By Marty Bachman
Daily Express

Kirksville Cub Scout Pack 404 held their 1st-ever Cub Scout Roar on Saturday, Aug. 27. The troop held a similar Roar in the spring that was considered a great success. The scouts were able to spend the day doing a variety of activities such as shooting arrows in an archery range as well as BB guns in an inflatable Daisy gun range. Other activities included shooting off water rockets and racing sail boats they built in the Rain Gutter Regatta. The purpose of the event is to show local area youth the fun they can have in scouting.

Truman State University McNair Program receives largest grant award in Missouri

By Truman State University

Truman State University recently received a five-year award of more than $1.5 million in support of the University's McNair Scholars Program to help college students prepare for postgraduate studies.

Of the 189 new grants distributed by the U.S. Department of Education, Truman's award ranked in the top 20 in the nation. The University's total of $1,517,720 was the largest among the four awards distributed in the state of Missouri this year.

"For 30 years, McNair Scholars have been a dedicated and talented group of Truman students who commit to completing additional work while enrolled in rigorous undergraduate programs of study," said Heather Cianciola, Truman's McNair director. "They do this to ensure that their goals for advanced education stay within reach. For many first-generation, low-income and underrepresented students, opportunities to complete master's and doctoral degree programs evaporate if students do not have consistent access to financial resources and effective preparation. The McNair program grant from the U.S. Department of Education enables Truman to have a vibrant and academically driven community of student-leaders who combine their own strengths with McNair's targeted resources and services. As a result, what Truman McNair alumni accomplish for themselves and their communities year after year is never surprising and always amazing and worth celebrating."

The Ronald E. McNair Postbaccalaureate Achievement Program honors the second African American to fly in space. After his death in the Challenger space shuttle accident in 1986, members of Congress provided funding for the McNair program. It is one of eight federal TRIO programs designed to remove social, academic and cultural barriers to students' higher education goals.

Truman's McNair program works with highly qualified students across all academic majors to provide effective preparation for graduate study toward doctoral degrees. This includes: academic and social support through regular programming and academic counseling; funding for original, faculty-mentored undergraduate research, scholarly and creative projects; summer research internships; travel to conferences and graduate program visits; and graduate application costs.

Truman has been affiliated with the McNair program since 1992, and the University supports more than 30 scholars each year. In its history, 421 students have participated in the program with more than 75% who have completed or are currently enrolled in graduate studies and 26% who have completed a Ph.D. or other terminal degree.

Old Town Neighborhood collaborates with Kirksville Police Department to form Neighborhood Watch group

By Kirksville Police Department

Residents of Kirksville's Old Town Neighborhood gathered for a photo to commemorate the placement of their new Neighborhood Watch signs.

The Old Town Neighborhood is the designation given to the area bounded by East Illinois, Marion, East Jefferson and North Baltimore streets, just off of Kirksville's Downtown Square. Earlier this year, residents of the neighborhood banded together to form the city's first Neighborhood Watch group in collaboration with the Kirksville Police Department.

The National Neighborhood Watch Program is a division of the National Sheriffs' Association. To learn more about the program, visit <https://www.nnw.org/>.

These programs are led by the citizens of their own neighborhoods, not law enforcement. These groups assist law enforcement by being eyes and ears and a source of information for events occurring in their neighborhood. Law enforcement will also assist the Neighborhood Watch to organize, provide guidance on spotting, reporting and addressing suspicious activity and crime, and seeing to the transfer of relevant information to and from the group.

Contact the Kirksville Police Department (660-785-6945) for inquiries about starting a watch in your neighborhood if you have more than five households willing to participate. A Neighborhood Watch liaison officer will be assigned to your group to get you started.

Beware the zucchini

They arrive in late summer, lurking within paper bags and tattered cardboard boxes. It's an old menace — one that finds its way to the surface of our hungry society each summer. We bring it on ourselves; the assault is ongoing and unstoppable.

In an attempt to prove ourselves worthy of owning dirt, we decide to 'put in a little garden.' Just a small one. With tomatoes. Corn. Onions. And maybe JUST A FEW ZUCCHINI.

The garden grows, and the bragging begins. The sizes of green beans are shown with stretched digits. The circumferences of tomatoes are displayed by an 'OK' sign at first; they swell to larger circles of various boastful ball-shapes.

Corn stalks climb from knee to thigh to shoulder height, and we report the growth to anybody who'll listen.

But nobody talks about their zucchini. It's a topic best left alone, like Grandpa's penchant for cough syrup or Aunt Mabel's smelly feet. The zucchini are growing, though. Right there, in the last row of everybody's garden. They are ballooning to gargantuan proportions and in monstrous multitudes.

Harvest time arrives. We eat our juicy tomatoes. Our corn is as tender and sweet as our best memories, and mounds of homegrown green beans grace our plates at every meal.

We are in hog heaven; we enjoy our veggies until we're almost too healthy to fit into our clothes.

And that's when we are caught, drowsy and burping, by the glut of a ZILLION ZUCCHINI. They've ripened and are ready to be picked. As numerous as flies on a screen door. As boring as your mother's appendectomy story.

The zucchini just keep growing and growing, popping up from the ground like those long balloons clowns twist into swans.

You use your own zucchini to make bread bricks, and stack them into the freezer. Casseroles covered with cheese and bread crumbs disguise your zucchini and the whole family works together to make the crop disappear.

They know that the faster they eat them, the sooner they will be gone.

That's what your neighbors think, too. The ones who also planted zucchini along the back rows of their gardens. They sit in their kitchens surrounded by buckets of them, frantic to clear the house of so much harvest.

Desperation causes devious solutions to fill their heads.

Bags of zucchini begin to materialize on lunchroom tables at work. Coworkers cringe through polite smiles. Boxes of zucchini are abandoned like ugly orphans; their rubbery green skin cooks in the August sunshine on the front porches of unsuspecting neighbors.

Sunday is a favorite zucchini-dumping day. Church-goin', God-fearin' people are the biggest zucchini growers in town. These clever men and women will keep you talking after services while zucchini-laden cohorts do their dirty work, populating your car's backseat with offerings of the dreaded squash.

