Kirksville High School graduate was known as 'The Father of the Minicomputer'

By Marty Bachman
Daily Express

C. Gordon Bell, a Kirksville Class of 1952 graduate who recently passed away in Corona, Calif. at the age of 89, was hailed by The New York Times, The Washington Post and other leading media outlets for his computer designs in the 1960s, which "fueled the emergence of the minicomputer industry."

"Called the 'Frank Lloyd Wright of computers' by Data-mation magazine, Mr. Bell was the master architect in the effort to create smaller, affordable, interactive computers that could be clustered into a network," The New York Times reported in a story posted on May 21, four days after his death. "A virtuoso at computer architecture, he built the first time-sharing computer and championed efforts to build the Ethernet. He was among a handful of influential engineers whose designs formed the vital bridge between the room-size models of the mainframe era and the advent of the personal computer."

According to an obituary at kirksvilledailyexpress.com, Bell was born in Kirksville on Aug. 19, 1934 to Chester Bell, an electrician, and Lola (Gordon) Bell, who taught grade school. He grew up helping with the family business, Bell Electric, repairing appliances and wiring homes. By his early teens he had acquired the skills of a journeyman electrician. Bell was accepted into a dual program at MIT, receiving a bachelor's degree and a master's degree, both in electrical engineering and awarded in 1957. He received a Fulbright fellowship to study in Australia at the University of New South Wales, where he met his first wife, Gwen Druyor.

The Washington Post reported that Bell was an engineer who helped usher in the era of modern computing by moving technology beyond the massive mainframes of the past and toward the desktops and laptops of the present, an innovation that made him known as the father of the minicomputer.

According to his obituary, Bell was the second computer architect hired at Digital Equipment and designed several of their PDP machines. Later, he served as the company's vice president of Engineering, overseeing development of the VAX computer systems.

"He was among a handful of influential engineers whose designs formed the vital bridge between the room-size models of the mainframe era and the advent of the personal computer," his obituary states.

"At the time, the most sophisticated computers were main-frames, machines so large that they filled entire rooms and came with price tags running into the millions of dollars," The Washington Post reported. "Mr. Bell envisioned a new type of computer, one built on a smaller scale to make the power of computing more affordable and more accessible. It would become known as the minicomputer."

According to The Washington Post, Bell designed a family of computers known as VAX — short for Virtual Address eXtension — which debuted in 1977 and became available in increasingly compact sizes. The Washington Post reported that VAX emerged as "the de facto standard computing system for industry, the sciences, engineering, and research," according to the Computer History Museum in Mountain View, Calif., which Mr. Bell helped founded. Bell, ac-

According to The Washington Post, was regarded as one of the most influential computer engineers of his time and took a long view of technology, postulating a rule called Bell's law to explain the evolution of computers from one generation to the next.

The 150th anniversary of Osteopathy to be celebrated on June 22

By Jane Stark
Osteopathic Historian

At 10 a.m. on June 22, 1874, the idea of a new form of medicine emerged from the mind of Andrew Taylor Still. Living in Macon at the time, Still relocated to Kirksville in early 1875 and made it his home and place of work until his death in 1917. This June 22 will mark the 150th anniversary of his idea that he would later name "Osteopathy". He said the delay was because "it has taken many years to prepare the ground to sow the seeds...that has come to benefit man..."

In 1892, at the age of 64, when most people are preparing for retirement, A.T. Still opened the first osteopathic school. It was a simple one-roomed school house, originally located at the corner of Brown Street (now Osteopathy Avenue and Jefferson). A few years later, a massive brick building estimated to cost $80,000, was erected on Jefferson Street. Still called it the American School of Osteopathy. Portions of the original building remain today and have been enveloped by A.T. Still University.

Housed within the A.T. Still university campus is the original school house. It is part of the Museum of Osteopathic Medicine. As the name suggests, this facility, supports the cataloging and preservation of osteopathic history. The Museum regularly hosts local, national and international students, graduates and delegations.

Being a humble individual, his discovery was more like an "uncovery" because osteopathy, he said, was natural and was always present. He was but the first person to develop the idea being that the body could, under the appropriate circumstances, heal itself. Those circumstances could be augmented by osteopathic care, which meant examining the "greatest engine that mind could conceive of" the human body, and helping to put it in proper "running order" by using a thorough knowledge of human biology

"To answer all the questions that are suggested by a human thigh bone would open and close an eternity." A.T. STILL (anatomy, physiology, mechanics) and the osteopath's hands. Adjuncts, such as medications, electricity, special diets, baths, etc, were not necessary.

On the 21st anniversary of his discovery, Still wrote, "For twenty-one years I have worked in Osteopathy...I expect to live and die fighting for principle...this, the 22nd of June, is the anniversary of the birth of the child Osteopathy, the child of which I am justly proud...On each successive year that I live I hope to meet you here and tell of even great advancement along these lines."

Although we can no longer meet A.T. Still, we can still celebrate his gift to the world, osteopathy, which is practiced by the majority of non-osteopathic physicians around the world, and osteopathic medicine, which is almost exclusively practiced by American osteopathic physicians.

