Kirksville City Council discusses implementation of residential street tree program

By Marty Bachman
Daily Express

The Kirksville City Council discussed implementing a new residential street tree program at their Sept. 12 study session. According to a staff report compiled by Kirksville Parks and Recreation Director Rodney Sadler, due to the impacts of the Emerald Ash Borer on ash trees throughout the community, city staff has created a draft residential street tree program application and program policies and procedures. The program would be run by the parks and recreation department.

Sadler told the city council that residents of Kirksville that would like to have a tree in the right away in front of their home to add shade or improve property value or just to have better curb appeal, would fill out the city application by selecting a desired tree from a list of varieties the city has put together, pick a location and then provide their portion of the cost share, which would be $100 based on a $250 to $300 cost to the city to plant, stake and mulch them. "Think of it like this, it would pay a third or maybe close to half depending on the tree, and we pick up the other half," Sadler told the council.

PROJECT HAPPY HAPPY

Project Happie's 1st Party Down for Down Syndrome

Kicking off Down Syndrome Awareness Month

By Project Happie

In an effort to spread joy and Down syndrome awareness, Project HAPPY is sponsoring a family-friendly dance party on Oct. 1 from 4-6 p.m. The event, called Party Down for Down Syndrome, will take place at the Ray Klingensmith Amphitheatre in Rotary Park. Party Down for Down Syndrome will feature a DJ, chances to learn a bit about Down syndrome, and fun for all ages. The event will also be an opportunity to celebrate Down Syndrome Awareness Month (October).

Project HAPPY stands for Help All Preschoolers Play in Inclusive Environments. The organization strives to spread joy and awareness about Down syndrome, disability, and inclusion, primarily by donating disability/inclusion-themed dolls and books to Missouri preschools.

According to Sarah Maddox, Project HAPPY founder and executive director, The idea for this project started in December 2021, when her 2-year-old with Down syndrome (DS) got a doll with DS for Christmas.

"She loved her doll right away," Maddox said. "Seeing her joy made us want to spread that joy to others."

The box for each preschool contains two dolls with DS and four books about DS, disability, and inclusion.

"We hope these books and toys will help people realize we are more alike than different and that beautiful things can come from our differences," Maddox said. "We also hope that kids with DS will see themselves in these dolls and feel valued and important."

Truman State University professor's work to be featured in KC museum

By Truman State University

Truman State University art professor Priya Kampli is one of eight contemporary artists whose work will be included in an exhibition at the Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art in Kansas City for the next year.

"Found in Translation: Explorations by 8 Contemporary Artists" examines the artists' individual experiences with immigration from places across Asia to the Kansas City region. It reflects their perspectives on the world and their places in it, shaped through a range of styles and media.

Kampli migrated to the U.S. from India at the age of 18. She utilizes a personal archive of photographs and artifacts to foreground a personal narrative.

"My work has always been about understanding the formation and erasure of identity that is an inevitable part of the migrant experience," she said. "As an artist whose work is bound in the personal and irrefutably placed in the context of a migrant narrative, the question in play is 'how does the personal — or private — intersect with the political — or public?'"

By the time "Found in Translation" opens next month, the process of including Kampli's work will be close to two years in the making. The Nelson-Atkins photography curator recommended Kampli for inclusion in the exhibit, and she participated in a studio visit in January 2021. Last October she learned her work would be included. During the summer, a film crew from the museum visited Kampli in her studio in Kirksville to record an interview that will be part of the

"I am really excited to be part of an exhibition at the Nelson-Atkins and to be included with such a wonderful roster of artists," she said. "We often hear of the risks of losing meaning in translation, but visual artists are skilled at converting ideas and questions into art. 'Found in Translation' reveals the richness and nuance that can be discovered through this process of change and transformation."

In total, 11 of Kampli's pieces will be included in the show. "Found in Translation" opens Oct. 8 and will run through Oct. 20, 2023. It is the second exhibition in the Nelson-Atkins initiative "KC Art Now," which celebrates the talent of local artists.

Fall Fundraiser to help women rediscover selves

By Marty Bachman
Daily Express

First Assembly of God Church, 2401 S. High Street in Kirksville, will be holding a Fall Fundraiser on Oct. 1, to help underwrite their planned first-ever free 2023 Ladies Night Out, an event they hope will help women rediscover their personal identity.

According to Tiffany Ellis, a homeschooling mom who leads the women's ministry at the church, the dreams of many women often become lost or clouded as they tend to the needs of children, husbands, work and other factors that overwhelm their time and attention, leaving personal hopes they once had, lost.

"Since I'm a stay at home mom, I have lost a lot of my identity of who I am," Ellis said. "I forget a lot of my interests and I don't have the friends that I used to have because my daily life consists of being a mom or a wife and I know a lot of women either feel the same way."

The Fall Fundraiser will begin at 11 a.m. and consist of a chili cook-off and a dessert bake-off, both of which will award prizes to the winning entrants. Taste testing and voting will be held from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and participants will be judged by local celebrities. Cost is $10 to enter one contest and $15 for both and those prices include tasting and voting. Registration is due by Sept. 24. Entry to the event for non-participants is $10 ages 12 and up, $5 for kids, and kids under 5 eat for free.

There will also be a dunk tank that will cost $1 per ball. Signups to sit in the dunk tank are being collected. There will also be face painting, a bounce house, a Cornhole tournament and a tug-of-war tournament.

Ellis said that they will have state and city officials attending as well as teachers and a couple of churches represented.

"We want to give back to women," Ellis said about the purpose of the Fall Fundraiser and next year's planned Ladies Night Out. "We wanted a chance for them to have a good time and not have to worry about paying for anything and also not have them have to worry about their everyday life during those hours that they're at our event."

Ellis said that she was hopeful they could turn it into an annual event to continue to provide support to local women into the future. All proceeds from the Fall Fundraiser will go toward the Ladies Night Out to be held next summer, where they hope to have an entertainment act, a guest speaker, local musicians, refreshments, giveaways and most important, they want to ensure the event is free to women.

She said that men can help by supporting the Fall Fundraiser on Oct. 1 and maybe taking a turn in the dunk-tank. Businesses have donated gifts and certificates for the chili cook-off and dessert bake-off, providing packages between $30 and $200.