ROBIN GARRISON LEACH

Alas, friends and neighbors. There is no escape. Zucchini will be grown in bloated globs every year—by all of us—and every year we'll test the boundaries of our friendships by trying to foist the excess into unwilling hands.

Lock your car doors. Roll your windows up tight. Keep an eye on your front steps, and make sure you don't linger after 'AMEN' on Sunday mornings. This year's zucchini crop is ripe and ready for sharing.

A busy day for doctors

I hate Labor Day," said Doc, sucking down yet another cup of coffee at the Mule Barn Coffee Shop.

"Ain't here yet," said Dud, reaching for the jelly packets. "Soon though, I guess."

"Few days," said Steve. "Doc, what do you have against Labor Day?"

Doc sighed. "I always have to work. I thought someone invented Labor Day so no one would have to work. Labor Day's about my busiest day of the year!"

"You're kidding. It's a national holiday, why would you have to work? People go fishing, go bowhunting, take the family water skiing, Climb mountains. Fun stuff."

Doc sighed again in case the fellow members of the World Dilemma Think Tank didn't catch the first sigh.

"So what happens when everybody else doesn't go to work, but goes out to have fun?" Doc said. He counted on his fingers ... "Remove fish hooks from thumbs, set broken arms when someone falls off an alp, patch up car crash victims, treat food poisoning after the teenaged son fixes the sandwiches ... you name the fun, someone's going to make me pay for it.

"That's not the worst of it, either," Doc said. "You guys believe in the power of suggestion?"

We just sat there looking stupid.

"I sure do. How many women in this little valley are due to deliver babies in the next month?"

He looked around. "The answer is nine."

"And since there's a Labor Day coming up, when do you think they'll start contractions? That's right. Some will be early, some have been trying to wait until the time is right. And that would be Labor Day. I hate Labor Day!"

"Sorry, Doc," said Herb. "I'll get your breakfast this morning."

See, somehow national holidays seem to bring out the best in us all.

Brought to you by the American Medical Association, even though they've never sponsored us before. But they're nice.

LETTER

An open letter to area educators

By Dr. Terrance Hopson and Dr. Mark David Milliron

The beginning of the school year is usually met with feelings of excitement for students and teachers to reconnect as they reimagine their routines for the new academic year. However, as school resumes for students across Missouri, this anticipation runs parallel with some discouraging professional challenges that aren't unique to school districts within Adair County. The Covid-19 pandemic upended our education ecosystems and left them scrambling to ease an ongoing teacher shortage.

According to a recent National Education Association survey, an alarming 55 percent of educators indicate they are ready to leave the profession earlier than planned. Data the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education collected in 2021 shows that many districts are experiencing shortages, with 2,184 vacancies in Elementary Education, 983.5 vacancies in Special Education, and 291.1 vacancies in Physical Education across the state. The shortages are causing more and more rural school districts to switch from a traditional five-day school week to a four-day week in an effort to attract and retain teachers. As of 2022, 25 percent of all school districts in Missouri — including several in Adair County and surrounding counties throughout Northeast Missouri — now have students attend school four days a week.

Despite these obstacles, we must do everything we can to continue to not only encourage others to consider this career path, but also stay in the field year after year. To new and returning teachers, it's no secret this profession can be taxing, but with the proper tools and tactics, you can take the necessary steps to care for yourself throughout this next year to ensure you're reenergized to continue molding Missouri's future leaders. Here's how:

Incorporate social emotional learning. Investing in social emotional learning with your students can benefit you through cause and effect; if your students understand how to care for themselves, your teacher-student relationships become stronger. In short, your health, wellness and continued professional growth can be a bulwark against the many challenges that will come your way and serve as a powerful model for the young learners you lead every day.

Prioritize being a difference-maker. Across the globe, teachers are held in high esteem. In fact, according to a Varkey Foundation survey published by the World Economic Forum, teaching ranks among the world's most respected professions. This acknowledgement stems from your potential positive influence over students and colleagues — an impact that lasts forever. It may sound trite, but it is more than true: your smallest act can make the biggest difference with the students you teach and reach.

Choose to connect and collaborate. As you may encounter challenges and changes throughout your career, one thing is certain — you are never alone. You are part of a community where influential bonds with students shape their futures. Within your own network, the groundwork is already in place for you to embrace connection, collaboration and growth.

While the education landscape has certainly changed and will continue to evolve, you are educators for a reason. Many crucial decisions led you to this moment, and never forget you have the passion and the power to change lives.

Dr. Terrance Hopson is Regional Vice President of WGU Missouri, a nonprofit, fully online state affiliate of Western Governors University, which graduates more teachers in the U.S. than any other institution. Dr. Mark David Milliron serves as Senior Vice President of Western Governors University and as Executive Dean of the university's School of Education.

We Want to Hear from YOU

We have an editorial page on Saturdays that we want to fill with local opinions and columns. We'd like to invite anyone in the community that has an opinion, to share it with us, be it a brief letter or a column expressing your thoughts on what's going on in the local community. It can be about your appreciation of an event that occurred in town, it can be constructive criticism about a problem you see and what you feel can be done to change things for the better, or it can be an opportunity to share with Express readers your thoughts on any subject you feel is important. If you want, send us a picture of yourself so that we can include it with your opinion.

Embracing Local History

Part 14 – EARLY SETTLERS

By Blytha Ellis, President
Adair County Historical Society and Museum

When the Cain family came in 1830 to The Cabins settlement in the future Adair County, other settlers either came with them or followed later. Since the many troops and Indian Agents who had been sent to search the Northern Missouri frontier had found no Indians, people felt safe in making this Chariton River property their home. The names of some of these new settlers are known, but, of course, not all.

In the fall of 1831, a group of men from Howard County came up the Chariton River on a hunting trip to the fertile land that in ten years would be Adair County. The names of six of these men are known: Andrew and Hiram Bozarth (brothers), Hardin Hargis, Bennett Brown, D. Hayes, and Isaac Gross. The latter was the same Isaac Gross who was one of the original settlers of The Cabins who were scared away by Big Neck and his tribe. He had told his friends about the good hunting opportunities in this area, and they formed a group expedition. They camped on an unclaimed section of land that was once a part of The Cabins area.

liked the land he saw in this area. So, as he and his friends were ending their hunt, Andrew took his axe and crudely chopped his name into a tree. He declared to his companions, “Boys, I’m claiming this land here for myself, and by this time next year, I’ll be raisin’ a corn crop on it!” True to his word, Andrew Bozarth did move to that piece of land and grew his corn crop.

