Jake Rigdon, Birthday Blessings director, is preparing a birthday party for delivery to a child in foster care. Gifts are selected based on the individual tastes of each child. This party is headed to a little girl who likes dolls and trucks. After she wraps the gifts, she will carefully pack them in a bag or duffel to be delivered by local child advocates.

Birthday Blessings to hold 2nd Annual July Toy Drive

By Birthday Blessings

Wondering how you can make a difference in the life of an at-risk child? Birthday Blessings is holding their 2nd Annual July Toy Drive to meet needs and spread cheer in the Missouri foster community. Locally, they provide services to about 160 kids in state custody through the 2nd Circuit Children's Division in Adair, Lewis and Knox Counties.

The event is spearheaded by Jake Rigdon, a member of the nonprofit's board of directors and staff member at the 18th Circuit Children's Division in Sedalia. After spending more than 12 years working in the foster system, she has witnessed the impact of Birthday Blessing's programs on this community.

"So many things have to happen at once when a child enters care that birthdays or other special events are often not thought of," Rigdon said. "Some kids enter care and they have never had a birthday party or a gift before. When they come into the office and see the birthday bags, they get very excited!"

"We had one teen who cried when he got a graduation celebration bag from Birthday Blessings. He was overwhelmed that someone would think of him and his graduation," she said. "We had another teen transitioning to independent living who had no way to cook. The nonprofit gave her a toaster oven, pans and basic utensils so she could prepare meals at home."

Watching the nonprofit's impact on kids in foster care gave her the idea to hold an annual toy drive. She approached the board of directors with the idea, and they unanimously approved it.

"July is a great time for this event. People aren't focused on other holidays like Christmas. I thought this would be a great way for each community to support kids locally," Rigdon explained. "Last year was our inaugural year. We got a team together and publicized it through local media and online. We were really pleased with the amount support we received."

Shannon VonAllmen, the executive director of the organization, was excited to try the idea. It was different than any fundraiser they had held in the past.

150th anniversary of the founding of osteopathy celebrated at courthouse

By Jane Stark
Osteopathic Historian

The 150th anniversary of the founding of osteopathy was celebrated at 10 a.m. on June 22 in Kirksville's courthouse square at the statue of osteopathy's founder, Andrew Taylor Still. The statue depicting Still in his traditional high-top boots and carrying a familiar staff, faced a storefront bearing the name "House of Jesus". The back rooms of the second floor of that store on the south side building served as his office in early 1875.

As the years passed, Still's osteopathy kept expanding, bringing healing and prosperity to Kirksville and Adair County residents. In 1892, he opened the American School of Osteopathy (ASO). Unlike so many of Kirksville's factories that closed in the 1900s, the ASO has persisted into the 21st century, with sections of its original building still operational on ATSU campus. The university, which bears his name, employs hundreds of Kirksville and Adair County residents.

June 22, 2024 was a warm and windy day, a perfect morning for flinging the "banner to the breeze"—the banner of osteopathy. Compared to bygone and more grandiose anniversaries, this year's celebration was an intimate gathering of seven people. Jane Stark, a Canadian trained osteopathic manual practitioner organized the event and gave a short address. Others present were the Zac Burden, mayor of Kirksville; Blytha Ellis, president of the Adair County Historical Society and Museum and her husband, Donald Ellis, the maintenance volunteer for the museum; Jason Haxton, the director of the Museum of Osteopathic Medicine; and Anna Grahler, the research coordinator for the International Center for Osteopathic History.

"We serve kids in 30 counties spread throughout the state, so typical fundraising events like a gala aren't effective for us. This was a way that people in all areas could participate," said VonAllmen. "This toy drive is an opportunity for people, regardless of their geographic location, to add kindness and cheer to lives of kids."

Currently, Birthday Blessings is most in need of gifts for teens. Suggested items are advanced Legos sets, sports balls, fishing equipment, KC Chiefs or Cardinals merchandise, ear buds, gaming headsets, lotion or bath sets, make-up or nail polish sets, craft kits, board games, and snacks that do not expire before 2025.