Ellis said that the theme of next year's Ladies Night Out will be "Shine", representing their desire to shine in the world again, something they may have lost as their lives have become more and more frantic.

"I think everybody has a woman in their life that they appreciate and this is a chance for them to show that woman that they appreciate them even if this event doesn't necessarily affect that woman," Ellis said. "It's still a way to celebrate women and I think when we celebrate ourselves, even if we're not always a part of it, we feel a part of it even when we're not there."

Ellis said that she just wants to provide women a chance to bring them back to who they are in a time when a lot of them are searching for who they are.

"I know I have been lost as a mom and I don't remember a lot of my identity, a lot of my interests because my day-to-day life is about taking care of my kids — making sure that they're where they need to be," she said. "And I have lost a lot of those friendships, not because we aren't friends, we just don't have time to get together. So this is a way for women to form relationships with other people or with other women again."

For more information on either event, Ellis can be reached at 660-216-2143.

Fading Summer

September in Missouri is a soft, mellow hum. Lazy puffs of wind—quiet and occasional—sigh hot-breathed words along the grassy slopes and harvested fields.

Like satisfied gluttons, filled and tired and sleepy, some insects of September find the simple act of sound-making much too taxing. They glob into lackluster clouds now, whispering lazily along the edges of ponds and around back porch lights.

The buzzes and clicks and burrs that filled the early summer air with strident echoes fade just a bit, letting cicadas rattle their rhythmic September solos.

Chickadees and robins and cardinals are quiet now, too. They've completed the cycles of building, birthing, feeding and letting go. The September sun forces them into lazy seclusion and no purpose propels them.

The grass still grows. Its roots cling tenaciously around shelves of crater-cracked, heat-baked dirt. The bright green hues of spring are gone. Summer's vigorous sheaves of grass, those blades that grew thick and unruly like sweaty, tousled hair on playground children, have succumbed to September's lethargy.

Now only the strongest, most tenacious blades of grass dare scrapple toward the sunlight's pounding rays. Sharp stalks of tough, weedy-dullness slice through the hard soil. Brown tinges their tips; unabashed homeliness, the price they pay for longevity. Mower blades whirl across them and chop away at the dust and dead bugs and vacated webs that collect there.

Clouds hold little promise of changing weather. Feathery as dandelion puffs one minute, they melt and disappear into the waterless blue sky. Occasional bubbles of thick whiteness provide moving pictures for imaginative eyes.

Elm trees, still green-leaved and thrumming with life, read the signals of September. Their smallest leaves have grown to maturity. Birds' nests have fallen away. Cicada shells decorate the trunks and lower branches like porcelain brooches, clinging testaments of bursting birth from lifeless husks.

A few dozen dawns will pass, and the leaves that hang motionless along graying limbs will blaze with the fire God gives all things before death. Until then they dangle in still clumps, giving mottled shade and twisting up now and then to watch for rain.

ROBIN GARRISON LEACH
ROBIN WRITES

Missouri in September smells and feels and tastes like the end of a lavish party. Our eyes and hearts have enjoyed spring's offerings of freshness. Our hands have worked the soil of early summer, planting seeds and pulling weeds.

We've taken deep breaths of summer's best days and exhaled sighs of satisfaction at the warmth that fills our pores. Stretching and yawning. Rubbing our eyes. Waiting for what comes next.

Now the cycles of living and growing stall. Landscapes burn into palettes of sameness and the monotony comforts our souls. We remember the crescendos of spring. We danced to the choruses of early summer.

September is the cradle-rocking creak of a weary world waiting for autumn and, inevitably, winter.

Sit back and listen to the stillness.

The music of the Western mountains

It's the music of the Western mountains, and this is the only time we get to hear it. It has a hollow sound, as though a flute were a foot thick and 12-foot long, and it is the lonely call of the bull elk.

It starts in early September and by October becomes more of a war chant. When winter shuts down the breeding season, the bulls go quiet once again, and pal up with other bulls to face winter together.

But now, the call is there. Veteran elk hunters call it "the locate call." It isn't meant to be intimidating to other elk, either. The spirit ghost of the mountains dictates the bull sends this high, hollow note out to the world.

If I may be permitted to translate, the locate call is just a reminder, not a threat.

"Anybody oooooo-ut there?"

That was Pete, sitting on top of a ridge near the Continental Divide. From the bottom of the canyon to the west, maybe four miles away, we hear an answer.

"This is She-r-r-r-r-rm. Remember me from last winter? Goin' girlin'-n-n-n-soon, Pete?"

"Thought I mi-i-i-ight, Sherm. Luck to you."

"And you-u-u-u-u-u too-o-o-o-!"

In a month, they'll be gathering cows and Pete will threaten to dismember ol' Sherm with a single antler, but that's during the rut, and that has more grunting sounds in it.

If you should go out there and try to call one in close enough for a picture, or at least a conversation, they would like me to remind you they are both 12 feet tall, weight more than a ton each, and could whip a freight train. And they're good-looking guys, too. Pass the word.

Break these bad habits when using credit

National nonprofit credit counseling agency Take Charge America shares tips to avoid derailing financial goals

By Take Charge America

PHOENIX — Credit card use has surged across the country as Americans face higher prices in recent months. With more individuals turning to credit for everyday purchases, the potential grows to develop bad habits that can negatively impact their finances.

"Credit has become an increasingly necessary tool to participate in today's financial world," said Amy Maliga, a financial educator with Take Charge America, a nonprofit credit counseling and debt management agency. "That's why it's important for individuals to use credit responsibly so they don't derail their life and money goals."

Maliga breaks down four bad habits to avoid when using credit:

Paying the minimum. It may be easier, but only paying the minimum payment on your credit card each month is a habit that will keep you in debt. This also leads you to paying way more in interest than necessary. Instead, work to pay off your balance in full every month to avoid finance charges.

Credit churning. This is the process of opening multiple credit cards to collect new customer bonuses like miles and cash back. The practice can have potentially disastrous effects on your credit score and ability to get new credit when you really need it. Opening several accounts in succession is often seen as a red flag. Also, the more credit cards you have, the greater risk of missing payments. Instead, use one or two main cards regularly to build and maintain good credit.