Sadly, it was in the same year of Andrew’s visit to this area, 1831, that his wife, Alcey (Hargis), by whom he had eight children, died in Howard County. Andrew remarried to Catharine Loe just prior to coming to his new land claim. Here, four children were added to the family. It is noteworthy that one of their sons, Lycurgus Bozarth, would die as a Confederate soldier in the Battle of Kirksville in 1862.

Two of Andrew’s brothers, Milton and Hiram Bozarth, also moved to this area. Hiram Bozarth, and his wife, Margaret (Cleeton), came with their five children in 1831. Shortly after they arrived, another son was born to them on December 14, 1831, and named James Madison Bozarth after the U.S. President at that time. James has the distinction of being the first white child to have been born in what would become Adair County. It should be understood that the reason “white” is used here is because no one knows how many Native American children were born in this area before the white settlers came.

A son was born to John and Emily Cain on January 2, 1833, in their new home in this area and was named George Washington Cain. George would spend the rest of his life in Adair County on the same land that his father had purchased from James Myers. When grown, George would often claim to be the first white child born in Adair County, but, if records are correct, James Bozarth had him beat.

Another man who became a prominent resident of the future Adair County was Washington Conner (1806-1890). He was born in Harrodsburg, Kentucky, where his father, Philemon O’Conner, had immigrated from Ireland in 1790. In Kentucky, Philemon married Sarah McLonie in 1801, and eleven children were born to them before, grievously, Philemon, a rugged frontiersman, died and was buried next to four of his children who didn’t make it to adulthood.

Washington was the oldest son in this family and undoubtedly was compelled to take leadership of his family. With the hope of better prosperity in the west, the Conners traveled nearly 500 miles to settle in Howard County, Missouri, along with many other Kentuckians.

In Howard County, the Conners became acquainted with the John Cain family with whom they felt a special kindred. Both families were from Mercer County, Kentucky, and both had suffered the loss of a significant family member. When John Cain’s wife, Oney, died in 1823, he was left with two daughters, Celia and Winnie, who were just entering womanhood. It happened that Washington Conner set his eye on Celia, the youngest of these ladies, and when she was 17, she accepted his hand in marriage in 1828 in Howard County, Missouri.

This was the year that the six original pioneers and their families from Howard County ventured north up the Chariton River and established The Cabins. It is unknown if the Conners or the Cains were aware of this settlement at the time, but they certainly heard about the Indian trouble of 1829 called the Big Neck War.

Washington and Celia Conner did not come to The Cabins when her father, John Cain, came in 1830. They stayed in Howard County through the birth of six children, but they would come in the late 1830s.

During the early 1830s, other settlers were also moving into other parts of what would become Adair County. No one imagined that they would have to deal with an Indian threat again, but they did! Although no Native Americans ever came to invade the land of the future Adair County in the 1830s, authorities were so frightened by the Indian upheaval known as the Black Hawk War going on in neighboring Illinois, that two forts were built in Adair County to protect the early settlers just in case the unrest spilled over into Missouri.

To understand this concern which led to two forts being built, one must go back and examine the life and events of the Native American known as Black Hawk.

An $85,000 bond issue which the Kirksville City Council proposed to construct a big reservoir in the hills west of Kirksville to rehabilitate the city’s water supply system was overwhelmingly defeated at the polls. The bond issues which required a two-thirds majority to pass was instead defeated by nearly the same margin. The proposal was not expected to be brought before the voters again in the immediate future.

A large group of people went to Greentop Lake to see a local daredevil, Fred Barge, attempt to dive from an airplane into the lake. The attempt went afoul because of the change in the wind current, and the plane could not get low enough to the lake for Barge to make the dive. The crowd got a thrill anyway when he received scratches on his legs after he was dragged through the treetops dangling from the airplane’s landing gear. Despite his failed attempt, Barge vowed to make the dive again in the future.

Adair County physicians were reporting increased numbers of Vincent’s angina, commonly known as trench mouth. One county doctor indicated that he knew of at least fifteen cases of the disease. The number of cases led to a warning of a possible epidemic and urged precaution against its spread. Trench mouth is an acute infectious disease that affects the tonsils and pharynx, floor of the mouth, gums, and occasionally the tongue, lips, and cheeks. Small red splotches appear in the mouth, eventually ulcerate, and expose a bleeding surface. Health officials urged caution among individuals and public eating establishments to make sure that dishes and table service were properly sanitized since the disease was transmitted through saliva. It was recommended that individuals use restraint in kissing.

The Northeast Missouri Fair completed a three-day run August 27 through August 29, 1947, at the recently acquired 100-acre fairgrounds north of Kirksville. The first day of the fair drew a crowd of about 10,000, while the crowd the last day was approximately 17,000 people. The fair was claimed to be one of the largest fair attendances in north Missouri’s history. The fair featured horse racing, including harness racing, a carnival, livestock judging and shows, commercial exhibits, food stands, daily entertainment including the newly organized fair band. The activities were held in front of the new grandstand and bleachers which were packed to capacity each day. Admission to the fairgrounds was 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children. The fairground was served by the city bus line and local taxi service. A first-aid station was operated by the local Girl Scouts and staffed with a registered nurse and a doctor. The Kirksville Fire Department had men on duty with fire-fighting equipment, and local funeral homes provided an ambulance on standby. Adair County had been without a fair for many years, but a revitalized fair board consisting of a group of local people with lots of enthusiasm and adequate funds had purchased the land for the fairgrounds, built the grandstand and other buildings, and organized the fair. (The fairground was located on the east side of North Baltimore running northward from State High P including the present-day strip mall and other businesses, Wal-Mart, and Hampton Inn.) The Northeast Missouri Fair Board consisted of Howard Ralston, Minor Williams, Nat Rieger, Ray Updyke, Lee Jones, Ethel Conner, Floyd Collop, Myron Propst, Frank Eitel, Sherman Eitel, N. C. Allen, Bert Sees, Arley Fast, Lloyd Farr, and Victor Hoffman. Among those who provided local entertainment at the grandstand were the Kirksville Ramblers consisting of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Brawner and sons, Mr. and Mrs. William Findling and sons, and Orville Williams. Colonel William “Bill” Findling devoted much time to the entertainment features of the fair as well as the concessions and announcing.