If you have benefited from osteopathic care, work or attend A.T. Still University, or if you are simply a resident of Kirksville wondering about the name of the water tower, please consider dropping by the Forest-Llewellyn Cemetery this weekend and pay your respects to one of Kirksville's most famous residents — Andrew Taylor Still (1828-1917)

Kirksville Arts Association holds ribbon-cutting for Brandon Crandall sculptures

By Marty Bachman
Daily Express

The Kirksville Arts Association held a ribbon-cutting ceremony at the Sue Ross Arts Center on Thursday, June 13, to celebrate their acceptance of a pair of bronze sculptures by Brandon Crandall that have been over two years in the making and will be installed outside the Sue Ross Arts Center later this summer as a gift to the community.

The two sculptures, one of a country boy posed as an orchestra conductor with a tree stem as his baton, and the other, three animals crooning to his tempo, is a fusion of music and art, according to Crandall.

"Everybody loves music in one way or another, so the idea is he's conducting them, they're singing and that's it," Crandall said about his sculptures, noting the "musical vibe" and music's relationship to the other arts.

She is survived by her loving daughters, Tracy, Melissa, and Donna.

C. Gordon Bell

Aug 19, 1934 – May 17, 2024

C. Gordon Bell, a technology visionary whose computer designs for Digital Equipment Corporation fueled the emergence of the mini-computer industry in the 1960s, died May 17 at his home in Corona, Calif. He was 89.

Bell was born in Kirksville on Aug. 19, 1934 to Chester Bell, an electrician, and Lola (Gordon) Bell, who taught grade school. He grew up helping with the family business, Bell Electric, repairing appliances and wiring homes. By his early teens he had acquired the skills of a journeyman electrician.

Mr. Bell was accepted into a dual program at MIT, receiving a bachelor's degree and a master's degree, both in electrical engineering and awarded in 1957. He received a Fulbright fellowship to study in Australia at the University of New South Wales. There, he met his first wife, Gwen Druyor. He proposed via an English Electric DEUCE computer as he sat at one terminal and she sat at another.

He was the second computer architect hired at Digital Equipment and designed several of their PDP machines. Later, he served as the company's Vice President of Engineering from 1972-1983, overseeing development of the VAX computer systems. Called the "Frank Lloyd Wright of computers" by Datamation magazine, Mr. Bell was the master architect in the effort to create smaller, affordable, interactive computers that could be clustered into a network, and championed efforts to build the Ethernet. He was among a handful of influential engineers whose designs formed the vital bridge between the room-size models of the mainframe era and the advent of the personal computer.

After stints at several other startup ventures, Mr. Bell became the head of the National Science Foundation's computers and information science and engineering group, where he directed the effort to link the world's supercomputers into a high-speed network that led directly to the development of the modern internet. He later joined Microsoft's nascent research lab, where he remained for about 20 years before being named researcher emeritus.

He authored 6 books on computer architecture, computing, and entrepreneurship and led efforts to preserve computing history as a co-founder of The Computer Museum and as a founding board member of the The Computer History Museum. In 1991, he was awarded the National Medal of Technology and Innovation. In 1992, he was the first recipient of the IEEE John von Neumann Medal.

"His main contribution was his vision of the future," said David Cutler, a senior technical fellow at Microsoft, who worked with Mr. Bell at both Digital and Microsoft. "He always had a vision of where computing was going to go. He helped make computing much more widespread and more personal."

Mr. Bell explained his formula for repeated technology successes. "The trick in any technology," he said, "is knowing when to get on the bandwagon, knowing when to push for change, and then knowing when it's dead and time to get off."

Mr. Bell is survived by his second wife, Sheridan Sinclair-Bell of Corona and San Francisco; a stepdaughter, Logan Forbes of Mountain View, Calif.; a sister, Sharon Smith of Bethany, Mo.; two children, Brigham Bell of Louisville, Colo., and Laura Bell of Hillsborough, N.J.; and four grandchildren.

Robert 'Bob' Williams

Robert "Bob" Williams passed away unexpectedly in his sleep September 14, 2023, at his home in Fort Myers, FL.

Born in Wichita, KS, to Elmer & Frances Williams, he grew up on the family farm, Sunny Acres Pony Farm in Kirksville, MO.

Bob was a member of the first graduating class of the "new" Kirksville High School and upon graduation, he enlisted in the U.S. Marine Corps. He proudly served his country and was a Marine at heart for life.

Following his discharge from the Marine Corps, Bob enrolled at Northeast Missouri State College [now Truman University] in Kirksville, MO where he earned his Bachelor's and Master's degrees followed by a PhD from the University of Kansas in audiology and speech pathology. He worked for the Area Education Agency 15 in Ottumwa, IA for over 25 years and concluded his career in Fairfax, VA public schools as a speech pathologist.

His young students affectionately referred to him as "Dr. Bob" and were always thankful he never gave them a shot! Dr. Bob was kind, gentle, and extremely patient and never sat at a desk but rather with his students on the floor. He was delighted to return to working with students in Virginia, after working in a supervisory role in Iowa.

Bob married Joyce Ewing in 1965. They raised their two sons, Christian & Todd, in Ottumwa, IA.

After Joyce's death in 2000, he reconnected with high school sweetheart Debbie Bohon Kelly. They married in 2002, residing in Fairfax, VA and ultimately retired in Fort Myers, FL.