Buy now pay later. No, BNPL isn't a credit card in the traditional sense. But these popular services are a form of credit that come with financial risks including potential late fees, a temptation to spend more and no consumer protections. Instead of using BNPL, only buy items you can afford at the time of purchase.

Cash advances. One of the most expensive credit card transactions, cash advances typically have the highest interest rate. Plus, with no grace period, interest begins accruing immediately. There's also a fee for every cash advance transaction. If you're using credit cards to get cash, stop immediately. Evaluate your spending for ways to free up extra cash so you don't need to resort to costly cash advances.

For individuals overwhelmed with credit card debt you may find relief with nonprofit credit counseling. After going through a free credit counseling session online or over the phone, receive a free action plan with customized solutions to get out of debt.

Sadler said that city staff would evaluate the location of the tree and tree type chosen by the homeowner to determine if it is appropriate. He said that the city will lean toward a diverse variety of trees in a given location in order to avoid the loss of all the trees of a given species that may fall victim to an infestation such as the one currently decimating the city's ash trees.

He said there's lots of information in the proposed ordinance about how far trees need to be from curbs, sidewalks, street lights, overhead wires and other zoning regulations required by the city.

"We'll make sure that it's going to be right," he said. "If everything lines up well, then twice a year the city would go out — once in the spring and once in the fall — and plant all the trees that have been accepted for the program."

Once the tree is planted, the homeowner will become responsible for watering and maintaining the tree. He said there is information in the city's policies and procedures for homeowners on how to care for the trees. He said the city would warranty the tree for a year unless it was damaged by the property owner.

"Hopefully this program can be first used to address ash trees that are taken out of the street but then expand it to other areas where street trees are desirable," Sadler told the council. "That's in our 2040 plan to plant more trees throughout our community so this is just one approach to that."

Mayor Zac Burden said that he "loved" everything about the program.

"I think this is great," he said, noting that it represents an opportunity to encourage residents to partake of the plan. "It works with people, they've got some skin in the game in it as well, but it makes it definitely affordable for everybody and sticks with the city tree plan that allows us to have some characterization in this. I was very excited to read this." Sadler said that maybe in the first year there's 10 or 15 trees that qualify and that the department then plants them all at one time. He said it was his hope that once they're all planted together, people would take notice and want to be part of that program as well. He said that the cost share was a benefit in that people would take ownership of the tree and strive more to take care of it.

"When I think about, you know, so many of our communities are blessed with big, huge, beautiful trees, and that only starts by planting trees now so that they become big, old beautiful trees in your community," Burden said.

Embracing Local History Part 16 - FINAL DAYS OF BLACK HAWK AND HIS WAR

By Blytha Ellis, President
Adair County Historical Society and Museum

Although the Black Hawk War was taking place in Illinois in 1832 (as discussed in our previous episode), people in Missouri became alarmed that hostilities might spread into Northeast Missouri. This threat was so real that Missouri Governor John Miller ordered that three forts be built in our area to protect Missouri citizens.

The outcome was that fighting never crossed over the Mississippi River into Missouri. But, the Black Hawk War, nevertheless, had an impact upon Missouri settlers and our state's military resources.

During the Black Hawk War, there were times that the Sauk warrior, Black Hawk, tried to end the conflict peacefully, but this did not happen. During one battle in Illinois, under a flag of truce, he witnessed a willful massacre of his people. After that, he was truly committed to all-out war! It was reported that President Andrew Jackson and his Secretary of War, Lewis Cass, refused to consider a peaceful solution because a decisive victory over Black Hawk would be an example to other Native Americans who might consider defying the U.S.

Black Hawk placed his women, children and elderly with the Rock River Ho-Chunk tribe and took his warriors up the river into Michigan Territory, raiding many white settlements as he went. The many battles of the Black Hawk War are too numerous to mention here. Not all tribes in the area agreed with Black Hawk's actions and began warning settlers.

After four months of fighting, the final confrontation of the Black Hawk War was on August 1 and 2, 1832, at the mouth of the Bad Axe River where hundreds of Sac and Potawatomi were massacred with the aid of a gunboat. This was near present-day Victory, Wisconsin.

On August 27, 1832, Black Hawk surrendered to Lieutenant Jefferson Davis, future President of the Confederacy. Following the same path as Chief Big Neck, Black Hawk was taken down the Mississippi River and held at Jefferson Barracks near St. Louis, along with ten other Native American leaders. After eight months, they were taken east by order of President Andrew Jackson and imprisoned in Virginia.

As Black Hawk was making this trip east as a prisoner, he was surprisingly treated like a celebrity. Large crowds came out to see him as he traveled by steamboat, train and carriage. The incarceration of these Native Americans was only symbolic as it was reported that President Jackson's goal was to show the Indians how strong and mighty the United States was and to discourage any future resistance against the U.S.

Black Hawk and the Indian leaders with him were only held in Virginia a few weeks. In June 1833, they were sent on a tour of large American cities in the East to show them how great and powerful the U.S. was. Black Hawk would later write, "May you never experience the humility that the power of the American government has reduced me to."

In a previous visit of tribal chiefs to President James Monroe after being shown big cities, the leader of the Grand Pawnees named Sharitarish said his people preferred their hunting grounds to these big cities. Then he made this profound statement, "... we have plenty of land, if you will keep your people off it." One can be assured that Black Hawk felt the same way!

The Native Americans were then returned to Iowa where Black Hawk lived among the Sauk people along the Iowa River. There, as an old man, he tried to reconcile with American settlers and with his own people. In an unusual move, Black Hawk went to the Sac and Fox Indian Agency in Rock Island where he asked for someone to write a story from his point of view. This was viewed as a rare opportunity, so an interpreter and a news reporter were secured to record Black Hawk's words. He stated, "I am determined to give my motives and reasons for my former hostilities to the whites and to vindicate my character." This book was published in 1833 and claimed to be the first Native American autobiography published in the U.S. (It is now available for reading online).