Kirksville voters passed a proposition to purchase the former post office building (present day city hall on the southeast corner of Franklin and McPherson Streets) for the purpose of converting it into a city hall. The proposition which required a two-thirds majority passed by that margin with 22 extra votes. In its history Kirksville had never had a city hall. The city had its offices in cramped quarters in the Adair County Courthouse for which the city paid $100 monthly rent. The newly adopted proposition provided $47,000 for the purchase of the former post office building and $80,000 for renovation. The Kirksville Post Office was moving to its new facility at the corner of Jefferson and High Streets (its present location).

A group of approximately 150 men, women, and children converged on Mackie’s IGA grocery store Saturday morning around 11 a.m. The group, all members of the National Farmers’ Organization (NFO), headed by Adair County NFO chairman, Ted Sevits, went to the store in a meat buying expedition which marked the farmers’ efforts to increase farm prices. Sevits said the NFO chose the Mackie’s grocery store because it was owned by state senator W. O. Mackie. The farmers intended to buy up all the meat possible and withhold their own livestock from the markets in an effort to increase farm prices.

COLUMBIA — A new exhibit, In Their Own Words: Celebrating the National Women and Media Collection, is on display at the State Historical Society of Missouri. The collection is celebrating its 35th anniversary with an exhibit featuring diaries, photos, letters, and interviews from the National Women and Media Collection, established at the State Historical Society in 1987. The 92-foot-long exhibit covers the collection’s history of women in journalism from the 1800s to the 1990s.

The public is invited to an opening reception for the exhibition Wednesday, Sept. 7, 4-6 p.m. at the Center for Missouri Studies, headquarters of the State Historical Society of Missouri.

“Interest in the National Women and Media Collection comes from all over the world. We have had research requests from as far away as Australia and Europe,” said Elizabeth Engel, senior archivist for the State Historical Society and manager of the collection. “By drawing attention to the anniversary with a large-scale display, we hope the collection will grow and be supported by the voices of additional women in the media today and in the future.”

Visitors can see the exhibit through Dec. 23, 2022, during regular visitor hours at the State Historical Society of Missouri. The exhibit is located on the second floor in the Wenneker Family Corridor Gallery, SHSMO Center for Missouri Studies, 605 Elm Street.

Additional public events, related to the collection’s 35th anniversary, are posted on the Society’s calendar at SHSMO.org.

Husband and father tired of being ignored at home

DEAR ABBY: I have been with my wife for 25 years, married for 22 of them. I love her very much, but sometimes I feel it isn't mutual. We have three children, all girls, ranging in age from early teens to mid-20s. My wife also has an older son from a previous marriage.

JEANNE PHILLIPS
DEAR ABBY

What has been going on under your roof is no laughing matter. But your passivity may be partly responsible for it. You should have told your wife years ago how you felt, but it isn't too late to do it now. Tell her you feel ignored and unappreciated by her and the children. Tell her you are unhappy, and if she wants the marriage to last, she will join you in marital counseling because you are tired of being low man on the totem pole. I don't think doing that would be overreacting. In fact, I think it's overdue.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Contact Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

My complaint for years has been that I am the least important person in the world to her. The kids, work and friends always come first. I understand that kids have needs, but I should get some attention once in a while. We will be in the middle of a conversation, and if one of them walks into the room, texts or calls, she stops midsentence and totally ignores me. Sometimes I talk to her, and she doesn't even hear me if they are in the room. She and the kids laugh and joke about it, but I don't think it's funny. I have worked hard to support them, 60-hour weeks and weekends to make ends meet, and I feel like I'm an afterthought to all of them. I spoil them on birthdays, Mother's Day and Christmas. One year not one of them remembered my birthday. Am I overreacting? -- INVISIBLE MAN IN PENNSYLVANIA

The owner claims the fridge is judging them on "how many slices of cheese I've eaten or whether I've properly put the lid back on something. She has to go." The statue, which was installed in 1988, was stolen -- again -- on Aug. 21, Monterey police told KSBW-TV. Thieves used a grinder to cut Dennis' foot and remove the 200-pound artwork, called "a symbol of the goodness and happiness of the City" by City Manager Hans Uslar. The statue was first stolen in 2006; a replacement statue was placed in the park a year later. Kirksville girls' tennis drops home opener despite close results

By Adam Tumino
Daily Express

At home for the first time this season was the Kirksville varsity girls' tennis team as they faced Marshall on Thursday, falling 7-2 to the Owls. For the third-straight match to start the season, the results in both singles and doubles play were close.

After dropping the season opener to Hannibal and then winning 5-3 against Chillicothe, the loss Thursday has the Tigers at 1-2 early on. Marshall improved to 4-0 with the win.

Prior to the season, head coach Lee Riley said he just wanted to see the team go out and compete every time, and so far he said he has been pleased with that effort.

"Well they can compete, I can tell you that," he said. "We're in a good spot, we're doing fine. We're definitely in the positive, and we'll keep fighting."

The two wins for the Tigers came in doubles play, as the team of Madisynn Crawford and Brynn Williams won 10-5 and Ava Hamlin and Diana Lam won a lengthy set by a score of 11-10. Both pairs also won in doubles play against Chillicothe

Both Crawford and Williams both lost in singles by scores of 10-8 playing at No. 3 and No. 4 respectively while Katlynn DeLeon came even closer, losing 11-10 while playing at No. 2. Lauren Xander at No. 1 was up 2-1 before having to retire due to cramping. She was on pace to earn her second-straight victory in No. 1 singles. She was also a part of the doubles team with DeLeon that fell 10-6 to Marshall's No. 1 doubles team of Avery Evans and Alizah Russell.

Hamlin and Lam both fell in singles play by scores of 10-6 and 10-7 respectively. It was Lam's first singles loss of the season.