Bob and Debbie were able to see the entire blended family in Colorado this past spring over several weeks. In addition to attending granddaughter Zoe's high school graduation, they had the great pleasure of attending granddaughter Maddie's officer commissioning and graduation from the Air Force Academy. Bob was incredibly flattered and proud to render her first salute.

Bob is survived by loving wife Debbie, sons Christian (Kellie) and Todd (Tracy) Williams, and bonus children Molly (Bill Walsh) and Erin Kelly; grandchildren Maddie, Chance, Max and Lane Williams; Tucker, Cooper and Zoe Kelly-Walsh; and Alex and Dean Kelly- all who adored him. He is also survived by his brother Richard (Kay) Williams. He was preceded in death by his parents, first wife Joyce, and daughter-in-law Sareana Kelly.

Bob loved spending time with his family and golfing as often as possible. He was a kind and gentle spirit who will be sorely missed by all who knew and loved him.

Interment will be at Maple Hills Cemetery in Kirksville, MO with a Graveside service on June 22nd, 2024 at 11:30 a.m. A Celebration of Life will follow the graveside service at the Kirksville Country Club.

"The minicomputer, for its part, served as a technological steppingstone to modern-day personal computers, a class of machine once called microcomputers," The Washington Post reported.

In a June 22, 1992 article in Computerworld magazine, Bell said that Vax and the Vax environment were at the top of the list of his greatest accomplishments. "I don't mind being linked to the Vax," he's quoted in Computerworld as saying. "It's the most important thing I've done in that it touched more people than anything else."

A story in the Kirksville Daily Express about the Computerworld story said that in that 1992 issue, Bell was listed as one of the top 25 people that have changed the world.

According to his obituary, after stints at several startup ventures, Bell became the head of the National Science Foundation's computers and information science and engineering group, where he directed the effort to link the world's supercomputers into a high-speed network that led directly to the development of the modern internet. He later joined Microsoft's nascent research lab, where he remained for about 20 years before being named researcher emeritus.

The obit states that he authored six books on computer architecture, computing, and entrepreneurship and led efforts to preserve computing history as a co-founder of The Computer Museum and as a founding board member of the The Computer History Museum. In 1991, he was awarded the National Medal of Technology and Innovation. In 1992, he was the first recipient of the IEEE John von Neumann Medal. Bell was a founder of both Encore Computer and Ardent Computer.

"In 1986, he delved into the world of public policy when he joined the National Science Foundation and led the supercomputer networking effort that resulted in an early iteration of the internet called the National Research and Education Network," The New York Times reported. "In 1987, he sponsored the ACM Gordon Bell Prize for work in parallel computing."

According to his obit, Bell explained his formula for repeated technology successes: "The trick in any technology," he said, "is knowing when to get on the bandwagon, knowing when to push for change, and then knowing when it's dead and time to get off."

Bell is survived by his second wife, Sheridan Sinclair-Bell of Corona and San Francisco; a stepdaughter, Logan Forbes of Mountain View, Calif.; a sister, Sharon Smith of Bethany, Mo.; two children, Brigham Bell of Louisville, Colo., and Laura Bell of Hillsborough, N.J.; and four grandchildren.

SCULPTURES

Crandall's nephew, Sawyer, was the inspiration for the the boy conducting the choir, and Crandall approached the sculpture with a nod toward what might be a Mark Twain character in the 1800s. The Kirksville Arts Association commissioned the pieces and worked with him on developing the concepts.

Crandall, whose bronze works are on display throughout Kirksville, notably on the A.T. Still and Truman State University campuses, also has a sculpture on display at the state capitol in Jefferson City in addition to works he has created that are spread throughout the world.

The two sculptures will be permanently installed outside the Sue Ross Arts Center this summer.

ROBIN WRITES

she's going to wave

I have plenty to worry about. One of my ears sticks out farther than the other. I get my kids' and grandkids' names mixed up with long-dead relatives. If gas gets any more expensive, I will be working just so I can drive to work.

But my biggest worry right now is one I face every summer. The weather is warming up, and I will have to deal with the inevitable horror that I've hidden all winter beneath warm, fuzzy long sleeves.

Whether I like it or not, my big, fat, upper arms need to emerge from their winter casings of polyester and wool-blend. They will wave to the world with every twitch of my hands and wiggle like Jell-O at the slightest provocation.

I know my arms have every right to enjoy the light of day. They have been dependable and helpful-every time I snake one outward to reach for my order at a drive-thru window, I know it will return with the goods. The muscles and tendons are still viable, working members of my body.

Unfortunately, those muscles have hidden themselves beneath a whale-blubbery white mass of me that could feed a family of four igloo dwellers for months.

Exercise-on-the-cheap gurus hissed a remedy decades ago.

Get a couple cans of food (they KNOW "we of flabby arms" have plenty of food around) and heft them in exorcist-contorted reps until you strengthen and pare down the offending body area.

Well. Guess what. I've been lifting cans for years. Trash cans. Coffee cans. Cans of every ilk and size. I've reached toward the sky with wet-heavy towels and pinned them to the clothesline. I've grabbed towers of tonnage at yard sales; held it all securely as I schlepped around and looked for more.