In the year of his death, Black Hawk was called upon to give a speech at Fort Madison, Iowa, on July 4, 1838. He spoke about once being a great warrior and fighting against the whites, but how he was perhaps wrong. Some of his most poignant words in this speech were about his Illinois homeland: "Rock River was a beautiful country. I liked my towns, my cornfields and the home of my people. I fought for it. It is now yours. Keep it as we did — it will produce you good crops."

Black Hawk died in October of that year (1838) and was buried on the farm of a friend in Iowa. But, he did NOT rest in peace. His remains were stolen the next year and put on exhibition. His sons appealed to the territorial governor of Iowa who obtained the bones and secured them with the Burlington Geological and Historical Society. That building burned in 1855, reportedly consuming his bones. However, other rumors say a physician was given the bones, and they were buried. A grave does exist for Black Hawk at Iowaville Cemetery in the Iowa town by the same name, but no one knows if his remains are truly there.

Today, many places and things in Iowa, Illinois and elsewhere bear Black Hawk's name: Black Hawk County, IA, Black Hawk Bridge between Iowa and Wisconsin, Black Hawk Purchase in Iowa, 4 U.S. Navy vessels named USS Black Hawk, Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, Black Hawk College in Moline, IL, Black Hawk Country Club in Wisconsin, and the NBA Atlanta Hawks who were originally the Tri-Cities Blackhawks. At least three schools and/or their athletic teams are named Black Hawk, and the U.S. Military Black Hawk helicopter inspired the book and movie "Black Hawk Down."

Perhaps the memorial that this war leader would have liked the most is the Black Hawk State Historic Site in Rock Island, Illinois, adjacent to his former village of Saukenuk which Black Hawk loved and fought for. A statue of him stands there today.

It is quite certain that Black Hawk never imagined that forts were built for fear of him in a far-away county in Northeast Missouri to eventually be named Adair. But, they were, and these will be explored next.

The name of the city's water impounding reservoir was changed from Lake Kirksville to Forest Lake at a meeting of the Kirksville city council. The ordinance repealing the old name and establishing the new one said, "There has been a general dissent over the original nondescript naming of the lake and an unanimity of expression on the part of the public at large that the new lake should have a name that describes the setting and surrounding area of the lake." It was pointed out at the meeting that the Missouri State Park Board was not at all pleased with the name Lake Kirksville. There was concern on the part of some that the name Forest Lake might create a "political football" because Missouri Governor Smith's first name was Forrest but spelled with two r's. The new name was accepted unanimously by the city council.

Re-dedication ceremonies for the new Stokes Stadium on the Teachers College campus were held during half-time of the College's opening football game of the season. Construction of the original Stokes Stadium began in the late 1920s and dedication was held October 10, 1930. The old stadium had become obsolete with the increased number of students at the college. Seating capacity in the old stadium was 2,500 compared to a capacity of 4,700 in the newly completed all concrete stadium. Teachers College president, Walter H. Ryle, was the principal speaker for the event. State Senator W. O. Mackie and Representative J. J. Wimp, both of Kirksville also spoke at the dedication.

60 Years Ago, September 16, 1962

Longtime Kirksville recreational attraction, Ownbey Lake, was in the process of being developed into a new housing subdivision by Dr. and Mrs. M. L. Garrett. The lake which was built around 1890 was drained, and the many years of accumulation of muck was being removed. The Garretts named the future residential development, "College Park Estates." The dance hall pavilion which hosted dances for Kirksville groups featuring well-known orchestras of the period was to be removed. The development of Ownbey Lake was a lifelong dream of Maurice Garrett, then a student at the Kirksville College of Osteopathy and Surgery (KCOS), and Pansy March, a Kirksville resident. The couple, who married in 1935, spent many hours boating and dancing at Ownbey Lake. After the death of Ben Ownbey, son of the original owner of the lake, and his heirs, the property was available for purchase. The Garretts purchased it immediately as they had expressed interest in owning the lake property for years. The future College Park was to contain approximately 115 acres making it one of Kirksville's largest residential developments.

Living at boyfriend's house requires dealing with dad

DEAR ABBY: I live with my boyfriend and his father. I moved in two years ago to help them pay bills so they could keep living in the house my boyfriend grew up in. But the situation has become unlivable. My boyfriend's father is rude, racist and self-centered. It doesn't matter that we are struggling; he goes out and spends all his money on guns and fancy dinners for other relatives. Then he complains about how he's broke and has no money to help buy things for the house. He has also raised our rent because he has "debt to the IRS," which has literally nothing to do with me or my boyfriend.

JEANNE PHILLIPS
DEAR ABBY

We can't talk to him without a big argument breaking out, and I'm at the end of my rope. It's too expensive to move, so please, any help or advice would be much appreciated. -- UNHAPPY ROOMMATE

DEAR ROOMMATE: I hope you now realize that your boyfriend's father isn't going to change; his nature is fully formed. This rude, self-centered racist is WHO HE IS. Instead of continuing to buy things for the house, pay the man his rent and start saving for another place to live. If your boyfriend can contribute to that fund, he can move with you. If he's unwilling or unable to do that, leave and find a roommate with whom to share expenses. And be grateful, very grateful, you haven't married into this family and can escape with no entanglements. Move on -- the sooner, the better.

NEWS OF THE WEIRD...

Unclear on the Concept

Elizabeth Leon, 18, was hired to babysit a 4-year-old in Aventura, Florida, from 1:45 p.m. until midnight on Aug. 15, Local10 reported. When the child's mother texted Leon at 11:14 p.m. to say she was headed home, Leon texted back that she was "heading out ... because her mother paid for an Uber to take her back home and it arrived ahead of time," an arrest report said. Leon told the mother she had locked the door, and requested her $168 payment. The mother checked her Ring doorbell recording and saw that Leon had actually left at 9:45 p.m., leaving the child alone for more than two hours. On Aug. 22, Leon was charged with child neglect and transferred to jail, where she's unlikely to be able to leave early.