Another thing that Riley said he has been keeping an eye on this season is the progression of doubles play, as all of the pairs only began playing together this season.

"That's better, but I think we're still kind of lacking in the doubles part too," he said. "That's just getting matches under your belt. The more you play, the better you're going to get together, and we're pretty much set on the way we're having our doubles teams, so they're going to play with each other the same way all the way through."

With the entire roster either playing varsity for the first time or playing several slots higher than they have previously, they are all facing a higher level of competition than perhaps they are used to. Riley said that he thinks the team has responded to the challenge, and in particular DeLeon has stepped up after previously playing at No. 6 and No. 7.

"She's played everybody tough that she's played this year" he said. "She's fit in really, really good."

It has not only been DeLeon that has stepped up. Basically the lineup this season is made of inexperienced players, and Riley said that all of them are playing at or above expectations, which he attributed to the level of commitment they have shown.

"They're doing as good as they can be expected right now," he said. "We're in a good spot right now. And the girls worked really hard this summer. They were out here all the time playing, even on their own. They'll even stay late after practice, which is really, really good."

The Tigers will be back in action on the road against Father Tolton on Sept. 6 before returning home to play Mexico on Sept. 8.

Column: Dramatic NFL quarterback storylines abound as season nears

The start of the NFL season is fast approaching, and there seems to be an unusually high amount of unnecessarily dramatic storylines across the league. When professional sports get unnecessarily dramatic, things can get very fun very fast. Just ask the NBA.

This season, almost all of the drama seems to be generated by the quarterback position, which is not very surprising. One of the more intriguing storylines surrounding quarterbacks involves Trey Lance and Jimmy Garoppolo of the San Francisco 49ers.

Lance was drafted prior to last season, presumably to take over as the possible franchise centerpiece for the team. He sat most of last season behind Garoppolo, who is 31-14 in his time in San Francisco. Despite Garoppolo's success, including a Super Bowl appearance, it was only a matter of time before Lance was given the starting job. Lance will be the starter this season, which would seem to open the door for Garoppolo to go elsewhere.

He would be an upgrade at the position for a handful of teams, but instead of trading Garoppolo, the 49ers restructured his contract to keep him for the season. He will apparently waste a year of his career as a backup, unless he is traded mid season if a job opens up somewhere else.

It seems strange that a talented quarterback who is only 30 years old will sit behind the guy that took his job, but that is not even the quarterback development that will be the most interesting to watch.

When the Cleveland Browns traded for Texans quarterback Deshaun Watson immediately after it was announced that he would not be facing criminal charges for numerous allegations of sexual misconduct, Browns' quarterback Baker Mayfield was not happy.

Mayfield demanded a trade, got sent to Carolina. His time in Cleveland was rocky, highlighted by an 11-5 2020 season. But an injured Mayfield was very ineffective last season. Watson is certainly an upgrade, obviously from a football standpoint only, but Mayfield was understandably upset.

Tale of the tape for Truman football team's opener against Davenport

By Adam Tumino
Daily Express

The 2022 season opens Saturday for the Truman State football team, and a home game against Davenport is first up in a season full of high expectations for the Bulldogs.

The game will be a rematch of last season's opener, which Truman State won by a score of 31-14. Some of the top players from that game will be back on the field this season.

Truman State quarterback Nolan Hair did not have a very strong game against Davenport last season, completing 11-of-20 passes for 78 yards and an interception. His season overall was more productive. He completed 62.7 percent of his passes on the season for 2,135 yards with 20 touchdowns and seven interceptions.

Davenport's starting quarterback from last season, Deondre Ford, completed 18-of-36 passes for 176 yards with two touchdowns and two interceptions. Ford is not back this season. Davenport had five quarterbacks see action last season, and two will be back. The one with the most experience is Jake Jensen, who had the third-most pass attempts on the team last season.

Jensen struggled in his time behind center last season, completing just 13 of his 44 pass attempts and throwing five interceptions and just a single touchdown.

Davenport is returning its top two running backs from that game in Kyshawn Richards and Jaier Harden. The Panthers had five running backs rush for over 200 yards last season, led by Harden with 348 yards. Richards finished third on the team with 231 yards. The team's second leading rusher last season, Seth Acda, will not be back this season, nor will the team's fourth-leading rusher Blake Daniels. Caleef Jenkins will be back, though.

He finished fifth on the team with 211 rushing yards.

The Panthers top receiver from last season's game, Roy Livingstone will be back as well. He caught four passes for 75 yards and a pair of touchdowns in the game and had 238 yards on the season, ranking second on the team.

Truman State will be without its leading rusher from last season in Cody Schrader, who ran for 217 and four touchdowns in last season's opener. Schrader transferred to Missouri in the offseason, and ran for 70 yards and a touchdown in the Tigers' 52-24 win over Louisiana Tech on Thursday.

Schrader ran for over 2,000 yards for the Bulldogs last season, and this season will be replaced by former Hannibal star Shamar Griffith, who transferred to Truman State this season after three seasons and Missouri Western.

Consecutive Hannibal goals sink Kirksville boys' soccer team Thursday

By Adam Tumino
Daily Express

The Kirksville varsity boys' soccer team played 79 minutes of shutout soccer against Hannibal on Thursday night, but a pair of Pirate goals less than a minute apart sunk the Tigers by a score of 2-1.

Kirksville took the lead on a goal from senior Sam Wilson with just under 13 minutes to go in the first half. The lead was short-lived, as Hannibal tied the score with 9:21 remaining in the half and then took the lead just about 40 seconds of game time later. Both teams had chances to score in the second half, but neither found the back of the net.

The loss dropped Kirksville to 0-2 on the season with a 3-1 loss to Southern Boone preceding Thursday's defeat.

Kirksville head coach Shawn Meintz said that the first Hannibal goal was just a solid play by the Pirates that paid off.

"They caught us on a quick break," he said. "We're kind of shuffling some things. We had an injury on the back line that put a new center back in for us, who did well the whole game, but I think we got caught on that first goal. Which is fine, but then we didn't respond well."

Meintz said that the second goal in the sequence was one that should not have happened.