They also need gifts rated safe for toddlers. Most requested items include developmental toys, toys that light up or make noise, vehicles, dolls, and toys to push across the floor or help a child learn to walk. Mickey and Minnie Mouse, Bluey and Cocomelon are popular with this age group.

The drive will commence on July 1 and run through the July 31. There are collection boxes in Kirksville at First Assembly of God Church, First Church of God, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and Stage Babies Dance Company. Monetary donations can be made at www.birthday-blessings.org/donate. An Amazon wish list is posted on their website and Facebook page. Purchased items will be shipped directly to their building.

Items must be new and unopened, with no writing or organization advertisements on them. For more information call 417-372-

At 10 a.m., the square was bustling with children, market vendors and shoppers, all oblivious to the little Canadian woman standing on the base of Still's statue reading a prepared address on the significance of osteopathy's founding and its spread across the globe. At a poignant moment, a replica "banner of osteopathy" was unfurled in the breeze, signifying the moment when Still's ideas on human health and healing became solidified as osteopathy, an idea so significant that it remains a focal point today for several hundred thousand practitioners and millions of patients.

Still lived out the last years of his life on Osteopathy Avenue. Upon his passing on Dec. 12, 1917. Two days later, Kirksville's businesses closed for a half day allowing all the townsfolk to attend his funeral. Following the 150th anniversary ceremony, Burden asked Stark why osteopaths from all over the world visit Kirksville. Replying without hesitation she said, "Kirksville is enchanting. It is the cradle of osteopathy. Our roots lie here."

ROBIN WRITES

See the beauty around you

I haven't traveled much in my life. There are spectacular sights and sounds I may never experience. But my quiet life, spent in my own way, satisfies my soul.

My writer friend, Elizabeth, recently wrote: "Beauty is found in small moments." Her statement gave me inspiration to notice those moments; ones we often miss while racing through life in search of that breathtaking view or trip to unique destinations.

Right here, right now, you can see the beauty of humanity and nature in small, quiet seconds. You just need to give your life time to look.

When was the last time you sat in the yard at dusk on a summer evening and watched for the first firefly? It floats up from clumps of sun-wilted grass with a tentative first blink of sunset yellow.

And then, after a moment or two, just when you think you must have imagined it, an ordinary insect of extraordinary beauty lifts lazily above the grass and flashes tempo-ed twin-kles into the darkness.

A single summer cloud, bold in its courage to dare dot a sweltering blue canopy, slides past, taking the shape of childhood memories. Only there for a moment, you see a frog-angel-puppy-dragon before the puff fades into silky feathers.

The windchime in my yard wobbles slightly in a teasing breeze. I watch the tubes and striker sway, and wonder which note will be the first to sound. In a moment I can't predict and as quickly as a blink, the wind decides to gust just so, the wooden disc finds music, and shares it with singular benevolence. It is like an amen at the end of a prayer.

The sun sacrifices its hold on the day slowly, making shadows across grateful lawns and fields. As it sinks, the glint of its prism-rich rays find reflection in a neighbor's picture window. Clear and ordinary turns treasure chest gold; the illusion glints a different texture to the world around it, and promises a slow fading in minutes.

Other moments of beauty enrich our world in tiny blessings. Lightning, far away, as thin as a thread and harmless as a sigh. The first crackle of an evening cricket, hidden away while foolishly announcing a way to find him.

A mourning dove crying a soliloquy for the sheer pleasure of its sadness.

Momentary miracles of beauty fill our lives in human form. We often miss them, only to search for a wisp of their memory later when we realize how precious they were.

I call my granddaughter the nickname I chose for her—a nonsensical creation that is mine alone to use—and I see her lips curl in a complex code of pleasure tinged with pre-teen embarrassment. Her eyes slide to mine and I see the baby/girl/woman-to-be who will cherish that nickname long after I am here to say it.