No bag of Oreos is beyond my reach on the grocer's shelf; my upper arms have the strength and flexibility of Stretch Armstrong's when necessary. They've plucked cookies from high places for years.

None of these physical feats has reversed the effects of gravity and time on my ham hocks, however. They hang from the bone and smack against my sides like the gills of a banked fish.

I have no choice; I have to uncover my arms. To wear long sleeves in the summer is to label oneself as a nail-file hiding hijacker or as an eccentric old woman whose home runs rampant with hollow-eyed, rib-jutting cats.

I do NOT want to appear crazy. I worry about that. So, the time is here—when all of life will see what lies above my elbows. I will be adopting the "Queen's wave" for the next few months; swaying my hand side to side to minimize movement.

ROBIN GARRISON LEACH

I will avoid reaching above my head in public, lest a passerby suffer a smack from the upper-arm-aftershocks.

And I will not clap. For any reason. Clueless kids can climb rotten trees, and I will just holler a warning. James Taylor could stop by and croon a personal song of romantic rhymes, and I would just nod and drool. Babies can say their first word—just for me—and I will coo with delight... and without applause.

Until fall arrives, and I can cover my arms again, I will be limiting my movements to what I can reach without stirring up a breeze of flabby flesh.

It's time to put my Oreos on a lower shelf and go inside at McDonalds to pick up my order.

Summer and short sleeves. It's just too ugly.

HOME COUNTRY

The hometown
hardware store

A building project (for those of us who are carpenterially challenged) can be a confusing nightmare of little whatchits we never learned the name of and have no idea how to use.

Oh, if we need a two-by-four that's eight-feet long, we're on pretty safe ground and can head on over to MundoSlab, the building center that dedicates about half an acre to tar paper. It's fun going over there, and you never know when you'll find something you can't live without. You can buy the stuff in there from the kid who mowed your lawn until a month ago.

But when the real tough parts of a project come along, you know, things that involve plumbing or wiring, there's only one place to go ... the old-fashioned hardware store. MundoSlab coming in sure cut down on the number of old-fashioned hardware stores, but there's always one survivor.

They have gray-haired guys standing just inside the door to help you find just what you need, even if you don't know what it's called and have no clue how to install it.

I walked into the real hardware store the other day, and a guy with plenty of gray came over and asked if he could help.

"Well," I said. "I have a float thingie on the horse trough that broke. It's that little doo-trammy that's kinda copper-colored and fits on top of the whiz-gidget."

Without breaking stride, he looked at me and said, "Right-hand threads, or will you need an adaptor?"

Let's see MundoSlab match that.

PUBLIC HEALTH CORNER

HIV
Awareness Month

By Kirstyn Dietle, CHES[®]
Health Educator

Adair County Health Department

Welcome to the Public Health
Corner: HIV Awareness Month

HIV Awareness Month is dedicated to raising awareness about Human Immunodeficiency Virus (HIV), promoting prevention strategies, and supporting those affected by the virus. Understanding HIV, recognizing the importance of early detection, and advocating for effective treatment and stigma reduction are crucial steps in combating this global health issue.

Understanding HIV

HIV is a virus that attacks the body's immune system, specifically the CD4 cells (T cells), which can lead to Acquired Immunodeficiency Syndrome (AIDS) if not treated. Unlike some other viruses, the human body cannot get rid of HIV completely, so once someone has HIV, they have it for life. However, with proper medical care, HIV can be controlled, allowing individuals to live long, healthy lives.

Prevention Strategies

Preventing HIV involves a combination of strategies including safe sex practices, regular testing, and the use of pre-exposure prophylaxis (PrEP) for those at high risk. Using condoms correctly every time you have sex, limiting the number of sexual partners, and not sharing needles or syringes can significantly reduce the risk of HIV transmission. Regular testing and knowing your status are critical steps in preventing the spread of HIV.

Early Detection and Testing

Early detection of HIV through regular testing is vital for effective treatment and prevention of transmission. HIV tests are simple and accessible, and many clinics and community organizations offer free or low-cost testing. Knowing your HIV status empowers you to make informed decisions about your health and take necessary precautions to prevent transmission to others.

Supporting Loved Ones with PTSD

Antiretroviral therapy (ART) is the recommended treatment for HIV and involves taking a combination of HIV medicines every day. ART helps reduce the viral load in the body, maintain a healthy immune system, and prevent the progression to AIDS. Support groups, counseling services, and community organizations can provide emotional and practical support for individuals living with HIV, helping them to manage the condition and lead fulfilling lives.

Advocacy and Education

Stigma and discrimination remain significant barriers to HIV prevention and treatment. Public health campaigns and educational programs play a vital role in reducing stigma and promoting understanding and acceptance of individuals living with HIV. By educating the public about HIV transmission, prevention, and treatment, we can foster a more supportive and inclusive society.

As we observe HIV Awareness Month, let's commit to raising awareness, supporting those affected, and advocating for prevention and treatment strategies. By understanding HIV, promoting early detection, and fighting stigma, we can make strides towards ending the HIV epidemic and improving the lives of those impacted by the virus.

THE ROCKWOOD FILES

Gag me with a bowl

The sensory assault
of pet breakfast

My last baby was born more than 17 years ago. I remember because I gagged nearly every day for nine months before she made her entrance into the world.