"After a goal you're supposed to lock things down, and we played a little loose after the goal," he said. "That's what we've got to make sure, that mentally, after a goal goes in, that we play harder and make sure everything is clean."

Wilson said he was happy with how the team played throughout the game, outside of those of those 40 or so seconds.

"I think we played awesome," he said. "Our first three games this year are tough opponents, and we know that, and we're coming and playing our best. We're performing and there is no ill thing I can say about our team today. Everyone gave their all, we all played our best."

As the season progresses, Meintz said there have been several promising developments early in the season that can be beneficial going forward.

"We play with a lot of tenacity," he said. "We're not giving things up easy. We're out fighting the whole time we're playing. There's a lot of good energy. We're running and working teams hard and making it hard for them to score and play soccer."

But there are always things that need improving, especially this early in the year.

"I think we need to clean up our possession, especially when we've got a lot of pressure on us," Meintz said. "Just making sure we're completing more passes, making other teams move because we're playing into open space, and then from there we can build things and attack."

After playing the first two games at home, the Tigers will now have three straight road contests against Marshall on Sept. 3, Missouri Military Academy on Sept. 6 and Moberly on Sept. 8. They then return home to play Mexico on Sept. 13.

Thank you for 3 fantastic years!

"Thank you to our patients and their families for allowing us to be apart of your lives."

Miracle-Ear is celebrating three years of serving the Kirksville community and the surrounding areas!

"In three short years, we have been able to impact our local Kirksville community in a significant way. We have helped our patients reach their hearing goals and assisted patients in financial need receive hearing aids from The Miracle-Ear Foundation," said Trina Almond Atchley, Miracle-Ear hearing instrument specialist.

Atchley says she is thrilled to have the opportunity to serve a more rural area. She grew up on a small family farm in the mid-Missouri region. One of her favorite things about farm-life is raising bottle calves. And she prefers to ride on the tailgate – even if she does have to open all the gates.

She explained there is a definite pattern to hearing loss specific to most rural communities. Over time, noise exposure can cause subtle hearing changes.

Farmers often think they do not have a hearing issue. However, they have trouble understanding their wives, grandchildren, and hearing well in a restaurant or noisy setting. It is easy to brush off the problem by believing a loved one is not speaking clearly, or the room noise is simply too loud to hear conversation.

"They can hear a car coming down the gravel road. They can hear gunshots during deer season, and they can hear their farm equipment just fine," Atchley said. "They just can't make out clear speech and ask their loved ones to repeat themselves. The reality is they are experiencing a distinct type of hearing loss that creates muffled sound."

A hearing evaluation is the best way to find out if a person is experiencing hearing loss. Miracle-Ear's comprehensive testing is free with no obligation to purchase anything. Hearing clearly is too important to put off. It connects us to the people and things we love.

Atchley wants her patients to know they will be treated with fairness, honesty, and transparency. They can feel confident she will work to find the best solution to give them their hearing back.

"When you come see me, I promise to make you comfortable and treat you like my mom, dad, sister, or brother," Atchley said. "I have two teenagers who are my world, but about 1000 patients that share my heart."

Fighting at 40: Older fans take heart in Serena's success

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — Imagine if they could bottle a potion called “Just Serena.”

That was Serena Williams' succinct, smiling explanation for how she'd managed — at nearly 41, and match-rusty — to defeat the world's second-ranked player and advance Wednesday to the third round of a U.S. Open that so far, doesn't feel much like a farewell. “I'm just Serena,” she said, to roaring fans.

Clearly there's only one Serena. But as superhuman as many found her achievement, some older fans in particular — middle-aged, or beyond — said they saw in Williams' latest run at the 2022 U.S. Open a very human and relatable takeaway. Namely the idea that they, also, could perform better and longer than they once thought possible — through fitness, practice and grit.

“It makes me feel good about what I'm doing still at my age,” said Bess Brodsky Goldstein, 63, a lifelong tennis enthusiast who was attending the Open on Thursday, the day after Williams' triumph over 26-year-old Anett Kontaveit.

Goldstein pursues her passion for the sport more vigorously than most women her age. She plays several times a week and participates in an age 55-and-up USTA mixed-doubles league in New England. (She also plays competitive golf.)

Yet Goldstein, like any athlete, suffers her share of aches and injuries, like a recent knee issue that set her back a few weeks. Watching Williams, she said, shows ordinary folks that injuries — or, in Williams' case, a life-threatening childbirth experience five years ago — can be overcome. “She gives you inspiration that you can achieve your best, even in your early 60s,” said Goldstein, who also had high praise for Venus Williams, Serena's older sister, competing this year at 42.

Evelyn David was also watching tennis at the Open on Thursday. And she, too, was thinking about the night before.

“Everybody is going, ‘WOW!’” said David, who smilingly gave her age as “older than my 60s”

Serena Williams, Rafael Nadal and Roger Federer, right, cheer on the competition during Arthur Ashe Kids' Day, the kick off to the U.S. Open tennis tournament, Aug. 24, 2013, in New York. Some older fans in particular — middle-aged, or beyond — said they saw in Williams' latest run at the 2022 U.S. Open a very human and relatable takeaway. and is the site director for New York Junior Tennis Learning, which works with children and teens. She cited the physicality of Williams' play, and the role of fitness in today's tennis. “The rigorous training that athletes go through now is different,” David said. “She's going, ‘I'm not falling over. I can get to the ball.’”

“A total inspiration,” David termed Williams' performance — and she had some prominent company.

“Can I put something in perspective here?” former champion and ESPN commentator Chris Evert said during Wednesday's broadcast. “This is a 40-year-old mother. It is blowing me away.”

Evert retired at age 34 in 1989, well before fitness and nutrition were the prominent factors in tennis they are now. They were even less so when pioneering player Billie Jean King, now 78, was in her heyday.

“For us older ones, it gives us hope and it's fun,” King said Thursday in an interview about Williams. “Puts a pep in your step. Gives you energy.” She noted how fitness on the tour has changed since the 1960s and 1970s.

“We didn't have the information and we didn't have the money,” King said. “When people win a tournament now, they say, ‘Thank you to my team.’ They're so lucky to have all those people. We didn't even have a coach.”

