Seattle ... Detroit ... Chicago, Boston, and then Washington, D.C. I have friends who grew up in Chinatown in D.C. and it’s just been decimated,” Wei said.

The home of the Washington Capitals hockey team and the Wizards basketball team moved to D.C.’s Chinatown community in 1997. Economic development experts say the increased foot traffic and more desirable real estate brought revitalization, but for the Chinatown community it meant rising rents and chain restaurants forcing them out.

Census numbers show that in 1990, about 66% of the people who lived in the D.C. Chinatown area identified as Asian American. That dwindled to 21% in 2010. And as of the 2020 census, that had dropped to about 18% in the two tracts that make up parts of Chinatown.

Wei described signs for chains like CVS and Starbucks appearing with Chinese translations beside them, calling it a “cosmetic illusion.” Chen fears the changes to D.C.’s Chinatown could happen to Philadelphia.

“If you go inside a restaurant or a business, the workers aren’t Asian anymore. The owner isn’t Asian. And a lot of the customers aren’t Asian,” he said. “So where is the Chinatown? It’s not there anymore.”

But in Philadelphia, Chinese-speaking households have been one of the fastest-growing populations, according to the census. The community passed the 5% threshold recently, meaning Chinese languages became official ballot languages. Asian and other immigrant communities contributed to the city reversing a decades-long trend of losing population in recent censuses.

Helen Gym, the first Asian American woman to serve on Philadelphia City Council and an at-large member, held up two T-shirts from previous fights against potentially detrimental developments wanting to come to Chinatown. The first says, “No stadium in Chinatown,” and the second crossed out the word stadium and replaces it with “casino,” for the 2008 proposal that hoped to put a casino near the current proposal for the arena.

Gym previously joined the fight against the stadium and said that now, as a council member, she is “extremely skeptical” of the 76ers proposal.

“To us, this is one of the most vital parts and neighborhoods and communities in the city of Philadelphia,” Gym said. “This side has been a community that has continued to invest in itself, in its people, in small businesses. And in fact, this side is the one that has grown the health and well-being of the city.”

After the stadium failed in 2000, Gym said, the community developed the nearby space north of the expressway to add a public charter school, a community center, extensions of the Chinese Christian Church, the first Cambodian arts center and other cultural organizations.

Wei was the first principal of that school, the Folk Arts Cultural Treasures charter school. She said the building’s owner turned down offers from developers who wanted to build condos.

“People don’t understand what Chinatown means to the people of this community, people all over the area who consider this their home,” Wei said.

“There are precious few communities, real communities, left in Philadelphia. They are not just geographic; they are about relationships and memories. They are a place-based core that has been systematically destroyed not just in Philadelphia and the U.S.; but around the world,” Wei said. “And once Chinatown is gone, it’s gone. You can’t rebuild it.”

HALL

“From a humble ranch in Cuba to the National Baseball Hall of Fame, what a way to honor such a remarkable life lived and to service in the sport he loved. He would have been so very proud to be a Hall of Famer,” said his wife, Sharon.

Irene Hodges spoke on behalf of her father, a hard-hitting first baseman who had 370 homers and 1,274 RBIs in 18 major league seasons — all but the last two with the Dodgers. He retired in 1963 and five years later was hired to manage the Mets, leading them in 1969 to their improbable World Series victory over the Baltimore Orioles before dying of a heart attack three years later at 47.

“He would be so proud. Today I am especially happy for my mother,” Irene Hodges said. “When the call came from the Hall of Fame ... I began sobbing probably as much as I did when I lost my father. I was so beyond happy for him, and even thrilled that my mom at 95 would be able hear this news. My mom is watching today from our home in Brooklyn.”

O’Neil, who played for the Kansas City Monarchs in the Negro Leagues and was a tireless advocate for the game until his death in 2006, was represented by a niece, Dr. Angela Terry.

“He would remind all of us that his playing career was in the Negro Leagues and today he was being inducted into the same class as a Black baseball pioneer, Bud Fowler, and a former Negro League All-Star, Minnie Miñoso,” Terry said. “Man, oh man. Nothing could be better. Thank you for loving our uncle.”

Hall of Famer Dave Winfield paid tribute to Fowler, the first Black to play on a white professional team nearly seven decades before Robinson broke the color barrier with the Dodgers. Fowler also is the first person from the Cooperstown area to receive the honor. He was born in nearby Fort Plain but grew up in Cooperstown, where he learned to play the game.

A second baseman who batted just over .300 in 13 seasons, Fowler was signed at age 20 by a all-white professional team in Massachusetts in 1878. It was the start of a 13-year career that saw him play for 18 teams, including four in one year, the constant moves a direct reflection of the racism he had to endure.

“I ask that you remember Bud Fowler in a broad context,” Winfield said. “Remember him as a skilled athlete who endured obstacles that are hard to imagine today. I personally hope that all of you will see him as a man who loved the game of baseball from its beginning.”

MANTLE

As for the baseball card, its rarity is on par with its subject’s mythical reputation.

“The quality of the card is the key,” said Derek Grady, the executive vice president of sports auctions for Heritage Auctions, which is running the bidding. “Four sharp corners, the gloss and the color jumps off the card.”

Grady said that the collectibles market is having a renaissance, noting that cards that are “the creme de la creme, the best of the best, are still selling despite the economy right now” and that Mantle, “the king” of baseball cards, “has always done well.”

Giordano, 75, said it was time to give the Mantle card a new home.

“It’s the right thing to do,” he said. “My boys and I have had the cards for over 30 years, and we’ve enjoyed it. We’ve enjoyed showing anybody that’s close to me — friends and relatives — and I think it’s time for someone else.”

The card will be on display in Atlantic City from Wednesday through Sunday at the National Sports Collectors Convention, and at the New York office of Heritage Auctions the following week.

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

What to Include in a Business Plan

By: Anastasia Tiedemann

So you've been told by your banker that in order to borrow funds, you will need a business plan. Intimidated? Don't be!

My advice is to take it a topic at a time, and get the information out of your head and on paper so you can work with it.

Every business plan contains the following information:

- 1) Business Description
  - a. The problem you are addressing, and your solution.
  - b. Business type, location, and legal description.
  - c. Products & services offered.
  - d. Goals and objectives.
  - e. Discuss profitability and how the business will make money.
- 2) Marketing plan
  - a. Identify your customer segments & target markets.
  - b. How will you attract customers? What is your Marketing Strategy?
  - c. Who is your Competition and how are you different or better?
  - d. Describe your pricing strategy and sales.
- 3) Management
  - a. List the key managers/employees and their roles.
  - b. Describe their past experience and how it will benefit the business.
- 4) Financial Management
  - a. Determine start up costs and monthly operating expenses.
  - b. Provide a realistic view of sales projections.
  - c. Determine a budget.

You can find many different kinds of templates for business plans online. And remember to reach out to your local SBDC; we can help with the industry research and other data you will need – as well as forecast projections!