I gagged when I opened my eyes in the morning. My stomach lurched when I brushed my teeth. I heaved at the smell of food, but I also gagged for no reason at all. A lovely spring breeze, a TV commercial for roofing, and even a simple yawn could double me over. But that was a long time ago, and I thought I was done with that. I was wrong.

But this time, it's not a human baby and a flood of hormones triggering my gag reflex. This time around, it's the fur babies. Specifically, it's their food.

We used to feed our cat and two dogs dry food because it smelled the least offensive. But somewhere along the way — after various tummy troubles — each one went on a hunger strike and rejected the kibble. So, we put wet food underneath the dry food to entice them back to their bowls.

If you've never had the distinct displeasure of opening a can of wet pet food, allow me to describe what you're (not) missing. Everything about the experience assaults the senses, beginning with the sound. After you peel the lid or wrapper off the top of the pet food, you've got to give it a forceful downward shake to get it out of the container and into a bowl. The food is vacuum-sealed so well that it often requires two or three determined thwacks to pry it loose. When it finally does come flying out, it lands with a soggy plopp.

The wet plopp rarely happens without splatter. Invariably, a drop of juice or an unrecognizable meat particle will escape the bowl onto your kitchen counter, hand, or both. My overactive gag reflex recoils at the clammy, gelatinous texture that often comes in its own god-forsaken gravy. I rush to the sink to wash it off my hands and the white countertop.

GWEN ROCKWOOD

I immediately pour dry kibble over the brown mound of canned food so I won't have to see it any longer than necessary. Brown food of any kind isn't pretty (unless it's banana bread). But shelf-stable, vacuum-sealed, brown, mushy food in mystery juice or gravy is particularly hard on the eyes. The dogs obviously disagree because they watch their breakfast preparation like it's the chase scene of an action-adventure movie.

The sound, texture, and sight of it might be tolerable if not for the accompanying smell. That's what usually pushes me over the edge. It never ever smells like the picture on the package. Pot roast with spring vegetables? Turkey, green beans, and potatoes? Nope. It smells like a lumpy loaf of mashed-up animal parts, including poultry necks, spleen segments, kidney giblets, intestines, and other byproducts commonly found in pet food. The cat and dogs think it smells delicious, as evidenced by how they clamor toward the bowls — drooling as they go.

I usually gag at least twice during this morning ritual despite a herculean effort to hold my breath and not look directly at it. But I'd do anything for this four-legged part of our family. I'd fight off a bear. I'd lift a car off their furry tails. And I'll keep getting up to prep this brackish breakfast while their tails wag in anticipation.

We all do crazy things for love.

And Always Forever Be True

I once asked an old man... what he'd learned from life... and what advice he had for me,
As I looked at him... his eyes became misty... he looked away, so I couldn't see.
He said life is short... but heartache is long...
and there's more in life than just you, Share your world... share your dreams... and always, forever be true.

The Kirksville police force was busy engaged in taking a census of the dogs in Kirksville. The purpose was to make sure that all the owners had obtained a city dog license. Thus far officers found that 116 dog owners had licenses, but it was estimated there were about 300 dogs that should have been licensed. The previous year there were 272 dog owners in Kirksville, but only 186 paid for licenses.

An order from the Missouri Supreme Court came to the sheriff of Adair County directing him to take to the state penitentiary a man who was dead. The deceased, Rano "Corduoy" White, had been convicted of perjury in a liquor violation case, found guilty, and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. He died two months earlier. The Supreme Court had no knowledge of White's death.

The three young sons of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Shelton of South First Street in Kirksville, who secretly decided to hitchhike to their grandmother's home in Memphis, caused considerable worry for their parents and trouble for officers and citizens. It was finally learned the next day that the boys were found near Memphis by the Scotland County Sheriff Seth Trotter. The boys Donald, 6, Paul, 9, and David, 12, were found the next day walking along the highway west of Memphis. The boys told their mother that they were going to a neighbor's yard to play in a sand pile. After being gone all night, the boys were reported missing, and an extensive search was begun by Adair County and surrounding county law enforcement officials. Several sightings of the boys had taken place the day they left Kirksville, but no one reported seeing the three boys until they were reported missing. In each instance the boys were seen walking along Highway 63 north of Kirksville and on the road from Lancaster to Memphis. For a time, there was concern that the boys may have decided to go swimming in Still Pond and drowned. However, a close examination of the area of Still Pond revealed no indication the boys had gone there.

The Dodson Pickle & Vinegar plant in Kirksville under the new ownership of W. H. Klopff, head of the Klopff Sales Company of Kansas City, announced that the Kirksville plant was planning to double its capacity within the next year. Klopff was in Kirksville overseeing a thorough cleaning and disposal of some antiquated equipment. Mr. Klopff was shipping a new boiler to the plant to provide steam to process the pickles and to clean barrels and containers. New brine and vinegar tanks were also on the way. Klopff was hoping that farmers in the area would raise more tomatoes so he could start making a green tomato pickle for which he found a ready market in the Southwest United States. He said the plant could now manage 10,000 bushels of cucumbers if they could get them. He hoped eventually to get a hundred acres of cucumbers under contract. He was currently contracted for 45 to 50 acres, but he did not believe the plant would get more than 6,000 bushels of cucumbers in the present year.