Jessica Pegula, the No. 8 seed who won on Thursday, is at 28 a half-century younger than King. She knows well the difference fitness has made.

“It's been a huge part of it,” she said. “Athletes, how they take care of their bodies, sports nutrition, the science behind training and nutrition — (it) has changed so much. Back in the day, you saw a player drinking a Coke on the sideline or they had a beer after their match. Now ... health has been the No. 1 priority, whether it's physical or mental.” She said she remembered thinking Roger Federer, Rafael Nadal and Williams were all going to retire, but “they kept pushing the boundaries.”

Federer, 41, hasn't played since Wimbledon last year because of operations to his right knee, but has said he'll try to play Wimbledon next year, shortly before his 42nd birthday. And Nadal, 36, known for his intense devotion to fitness, has won two Grand Slam titles this year to raise his total to a men's-record 22. Nobody would be surprised if he won another major. In contrast, Jimmy Connors' famous run to the 1991 semis of the U.S. Open when he was 39 was considered an event for the history books.

Of course, fitness is only one building block to greatness — in any sport. Denver Broncos safety Justin Simmons, who like Pegula is 28, noted that even though it's inspiring to see Williams keep an athletic advantage partly through preparation, “not everybody is Serena and Venus Williams. Maybe there's some genes in there that not everybody else is blessed enough to have, but it's still cool to know that, hey, even though she is genetically gifted, there are some things that she's done that have helped her in a tremendous way prolong her career.”

Dr. Michael J. Joyner, who studies human performance at the Mayo Clinic, said Williams shares many traits with other superstar athletes (from baseball's Ted Williams to golfer Gary Player and star quarterback Tom Brady, 45 and famously un-retired) who have enjoyed long careers.

“What you see with all of these people is they stay motivated, they've avoided catastrophic injury ... or they've been able to come back because they've recovered,” he said. Also key: they live in “the modern era of sports medicine.”

The question, he asked, is can Williams perform at the same level every other day to win a whole tournament? He hopes so.

Williams fan Jamie Martin, who has worked in physical therapy since 1985 and owns a chain of clinics in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, said she's seeing many women playing vigorous, competitive sports into middle age and beyond. Some return to their sport, or take up a new one, after years of focusing on work or family.

Williams' pursuit of another U.S. Open title at 40 is a reminder that women can not only remain competitive longer, but can compete now for the joy of it, she notes.

“She's really enjoying playing,” said Martin, 59. “That's what's fun to watch about it now.”

Brooklyn teacher Mwezi Pugh says both Williams sisters are great examples of living life on their own terms — which includes deciding how long they want to play.

“They are still following their own playbook,” said Pugh, 51. “‘Are you ready to retire yet, Serena?’ ‘I don't like that word. I would rather say evolution.’ ‘Are you ready to retire, Venus?’ ‘Not today.’”

“The older you are, the more you should be able to set up your life in the way you like, and what works best for you,” Pugh said. “That's what the sisters are doing, and they are teaching all of us a lesson.”

AP source: Cavaliers acquiring All-Star G Mitchell from Jazz

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

CLEVELAND — Donovan Mitchell is going east.

The All-Star guard is on his way to the Cleveland Cavaliers, who acquired one of the NBA's best scorers Thursday in a blockbuster trade with the Utah Jazz, a person familiar with the deal told The Associated Press.

Cleveland is sending guard Collin Sexton, forward Lauri Markkanen and rookie guard Ochai Agbaji along with three unprotected first-round picks to the Jazz, said the person, who spoke on condition of anonymity because it still must be approved by the league.

ESPN was the first to report Mitchell's exit from Utah.

Sexton, who played in just 11 games last season before undergoing knee surgery, will sign a four-year, $72 million contract as part of a sign-and-trade agreement with Utah, his agent Rich Paul confirmed for AP.

There had been speculation for months that Mitchell might get moved, and it appeared the New York Knicks were the frontrunner for him. But when talks with Utah broke down, Cleveland jumped in and general manager Koby Altman added a player capable of pushing the Cavs into title contention.

Cleveland hasn't made the playoffs since 2018, when LeBron James led the Cavs to their fourth straight Finals.

The 6-foot-1 Mitchell can take over a game, and he'll give Cavs coach J.B. Bickerstaff a player to run his offense through as well as another late-game option.

The Cavs are also giving up unprotected first-round picks in 2025, 2027 and 2029 and swapping picks in 2026 and 2028, said the person.

A three-time All-Star in five seasons with Utah, the 25-year-old Mitchell is one of the league's elite backcourt players and his acquisition could push the Cavs, who won 44 games last season — a 22-game improvement — with a young nucleus, among the top teams in the loaded Eastern Conference.

Mitchell, who averaged 25.9 points per game last season, will pair in Cleveland with All-Star point guard Darius Garland. He'll also play with All-Star center Jarrett Allen and forward Evan Mobley, who had a strong rookie season averaging 15.0 points, 8.3 rebounds and 1.7 blocks.

Mitchell signed a five-year, $163 million contract in 2020 and is under contract through the 2026 season.

Cleveland also has Garland and Allen locked up to long-term deals.

The 23-year-old Sexton was hoping to make a comeback this season with the Cavs, who couldn't work out an extension with him last season. He was a restricted free agent this summer, but there was little market for him.

Sexton's a proven scorer (he averaged 24.3 in 2020), but became expendable for Cleveland due to Garland's development and the club's talented frontline.

Truman's leading receiver against Davenport last season was Dante Ruffin, who has since graduated. He had a majority of the receiving yards in that game, with tight end Matt Hall finishing second with 11 yards. Hall was the Bulldogs' leading receiver on the season, catching 37 passes for 475 yards and six touchdowns.

Davenport defensive back Jalen Robinson led all players with 13 total tackles in that game while also having an interception. He will be back for his senior season.

Truman State's leading tacklers from the game are also back. Defensive back Peyton Carr and linebacker Ulysses Ross each had eight total tackles. Carr also recorded an interception while Ross had 2.5 tackles for loss. They finished third and fifth on the team in total tackles last season respectively.

He will have a chance to seek revenge on his old team in Week 1 when the Browns come to Charlotte to play the Panthers. Watson is suspended for the first 11 games of the season and will not be present, but Mayfield, who has been very petty in the past, will have a chance to outdo himself.