Police Report

In Fort Myers, Florida, Lee County deputies stopped to investigate a Nissan Altima that was parked blocking a bicycle lane on Sept. 3, NBC2-TV reported. Officers found a man reclining in the driver's seat; after giving them a false name, he was asked to exit the vehicle. That's when Randy Austerman, 34, reached into the console and removed a 3-foot-long steel sword, then paused to attach a dragon-shaped handle to the blade. Police backed off as Austerman poked the sword out the car's window at them. As he tried to escape through the passenger door, Austerman was subdued and arrested; officers found methamphetamine, marijuana and a glass pipe in the car.

Bright Idea

Ryan Boria and Amy Schaner were really hoping for a slow night at the Wendy's where they both worked on Aug. 26. So as they drove to the restaurant in Tilden Township, Pennsylvania, they made a short stop, WFMZ-TV reported. Along the train crossing at Industrial Drive, Boria "placed a shunt on the track. He got back in the car with (Schaner) and they proceeded to Wendy's," Officer Frank Cataldi of the Tilden Township Police Department said. "They told us that their intentions were that if the gates could malfunction and they could somehow block traffic, then that would prevent people from getting to Wendy's, and they could have a slow night at work." Both were arrested on multiple charges, including causing or risking a catastrophe.

Kirksville girls' tennis team gets big win against Trenton

By Adam Tumino
Daily Express

The Kirksville girls' tennis team picked up a big home win against district opponent Trenton on Thursday by a score of 9-1, improving to 3-4 on the season. In just seven matches, the Tigers now have as many wins as they did in 12 matches a season ago.

The Tigers were a team with almost an entirely new roster entering the season and had many unknowns, but head coach Lee Riley said that the team has performed well and put themselves in a good position in district.

"Getting a win here on a district opponent is a really good positive," he said. "Right now we're going to be seeded No. 1 in the district, so they're going to have to come through us. That's a good thing, but you can't underestimate anybody when you get to that point."

Against Trenton, Kirksville took all three points in doubles play. At No. 1 doubles, Lauren Xander and Katlynn DeLeon won 8-4. They are now 4-3 in doubles play this season.

At No. 2 doubles, Madisynn Crawford and Bryn Williams won 8-3 to move to 5-1 as a doubles team. Ava Hamlin and Ashley Combs won by a score of 8-2 in No. 3 doubles.

The only point that Kirksville lost came in No. 1 singles where Lauren Xander fell to Trenton's Astrid Soriano, who trailed Xander 7-4 before coming back to win 9-7. DeLeon, Crawford and Williams all won their matchups 8-2 while Ava Hamlin took her match-up 9-8 in a tiebreaker. At No. 6 singles, Combs won 8-1. She was seeing action at No. 6 for the second time this season.

The upcoming week will be a busy one for the Tigers. They play Hickman on the road Monday, then come back home Tuesday to face Palmyra in what will be senior night for Kirksville. They then head on the road to play Fulton Thursday before capping it off at the Hannibal Tournament on Saturday.

With temperatures expected to reach the low to mid 90s early next week and a slate of tough opponents, Riley said that the team will have to be prepared for multiple challenges.

"They've got to keep hydrated, I know that. Just keep bringing the coolers and the ice for them and tell them to slow down when they can in the matches," he said. "Hickman, they've got two seniors at 1 and 2, and I looked at their record and I don't think they've lost yet this year, beating everyone pretty bad, even teams that have beaten us. Palmyra's always good... they're going to be tough."

Hickman won each of its first nine matches this season, with four of those wins coming 9-0.

As Riley mentioned, three of those wins came against teams that have beaten Kirksville this season. Father Tolton lost to Hickman 9-0 to open the season and later beat the Tigers 7-2. Hannibal and Marshall have both beaten Kirksville 7-2 this season and lost to Hickman 8-1.

Over the course of that week, Riley said he hopes to see the team gain valuable experience and prepare for upcoming conference play.

"We've got to get ourselves ready for conference, so our singles girls need to get as good as they can at singles and our JV, get them playing together and get them more doubles matches under their belt. And they're going to get that at the Hannibal Tournament, they're going to get a lot of doubles matches, so that'll help."

MLB storylines to watch as the regular season nears an end

As the 2022 MLB season nears its end, there are plenty of storylines to watch out for. There are the typical ones, like playoff races heating up as teams start mounting final pushes for wild card spots or take aim at the division lead.

There are also several storylines that are much more intriguing than the usual September stuff that we get year after year.

Perhaps the most unexpected thing on the radar at this point is the fact that 42-year-old Cardinals star Albert Pujols pursuit of 700 home runs is in fact alive and well, something that seemed highly unlikely entering the season.

As of Sept. 15, Pujols sits at 697 home runs, a staggering total that puts him fourth on the all-time list. He trails only Babe Ruth at 714, Hank Aaron at 755 and Barry Bonds at 762. Barring some absolutely miraculous stretch, he will remain in the four spot.

Pujols got himself to the brink of 700 by having his best season since 2011, the last season of his first stint in St. Louis. According to the metric OPS+, Pujols has been a below-average major league hitter for the last five seasons until his mark of 145 this season, meaning he rates as 45 percent better than the average hitter. He eclipsed that number in each of his first 10 seasons in St. Louis, which was probably the greatest first 10 seasons of a career in league history.

ADAM TUMINO

The milestone of 700 home runs is a little bit silly. Pujols would be just the fourth player to reach that number, sure, but he was also the fourth player to hit 697, and will be the fourth player to reach 698 and 699. But 700 certainly has a nice ring to it.

Truman State football team faces familiar foe in Hillsdale

By Adam Tumino
Daily Express

The Truman State football team will be on the road for the second-straight game Saturday when they play Hillsdale, and the Bulldogs will be looking to come home with their second-straight win. Truman took down South Dakota Mines last weekend for their first win of the season, bouncing back from a season-opening loss against Davenport.

Truman and Hillsdale played twice last season, once in the regular season and again in the America's Crossroads Bowl. The Bulldogs won both matchups, taking the first game 34-24 and the second 34-17.

Many of the top performers from last season's matchups will be on the field Saturday, including several at key positions.

Both teams have retained their starting quarterbacks from last season. Truman's Nolan Hair was 16-of-23 in the first game for 250 yards and three touchdowns and was also 16-of-23 in the second game, this time for 162 yards and a touchdown. He did not throw an interception against Hillsdale last season.