The old two-story frame dwelling at 402 N. Franklin Street, which was known as the McKeehan residence, was being razed. It was one of the oldest dwellings in Kirksville and at one time was the home of the Baptist Church. After a new church was constructed, the structure was remodeled into a fine residence. The exact year the building was erected was not known, but the fact that the corner posts, which were 6 by 6 inches, were put together with wooden pins, was an indication that it was quite old. The building was owned by Drs. Fred and Richard Still who had no plans for erecting a new building.

The Kirksville City Council members were considering a proposed park in Kirksville that would include Still Pond and the surrounding area. The council was studying a proposed park plan for a community park and swimming area that was recommended to them by a number of citizens and organizations, including Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club, Business and Professional Women's Club, A.A.U.W., and the Chamber of Commerce. The need for a park in the area had long been realized but proposals in the past did not meet with any success. The plan proposed that the area one-quarter mile west of Osteopathy Street, containing the Still Pond, be developed into a recreation park and that the pond be made safe for swimming. It was proposed that considerable grading be done to cut the shore to a gradual beach safe for beginning swimmers bound by a life line. A swimming area would be provided for experienced swimmers. Boating could be enjoyed on the rest of the pond. The plan called for the surrounding area to be landscaped with trees and shrubs. The site was within easy walking distance from downtown and the existing city parks. Picnic tables, fireplaces, and games such as horseshoe and croquet would be made available. Winter sports would include skiing and ice skating. An extension of West Scott Street would provide a direct entrance to the park. After considerable discussion and study, the plan was turned down by the city council, which stated that the proposed park would cost much more than Kirksville residents would be willing to spend. Some of the council members felt that the proposed park was too hilly and rough to develop, and there were no trees on the land. Others argued that Still Pond was not a good swimming place.

The United States Post Office in Kirksville was damaged by a fire that broke out at 11:23 p.m. in the main lobby area of the building. Post Office officials said the fire originated in the southwest corner of the main room where outgoing mail was dropped off into slots. Postal investigators from Jefferson City were assisting Kirksville Police in determining the cause of the fire and the extent of the damage to mail that was partially destroyed in the fire. It was estimated that 500 to 600 pieces of mail that were in the drop boxes were either completely or partially destroyed. The postal inspector took custody of the charred mail and would try to return the items to the originator. Postmaster John Daniels said that he estimated damages to be in the vicinity of $25,000. He also stated that the postal operations would normalize immediately, but the structure was extremely dirty and smelled like smoke.

EMBRACING LOCAL HISTORY

Part 107

The Captain Harris Mansion – Chapter 12 - The Restoration And A New Owner

By Blytha Ellis, President
Adair County Historical Society and Museum

Last week we learned that after 100 years of standing proud in Kirksville, the Capt. Harris mansion had reached its lowest point of deterioration and neglect. The home was now in the hands of the National Trust for Historic Preservation in Washington, D. C. They hired the architectural firm of Susan Richard Johnson & Associates in Kansas City, Mo., to complete the exterior restoration.

In the spring of 2005, the National Trust inquired about architects in this area who would be interested in conducting an archaeological dig. They would be analyzing the site at the Harris mansion where the 1950s family room was removed and where an earlier porch had been.

Amber Johnson, an assistant professor of anthropology at Truman State University, volunteered herself, her husband, Lewis Binford, and five university students from her classes, so they could get hands-on experience in the archaeology field. This team spent the summer of 2005 digging and sifting dirt on the northwest side of the house. They found an unused well close by and a hardened path from there to the house. By sections in the porch area, they analyzed and mapped each layer of dirt and the different textures, along with any items they found.

What they found was not earth-shattering. The items were consistent with what one would find around a residence which had hosted families for over 100 years. They concluded that the north wing of the house was most likely a house to itself prior to the 1875 construction of the Italianate mansion by Capt. Harris on the south. This wing was believed to have been a small house built about 1850. Further establishing that it was once a separate house was the fact that the small 2nd floor of the wing did not allow for any access to the 2nd floor of the main house.

The students unearthed such things as animal bones, broken dishes and bottles, pieces of pottery, and remnants of concrete pilasters. Professor Johnson said, "Most of what archaeologists do is not very glamorous, but I thought this would be good experience for my students to see how archaeologists work and what they can learn."

After an interesting summer, the group turned in a final report to the National Trust, and the things they found were stored at Truman State University.

The National Trust then put the house on the market. They were looking for a special buyer who would honor the instructions and guidelines for preserving this historic home. They found that buyer in Daryl Shafer, a native Adair Countian. Here is what he wrote about his acquisition of this property:

"In early 2006, I was out of town and thinking of returning to Kirksville to assist my mother, Maxine (Snyder)

The Captain Harris mansion restored

Stafer (1929-2016), who was widowed and needed help occasionally. Looking at real estate offerings online, I was surprised to see the Capt. Harris/Parrish Place listed for sale.

"After checking with locals, friends and real estate representatives, I came to inspect the property in person the beginning of April 2006. The real estate agent gave me a brief history and shared some observations as we admired the solid exterior and attractive porch and color scheme of the elaborate trim. She explained that many people had shown initial interest, but when they saw the inside, shock hit the prospective buyers.