This is a man who, while starting at Oklahoma, stared down the Kansas sideline while grabbing his crotch and apparently told the crowd to stick to basketball, which is very, very funny. Oklahoma won the game 41-3.

He also once stared down Hue Jackson, his former head coach with the Browns, while playing against Cincinnati where Jackson was then an assistant. If Mayfield would stare down his former head coach during a game, imagine what he would do to his former team.

If Carolina is winning, some very interesting things can happen.

I hope Carolina does win, not just for this reason, but also because I want Cleveland to go 0-17 every season that Watson is on their payroll.

There are also more typical quarterback storylines to watch for, like seeing if a 45-year-old Tom Brady can make it through another season without dying on the field, or following whatever nonsense Aaron Rodgers gets himself involved in.

Russell Wilson is also returning to Seattle as a member of the Broncos for the first Monday Night Football game of the year, but frankly I find Wilson completely uninteresting. Luckily there is enough quarterback drama without him.

SUDOKU

Here's How It Works:
Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Local residents chosen as Missouri Farm Family for Adair County

By Press Release

The Monte and Lisa Fisher family of Brashear, Mo. were among the families honored during the 64th annual Missouri Farm Family Day on Aug. 15 at the Missouri State Fair.

The Fisher family was selected as the Adair County Missouri Farm Family by the University of Missouri Extension Council in Adair County. The family includes parents, Monte and Lisa Fisher, and children Landon and Lacey Fisher and Lana Vansickle.

Each year, the fair sets aside a day to recognize farm families from across the state that are active in their communities, involved in agriculture, and/or participate in local outreach and extension programs such as 4-H or FFA. The annual event is sponsored by five partner agencies: the Missouri Farm Bureau;

the Missouri Department of Agriculture; the Missouri State Fair Commissioners; the MU College of Agriculture, Food and Natural Resources; and MU Extension.

The event showcases the impact that Missouri farm families have on the economy and heritage of the state, said Missouri State Fair Director Mark Wolfe. "These families are involved in agriculture activities in their com-

Handling large round bales

Know what risks you're exposed to so you can work safely.

By Central States Center for Agricultural Safety and Health
University of Nebraska
Medical Center

How can the weight of a large round bale become a deadly force?

Aaron Yoder, PH.D., Associate Professor, Department of Environmental, Agricultural & Occupational Health at the University of Nebraska Medical Center (UNMC), says understanding the role center of gravity (CG) plays in handling bales that weigh between 500 and 2,500 pounds is key element of avoiding a tractor or loader rollover.

A tractor's CG is the point where all parts balance one another. Approximately 30 percent of the tractor weight is on the front axle and 70 percent is on the rear axle. Adding weight to the tractor can affect the CG.

For a tractor to stay upright, it's CG must stay within the stability baseline or where the tires touch the ground. The position of the CG can change if the tractor moves from a level position onto a slope, or significant weight is added to either the front or rear of the tractor.

"When a tractor or loader carries a bale, the center of gravity on that equipment shifts," Yoder says. "The center of gravity raises, increasing the risk for a tractor or loader rollover. That risk is increased if the equipment loses traction when operating on rough or wet terrain."

To offset the center of gravity shift, Yoder advises modifications to the tractor/loader such as widening the wheelbase or using ballast fluid in the tires or additional counterweights. If the center of gravity shifts to the rear of the tractor, it can cause the front end to rise. If the front rises too much, the front tires lose stability and steering is impaired.

Tractors used to move bales should be equipped with a rollover protective structure (ROPS), and the operator should always buckle the tractor's seatbelt. A ROPS limits the degree of rollover, helping protect the operator. Be aware that a ROPS is not designed to protect the tractor operator from the weight of a falling bale.

Most front-end loaders have a load capacity either stamped on the equipment or listed in a decal on the machine. The information should also be found in the equipment manual. Overloading the equipment greatly increases the risk of injury to the operator as well as damage to the machine.

"Using a grapple hook or bale spear to move a bale reduces potential for the bale to roll back onto the loader arms or operator," Yoder says. "If the bales are stored uncovered outside, be aware that recent moisture can add a significant amount of weight to the bale."

While moving a large round bale, avoid lifting it too high off the ground, which also results in a center of gravity shift. The bale should be high enough off the ground that it doesn't come in contact with anything, but it should never be lifted high enough that the equipment operator can see beneath the bale.

"Make sure you can see over the top of the bale," Yoder says. "Lifting it any higher increases the risk of a rollover."

Be aware of any overhead wires in the vicinity where bales are being moved. Keep speed at a minimum during the move, avoid "jerky" movements, and drive along terrain that's as flat and even as possible. Even a slight embankment can lead to a tractor overturn.

While in D.C. the group met Missouri 4-H alumni Blake Wright and Madelyn Derks, who both now work for Rep. Vicky Hartzler of Missouri's 4th District. Youths also met Rep. Sam Graves of Missouri's 6th District. On the return trip, they toured Monticello and Colonial Williamsburg.

Because of their experiences on this trip, youths reported they better understand that history is more than just dates and places, are better at communicating with public officials, are better at communicating with those with different beliefs and are seeking to learn more about civic engagement, said University of Missouri Extension 4-H state educator Maria Calvert.

Major support for 4-H Civic Engagement programs is provided by the Missouri 4-H Foundation in partnership with the Association of Missouri Electric Cooperatives; Aaron and Erica Baker; Mary Davis; the Hertzog Family; the Martz Family; MFA Foundation; Miller Family Foundation; Missouri Pork Association; Marla J. Tobin, M.D.; and the Turner Family.

ATTENTION

Share your story and photos with us!

On Saturdays we have a page that is dedicated to agriculture, and with a big farming community surrounding Kirksville, we know that there are plenty of local stories about the commitment of farm families and the products they provide us. These are the stories that our readers crave and delight in reading.

Share with us the upgrades to your ranch or farm, the successes of the season, the new projects that are happening on your property and/or new additions or changes you've been making or planning.

Please tell us what's important to your operation and share it with your neighbors and friends that read The Express.

They'll be glad to hear from you.