The Chargers have starting quarterback Garrit Aissen back, although he did not start the first game last season. Hillsdale started Jake Burger in the regular season matchup, and he was 21-of-36 passing for 213 yards and a pair of touchdowns, his only two touchdowns in two games played last season.

Aissen started 10 of the Chargers' games last season, including the America's Crossroads Bowl where he was 24-of-35 passing for 263 yards, a touchdown and two interceptions.

Truman of course does not have last season's leading rusher Cody Schrader, who ran for a combined 392 yards and four touchdowns in the two games last season. Hillsdale does have its top two running backs from last season, although neither Jack Robinson or Logan VanEnkevort were able to get much going against Truman's run defense last season. The pair gained just 93 yards on 28 combined carries in the two games.

As Roger Federer retires, an appreciation of his career

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Roger Federer never let 'em see him sweat.

He played tennis with a style that only rarely betrayed the effort behind the masterful serving, the rare-in-its-day attacking and the flawless footwork. He was not one to grunt loudly on shots or celebrate wildly after them.

The way he wielded a racket helped him to win, yes, and win a lot, to the tune of 20 Grand Slam championships — a half-dozen more than any man before him — across a 15-year stretch, and 103 tournament titles in all, plus a Davis Cup trophy and Olympic medals for Switzerland, and spend week after week at No. 1 in the rankings. It also helped him manage to avoid serious injuries for so long and achieve the consistent excellence over decades he prized.

“Every time people write me off, or try to write me off, I’m able to bounce back,” Federer once said in an interview with The Associated Press. On Thursday, at a little more than a month past his 41st birthday and after a series of knee operations, he announced that there would be no more comebacks.

It is a loss for tennis, to be sure, and a loss for the sports world. The news arrives less than two weeks after Serena Williams, who owns 23 Grand Slam singles titles, played what she indicated would be the last match of her own illustrious career shortly before she turns 41.

“Some depart, others come and the world keeps going,” one of Federer’s great rivals, Rafael Nadal, said recently. “It’s a natural cycle.”

OK, the world will keep going. But tennis will not be the same.

Not without Williams, who was feted at the just-concluded U.S. Open. And not without Federer, whose last tournament came last year at Wimbledon, and whose final appearance on court will be next week in London at the Laver Cup, a team event his management group founded.

Tennis will miss Federer, the player. And Federer, the statesman and ambassador who spoke several languages. And Federer, the instantly recognizable global pitchman who brought his sport to places all over the world that didn’t even have tournaments through exhibitions to raise money for his charitable foundation.

Once a tantrum-throwing kid — on the court and off, where he would overturn a chess table when losing to his father — who grew up admiring basketball stars such as Michael Jordan and soccer players more than tennis players, Federer became a symbol of his sport and someone known as much for the way he carried himself as the hardware he accumulated.

“He was the epitome of a champion; class, grace, humility, beloved by everyone,” Hall of Famer Chris Evert wrote on Twitter.

He became friends with Vogue editor Anna Wintour and showed up at the Met Gala. He had a special jacket with a gold “15” on it to don right there on Centre Court after winning Wimbledon in 2009 to break Pete Sampras’ men’s mark of 14 career major trophies. He kept playing, and winning, well past an age that is customary for that sort of thing in tennis, to the point that his two sets of twins — now ages 13 and 8 — eventually were able to be present in court-side guest boxes. He returned after left knee surgery in 2016, the first significant absence of his career, and used a larger racket head and a rebuilt backhand to collect his last three Slams.

“There won’t be anybody like him,” said Tony Godsick, Federer’s agent since 2005. “There will be people who will win more tournaments or will have more Grand Slams. There will always be a new No. 1. There will always be someone holding a trophy up. But no one has had such a big impact and will continue to have such a big impact.”

When it came to defining success, Federer cared about longevity as much as anything. He was proud of facing — and defeating — stars from an earlier generation (Sampras and Andre Agassi), from his own generation (Andy Roddick, Lleyton Hewitt, Marat Safin), from the next generation (Rafael Nadal, Novak Djokovic, Andy Murray, Stan Wawrinka) and from the current crop (Daniil Medvedev, Stefanos Tsitsipas).

He chased the first group, dominated the second, dueled with the third — Nadal, with 22, and Djokovic with 21, eventually surpassed Federer’s Grand Slam total — and set an example for the fourth.

Aside from those major trophies won from 2003 to 2018, Federer put together unprecedented stretches of elite play, appearing in 10 consecutive Grand Slam finals (and 18 of 19), along with 23 semifinals and 36 quarterfinals in a row.

His contests against Nadal, now 36, and Djokovic, 35, were happenings, tantalizing matchups against a backdrop

Switzerland’s Roger Federer is applauded by ground staff as he holds the trophy after defeating Croatia’s Marin Cilic to win the Men’s Singles final match on day thirteen at the Wimbledon Tennis Championships in London Sunday, July 16, 2017. of differing ways of play and contrasting personalities.

“I was lucky enough to play so many epic matches that I will never forget,” Federer wrote in the section of his goodbye post addressed to his competitors. “We battled fairly, with passion and intensity, and I always tried my best to respect the history of the game. I feel extremely grateful. We pushed each other, and together we took tennis to new levels.”

Predicted to be a star from the time he won the Wimbledon junior title as a teenager — a sentiment that only built when he stunned Sampras in the fourth round there in 2001 — it took Federer a little time to get pointed in the right direction: He did not win a quarterfinal match in his first 16 Grand Slam appearances.

There were six first-round exits in that span, including at the 2003 French Open. So then came this concern: Might Federer not quite be as good as he, and others, thought?

It all came together at Wimbledon that year, where Federer claimed his first Grand Slam title at the tournament that always meant the most to him. And off he went.

“There was pressure from all sides; also from myself. I wanted to do better in Slams,” Federer said that day. “I’ve always believed, but then in the end, when it happens, you don’t think that it is possible. It’s an absolute dream for me. I was always joking around when I was a boy: ‘I’m going to win this.’”

He would end up with those men’s-record eight at Wimbledon, plus six at the Australian Open, five at the U.S. Open and one at the French Open. He is one of eight men with a career Grand Slam, holds the records for most consecutive weeks at No. 1 in the ATP computerized rankings and for oldest to get there, and set a mark for most total weeks that Djokovic eclipsed.