"The imposing Italianate exterior held inside its walls a dereliction of nearly 30 years when nobody had lived there. Plaster cornices had crumbled, wallpaper hung in shreds from the damp walls, and some floors were rotted. The extremes of Missouri weather had taken a toll with no heat during the winters or climate control for humidity during the muggy summers.

"Broken exterior shutters were stacked in hallways, and old, threadbare carpets had turned dusty with dirt and plaster dust. Yet, exploring the dim rooms with no electric lighting, the house was impressive with a good staircase, 12-foot ceilings, tall, Southern-style windows, and grand proportions. The special feature — a cupola perched on top of the roof — set this home apart from any other in Kirksville.

"The new buyer would be responsible for modern plumbing, electrical systems and all updates which would be according to easements and regulated by a governing body at the National Trust offices. The instructions and guidelines were to protect the historical integrity and did not seem unreasonable to maintain the proper character and design for a house built in 1875.

"I agreed to the stipulations and had experience with houses of this era, so I felt capable of working within the guidelines and honoring the past with any updates or modifications. We had a series of conversations to reach the point of contracts. What remained for me was the financing. The project did not qualify for grants or tax dollars. I secured a loan, primarily for reconstruction costs which were considerable, and cashed in all my retirement funds, IRA, life insurance, and savings account. Then drained, I continued to look for other means to fund this important project.

"The remodeling, plastering, installing of bathrooms and kitchen, landscaping, laying walkways, construction of a new garage, out-buildings, and general improvements were all challenging and rewarding. The neglected house became a home. We were honored to host open houses for holidays and other events.

"The most well attended and colorful event was to commemorate the 150-year-old Battle of Kirksville. Many participated in military and historic dress. Then, all the difficulties, unexpected problems and costs which arise when taking over conservatorship of a historic property seem inconsequential during those opportunities to share a step into history with the public."

Due to the success of this monumental restoration by Daryl Shafer and his willingness to see it through, the Capt. Thomas C. Harris mansion has been brought back to its original glory and beauty. We dare say it is now even better than the original with the modernization of this 4-bedroom, 5-bath home while maintaining the elegance of its historic charm. Many citizens of Kirksville had the opportunity to tour this icon of yesteryear when Daryl and his mother graciously opened the home for special events. Some can now say they have even been up to the cupola and experienced a special view of Kirksville.

Thank you, Daryl Shafer for saving this piece of Kirksville history. And, we salute you, Capt. Harris, for giving Kirksville this beautiful home in the beginning. I'm sure you never guessed it would still hold significance and be written about nearly 150 years later. Thank you to all the other owners who came after and added to the rich history of this Italianate mansion: Dr. John Burton, Dr. A. W. Parrish, Dr. Bert B. Parrish, Everella Murdock, Mary C. Slone, Daryl Shafer, and all the family members of each of you who ever crossed the threshold!

Local artists display their work as part of Show Me Neighborhood Art Week

Staff Reports

Two local artists, Jane Lovstuen and Nikki Hagen, participated in the Show Me Neighborhood Art Week, an outreach effort by University of Missouri Extension and Creating Whole Communities, which seeks to empower public art made by residents as a contribution to the area's sense of place where they live. Lovstuen's art was displayed on Hickory Ridge Trail and Hagen's on South Franklin Street off of Stadium.

Missourians were encouraged to participate by creating art using materials available at home to display in the front of their residence or shared space in their neighborhood. This project is about expressing creativity, no matter the skill level.

The inspiration for this statewide effort came from a program, LAWN (Lawn Art With Neighbors), launched in Springfield in 2020 and organized by Sculpture Walk Springfield, Springfield Art Museum, Missouri State University: Art + Design Department, and Greene County MU Extension Council.

2024 Junior Match Play Champions Emree Cameron and Archer Schnieders.

Schnieders and Cameron crowned champions at 2024 Junior Match Play

By PRESS RELEASE

WARRENSBURG, Mo. (June 13, 2024) – After four days of intense competition, Archer Schnieders (Jefferson City) and Emree Cameron (Nevada) emerged as the champions in the male and female divisions of the 2024 Junior Match Play Championship at Mules National Golf Club in Warrensburg.

Both Schnieders and Cameron navigated through two rounds of stroke play and three rounds of match play to reach the final round. Cameron secured a win in her division during the stroke play segment of the tournament.

The semifinal matches kicked off at 7a yesterday. Schnieders dominated his match against Cooper Forth (Webb City), clinching a 6 & 5 victory. Meanwhile, Ethan Mustard (Lebanon) and Jack Spencer (Carl Junction) battled through 19 holes, with Mustard eventually coming out on top.

In the female division, Cameron faced Page Bowman (Springfield) in the semifinals. This match saw three lead changes over 17 holes, with Cameron earning the win at 2 & 1. The other semifinal match saw KC Lenox (St. Peters) and Morgan Withington (St. Louis), with Withington securing a 3 & 2 victory.

The championship matches commenced at 12p, and Schnieders led his match against Mustard for most of the round, securing par on hole 14 to go 4-up. Mustard conceded on the next hole before his ball even reached the green, giving Schnieders the win at 4 & 3.

“It was a long week playing and walking the course multiple times, but making it all the way to the final match was pretty exciting,” Schnieders said. “I knew from the start of today that I should be proud of what I accomplished, and I just went out and played some more good golf and got the job done.”