If anyone worried that Federer is gone for good, one of those athletes who wants to disappear after the playing days are done, he concluded his farewell note with these words: “To the game of tennis: I love you and will never leave you.”

MLB celebrates Roberto Clemente Day at Citi Field

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — For the big leaguers who saw him play, Roberto Clemente was a breathtaking talent and unmistakable force on the field who made a powerful impact on young ballplayers.

Major League Baseball celebrated its 21st annual Roberto Clemente Day on Thursday, with festivities centered in New York, where the Mets hosted the Hall of Fame outfielder's former team, the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Clemente died in a plane crash at age 38 attempting to deliver relief supplies to earthquake victims in Nicaragua on New Year's Eve 1972. To mark the 50th anniversary year of that tragedy, more than a dozen winners of baseball's treasured Roberto Clemente Award for philanthropy and playing excellence joined Clemente family members at Citi Field for the pregame ceremony.

"The most important trophy that I have in my house. Because it's not just a trophy," said former Mets slugger and 2006 winner Carlos Delgado, like Clemente a proud native of Puerto Rico.

Hall of Famers Dave Winfield and Jim Thome were among the Clemente Award winners introduced on the field before highlights of the 15-time All-Star's life and career played on the large video board in center field.

Players and coaches from both teams — all wearing Clemente's No. 21, as did some others around the majors — lined the baselines. Puerto Rican musician José Feliciano performed the national anthem of Puerto Rico and "The Star-Spangled Banner," and Clemente's 4-year-old grandson threw out a first pitch in an RC III Pirates jersey.

"It is a very special energy today," said Luis Clemente, Roberto's son. "The energy is totally different this year."

Clemente, a cherished icon in baseball-loving Puerto Rico, became the first Caribbean and Latin American player enshrined in the Hall of Fame in 1973.

The strong-armed right fielder won 12 Gold Gloves, four batting titles and the 1966 NL MVP award. He helped lead the Pirates to a pair of championships in 18 brilliant seasons and was the 1971 World Series MVP.

"I came in the league in '73. I knew who Roberto Clemente was and I was going to be a right fielder, so I watched the way he charged the ball, picked it up, threw people out. I wish (we) would have been able to play so we could test each other's arms. But he was an incredible player and an even more incredible human being," Winfield said.

"Before I go, man, that was one of the things that I wanted to do was win this Roberto Clemente Award, because it would just acknowledge some of the work that had been done throughout my career," he added. "I missed him by a year. But his legacy continues and we're all part of that."

Clemente got his 3,000th hit in his final at-bat, a double off Mets left-hander Jon Matlack on Sept. 30, 1972.

"You look back through the history and some of the things he did and what he means," Mets manager Buck Showalter said, "it's a great thing baseball is doing."

"I think of him catching the ball down the right field line and spinning and throwing," Showalter added, noting he swung a Roberto Clemente model bat in high school. "I think about his reckless abandon and how loud a runner he was. Can you imagine what it was like trying to tag him at second, coming in, back when you could actually slide with your spikes and stay hooked to the bag because it wasn't hard and plastic and slick?"

There's been a push in recent years for MLB to retire Clemente's No. 21 for all teams, the way the sport did in 1997 to honor Dodgers pioneer Jackie Robinson for breaking baseball's color barrier 50 years earlier.

DeShields chronicles USA Basketball training camp

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

LAS VEGAS — I'm so grateful to have the opportunity to put on the USA jersey every day.

It's been a long road back after thinking my career was over after having spinal surgery in January of 2020.

I thought my life was going to change drastically and I wouldn't ever be able to play again. Yet here I am 2 years later, hoping to earn a spot on the U.S. World Cup roster.

Thinking back to my time in the hospital bed to be now being back at the peak of competition, I'm just so grateful to be playing basketball at this level again. I can't really discredit God at this point, I'm just really humbled to be here.

It's a dream as a basketball player to play for the USA. It's the one team that everyone wants to play for at some point and everyone knows is one of the hardest to make. To have the opportunity right now is a dream come true.

This isn't my first time playing for USA, having won a gold medal at the World University Games when I was in college. That probably was the longest flight I ever took, well until now when we head off to Sydney.

One thing you can always count with USA Basketball is that they take you all over the world. Up next might be outer space.

This is my first time going to the Outback. I think I'm looking forward to learning more about the place. Experiencing the continent and just trying to get myself back on track. Ever since the Phoenix Mercury season ended I've been running and ripping across multiple states.

We had a good training week in Las Vegas. It's a really good group and everybody carries the same energy and intensity as far as winning goes. Practices are really competitive and there are a lot of new faces which is nice. There's also a lot of youth.

I've gotten to spend some time with Rhyn Howard. She and I are very similar in a lot of ways. It's been great to pick her brain a little bit and take in this whole experience with her. At some point soon, we'll have to have a conversation about SEC basketball.

As a group we're still looking to build our team chemistry, but everyone's bought in on the process and what the team will look like. We eat all our meals together and lift together. We've had some good recovery pool workouts too.

Truman State head coach Gregg Nesbitt looks on from the sideline during the season opener against Davenport on Sept. 3. ADAM TUMINO

Both teams have their top receivers from last season's matchups as well, with Truman receiver Zach Zerwig and tight end Matt Hall back. Zerwig had 87 yards and a touchdown in the first game while Hall added 53 yards and a score. Zerwig did not play in the America's Crossroads Bowl, but Hall led the team with 42 yards and another touchdown.

Hillsdale's Isaac TeSlaa stood out in both games last season, catching 12 balls for 106 yards and a touchdown in the first game and 81 yards on six catches, including a touchdown, in the bowl game.

Defensively, Hillsdale's Michael Herzog, who led the team with nine total tackles in the regular season matchup, and Sam Zemis, who led the team with 12 total tackles in the bowl game, are both back.

The Chargers will be reacquainted with all of Truman's starters on defense, including Ben Thomas who tied for the team lead in total tackles in both games last season.

Another future Hall-of-Famer having an improbable season is Astros pitcher Justin Verlander, who after missing all of last season recovering from Tommy John surgery seems poised to win his third Cy Young Award.

Verlander leads the league in wins (16), ERA (1.84), ERA+ (210) and WHIP (0.855). This is the best season of the 39-year-old's career, which is certainly saying something given his resume. He is even better this season than he was in 2011, when he won his first Cy Young and was also named AL MVP.

Most of his stats this season jump off the page, but his ERA+ is particularly impressive. It means that Verlander has been over twice as good as the average pitcher this season.

Two other, and much younger, stars are also making for an intriguing final stretch of the season. Yankees outfielder Aaron Judge and Angels pitcher/designated hitter Shohei Ohtani are making the AL MVP race one of the most interesting in recent memory.

Ohtani has built on the last several seasons and proven himself as perhaps the single most talented player in baseball history. As a pitcher this season, he is 12-8 with a 2.55 ERA. He has also struck out 188 batters in 141 innings and posted an ERA+ of 157. If that was all he did this season, it would be impressive enough.

But he is also slashing .265/.355/.534 as a hitter this season with 34 home runs, 88 RBI and an OPS+ of 148.

His OPS+ ranks ninth in baseball, and while he falls just outside the qualifiers for ERA+, his mark of 157 would rank 10th. He is one of the ten best hitters in baseball and ten best pitchers in baseball at the same time, something that is truly impossible for me to wrap my head around.

It can be easy to assume that Ohtani would be the runaway MVP, but Judge is not exactly having a run-of-the-mill All-Star season. He is having one of the best offensive seasons ever.

Judge currently leads the league with 57 home runs, which is 19 more than the second-closest player, Philadelphia's Kyle Schwarber.

Nineteen home runs is not a small amount. Only 60 players in baseball have more than 19 home runs as of Sept. 15. Judge is a full Randy Arozarena ahead of Schwarber.

Judge is likely to become just the sixth player in MLB history to hit 60 home runs, and with 61 would tie Roger Maris for the most in American League history. Then the only players that would be ahead of him on the single-season list would be Sammy Sosa, Mark McGwire and Bonds, who have all had their legacies tarnished by PED use.

Ohtani may be unfairly hurt by the fact that the Angels are a very bad team, although it is very clearly not his fault. It is unfortunate that one of these players will not be named MVP. There have not been two players more deserving in a long time.

Hopefully these intriguing storylines continue to be fun to follow, and will lead into an exciting postseason.

SUDOKU

Here's How It Works: Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Take on something new and exciting, and let go of the things you have no control over. If you want to get ahead, you must be open and responsive to opportunities that come your way. There is no time to waste, and plenty you can accomplish if you are ready, willing and able to make a move on command.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) -- Leave nothing undone or in someone else's hands. Look at the price tag before you part with your cash, and consider the stress that comes with debt before you embark on a big commitment.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) -- Socializing will be informative. Ask questions and be a part of the conversation, and you'll meet people who encourage you to add to your knowledge, skills and experience.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) -- Take a physical approach to whatever you pursue. Be the one to enforce change if that's what you want. Refuse to let anyone stand in your way. Discuss opportunities with a like-minded colleague.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) -- Rely on intelligence to get you through your day. Refuse to let emotional matters take precedence over what's important to you. Walk away from negativity and lies. Finish what you start.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) -- Think before you spend. Pay attention to detail and gather information before deciding what to do next. Be prepared to retrace your steps. A change at home will benefit you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) -- Not everyone will agree with you. Don't hesitate to head in a direction that suits your needs. You can't please everyone, but you can offer your blessing and get the same in return.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) -- Don't take anything or anyone for granted. Look at what you are up against, and take steps to deal with any obstacles. A reserved attitude is favored. Positive change begins with you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) -- Travel about, ask questions and wrap your head around your objective. You can make a difference if you draw on people who can deliver the goods and complement what you offer.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) -- A joint venture will lead to emotional mayhem. Pay attention to how you present yourself to others, and you will receive compliments and interest in your work. Carry out your plan yourself.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) -- Be realistic and promise only what's feasible. Taking on too much will leave you in a compromising position. Put your heart and soul into something that matters to you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) -- You'll come up with unique solutions that result in unexpected opportunities. Dig deep, gather information and prepare to dazzle onlookers. Heed the lessons of your personal experience.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) -- Stay focused on what's important. Don't let anyone sidetrack you or coerce you into something that benefits them instead of you. Gather information and pick up skills that will boost your income.

From farm to table: Share the road this harvest season

Watch out for slow-moving farm equipment

By MoDOT

JEFFERSON CITY — This harvest season, the Missouri Coalition for Roadway Safety is reminding motorists to keep a watchful eye for slow-moving farm vehicles. Being patient, driving carefully and respecting boundaries are all equally important when driving around farm vehicles.

“It can be easy to forget that farmers are simply doing their jobs when moving equipment from field to field,” said Robert Brinkmann, chairman of the Missouri Highways and Transportation Commission and the Missouri Coalition for Roadway Safety. “It’s important that we as drivers be patient and give them the space they need, so we can all reach our destinations safely.”

Motorists that are unfamiliar with farming communities may not immediately recognize farm equipment on roadways or be aware of the special hazards they present. Lighting and reflector locations on tractors, combines and other farm equipment are different from other motor vehicles. Loads on farm vehicles may be wider than other vehicles, which present special hazards for other motorists when left, right, rear and front projections are not easily recognizable.

The most common collisions occur when the approaching motorist hits a farm vehicle from behind (rear-end collision), or when a passing motorist hits a farm vehicle that is attempting to make a wide left turn (left sideswipe).

The Missouri Coalition for Roadway Safety recommends these simple tips when driving around slow-moving farm machinery:

- Be mindful that it’s harvest season and keep an eye out for machinery.
- Be patient and remember that farmers are just doing their jobs.

• Always pass on the left and only when you have clear sight distance.

• Always wear your seat belt. It’s your best defense in any traffic crash.

• Pay full attention to the road and put your cell phone down.

Missouri’s strategic highway safety plan, Show-Me Zero, provides more information on how all Missourians can do their part to achieve zero traffic fatalities. The plan can be viewed at www.savemolives.com.