Cameron's match against Withington was more competitive initially, with Withington leading for the first two holes. However, Cameron gained the lead after hole 5 and maintained it for the remainder of the match, ultimately winning 3 & 2.

Cameron shared her thoughts on the win, saying, “The first few holes were a little rocky, but then I started dialing in. I holed out on hole 10, and I had two chip-ins and some birdie putts, so it felt good to just have a good day.”

In addition to her championship title, Emree Cameron earned an exemption into the 2024 U.S. Girls' Junior Championship at El Caballero Country Club in Tarzana, California.

“It's always huge being able to go to a USGA event just for the experience, and then I also know that I'm going to have friends there and teammates there. I'm just excited to go, play and have fun,” Cameron said.

Congratulations to Schnieders and Cameron, and to all of the competitors for a great Junior Match Play Championship!

The MGA would like to thank the staff at Mules National Golf Club for hosting such an exciting event. This tournament would not be possible without their support.

Women's amateur championship brings competitive field to Hickory Hills

By PRESS RELEASE

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (June 14, 2023) – The 94th annual Women's Amateur Championship will be held at Hickory Hills Country Club from June 18-20, marking the fifth time this highly-anticipated event has been hosted at Hickory Hills, with the last occasion being in 1999.

This year's championship will feature a 54-hole stroke play format, with the competitor achieving the lowest total score being crowned the MGA Women's Amateur Champion.

Event Schedule:

- Practice Round: Monday, June 17
- Competition Rounds: Tuesday, June 18; Wednesday, June 19; Thursday, June 20
- Awards Ceremony: Following the final round on June 20

A total of 74 talented female golfers will vie for the title next week in what is one of the most competitive fields we have ever seen. This year, the stakes are even higher as the winner of the 2024 Women's Amateur Championship will earn an exemption into the U.S. Women's Amateur Championship at Southern Hills Country Club in Tulsa, Oklahoma.

University of Central Missouri golfer Maya McVey (Blue Springs), the reigning Missouri Women's Amateur Champion, will return to defend her title.

“It's really exciting to see. I've been playing golf since my freshman year of high school, and I've been trying to get in tournaments with more competitive fields,” McVey said. “State amateurs tend to draw a lot of Divison I players, and it's fun to mix up the field and challenge myself.”

Joining the field is 2023 Missouri Women's Amateur Runner-Up Kiser Pannier (Sedalia), who is expected to deliver a strong performance. Also competing is legendary Missouri golfer Ellen Port (St. Louis). Port has won over twenty combined amateur championships held by the Missouri Golf Association and Metropolitan Amateur Golf Association from 1992 to 2023. As a United States Golf Association player, she has won the U.S. Women's Mid-Amateur four times and the U.S. Senior Women's Amateur Golf Championship three times, tying for fifth for most career wins by a USGA golfer. Port has also captained the American Curtis Cup team and has been inducted into the Missouri Sports Hall of Fame.

Other notable players in the field include:

- Brook Biermann (Wildwood) – Rising senior golfer at Michigan State University, WAGR of 237
- Reagan Zibilski (Springfield) – Rising junior golfer at the University of Arkansas, WAGR of 246
- Julia Misemer (Overland Park) – Rising junior golfer at the University of Arizona, competed in the 2024 U.S. Women's Open, WAGR of 295

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

DHSS recognizes World Elder Abuse Awareness Day

By DHSS

JEFFERSON CITY — June 15 was World Elder Abuse Awareness Day, an event that seeks to unite communities around the world to raise awareness about elder abuse. In Missouri, the Department of Health and Senior Services (DHSS) receives and investigates reports of abuse, neglect, bullying and exploitation of some of the state's most vulnerable individuals — the elderly and disabled. Last year, DHSS received and investigated 43,862 reports, an average of about 120 each day. That number is on the rise, though the crimes are vastly underreported.

"Elder abuse affects older people across all socioeconomic groups, cultures and races and can occur anywhere when they are disconnected from social supports: in a person's home, in nursing homes, assisted living facilities and other institutional settings, or in hospitals," said Paula F. Nickelson, director of DHSS. Elder abuse is widespread. Every year an estimated 1 in 10 older Americans are victims of elder abuse, neglect or exploitation. However, experts believe that elder abuse is significantly underreported, in part because so many communities lack the social supports that would make it easier for those who experience abuse to report it. Research suggests that as few as 1 in 14 cases of elder abuse come to the attention of authorities. "The victim is often in a situation of dependency and relies on the perpetrator for care or transportation and feels too fearful to report the abuse. They may be in denial that the abuse is occurring, or unaware that what they are experiencing is abuse or neglect," said Nickelson. Together, communities can prevent and address the issue of elder abuse by strengthening the social support structure and reducing social isolation. Anyone who suspects a senior or disabled Missourian is being abused, neglected, bullied or exploited, should call the toll-free Missouri Adult Abuse and Neglect Hotline at 1-800-392-0210, which is operational from 7 a.m. through 8 p.m., 365 days a year. Online reporting is also available 24/7 at Health.Mo.Gov/abuse. For more information about how to make a difference, visit Health.Mo.Gov/weaad.