I watch a neighbor's grandsons raise an American flag in his yard. Gene died last year; his family continues to honor him with regular, loving attention to his property: Cutting the lawn. decorating the front door, tending his flowers. Just the way he liked it.

The family next to me at a busy restaurant is a harmony of voices and sounds. The laughter and whispers and rumble of conversation embroiders stories of love and acceptance only families know. These moments are beauty in their affirmation of what matters in life.

A hug from a neighbor. A smile through tears. The blink of recognition at an airport and open arms waiting for the traveler. Laughter that bubbles from the soul and blesses the air between friends.

Look for the beauty that comes and goes in tiny moments, right where you are. They're as close as your next breath and as exquisite as any on earth.

We must all do our share

Each of us, in our own way, smiles on the Fourth of July. We can't help it. We are the most fortunate citizens of any nation in the world and we know it.

A bunch of us in the valley will be down on the sidewalk watching the parade go by. The bands are nice. The horses are great fun to watch, and the military with their stunning stout vehicles of war are hard to beat. So are we. We're hard to beat, too.

My favorite part of the parade is when the kids walk by, with a small American flag in one hand and the end of a leash in the other. And that leash is attached to a dog. Not a world champion dog. Not even a dog who trees 'coons or points birds.

No, that is the great American kids' dog. Look at each one. The crowd kinda boogers them a little, but they know they're safe because they have that wonderful American kid safely on the other end of that leash. Those dogs can't speak to us in our language, but we know exactly what they're saying: if it weren't for me, how would this kid ever become a full-fledged caring American adult?

We all must do our share.

THE ROCKWOOD FILES

The tomatoes made me do it

Writer answers the summer's siren call

GWEN ROCKWOOD
THE ROCKWOOD FILES

I feel guilty. I've done a bad, bad thing. And yet I can't say I wouldn't do it all over again given the opportunity.

It started early this afternoon while I was exercising. My abdominal muscles were screaming after a round of sit-ups, so I mentally chanted these words to keep myself going: "Bacon tomato sandwich, bacon tomato sandwich, bacon tomato sandwich."

Waiting for me on the kitchen counter was a small brown paper sack full of garden tomatoes. The deep red summer delicacies were practically begging me to slice them open, layer them with crispy bacon and tuck them into a bed of soft bread slathered with mayo.

Later that evening, I made a beeline for that paper sack. Tom was at a late business dinner with co-workers and the kids were at a movie, so I was all alone in the kitchen. I started frying bacon and then plucked the biggest tomato out of the bag to slice it. As the bacon sizzled and popped, I smoothed creamy white mayo over two slices of fresh bread.

When it was crispy enough, I scooped the strips out of the skillet and started assembling my masterpiece, carefully salting each tomato slice before placing it gently on the bread. Then I settled on the sofa and reveled in my summer sandwich, a tall glass of iced tea and my total domination over the remote control. It was bliss.

I swallowed the last bite of my sandwich and took the empty plate back to the kitchen, intending to put it in the dishwasher. But then I saw those last three leftover slices of tomato sitting next to one lonely strip of bacon. I hadn't been able to fit all of them onto the sandwich and there was no one else to eat them. I hovered over the leftovers trying to decide what to do. I could sprinkle some salt over those last few slices and eat them with a fork while standing over the sink. Or...I could just make another sandwich.

But everybody knows you can't have a bacon and tomato sandwich with just one little piece of bacon. It wouldn't work. The ratio of crunchy bacon to juicy tomato has to be just right. It's a fine balance. But back-to-back bacon-laden sandwiches? At best, it was indulgent, and, at worst, it was a blatant cardiac sin. But then I heard that little voice chanting again: "Bacon tomato sandwich, bacon tomato sandwich!"

I was alone in the kitchen. No witnesses. And how many times a year does a person have a chance to eat bacon and tomato sandwiches when the tomatoes are in their prime — fresh from the garden? I couldn't let them sit there and waste. It wouldn't be right. Didn't my dad always tell me there were people starving all over the world? So, I convinced myself the noble thing to do would be to fry a few extra pieces of bacon and make that second sandwich. And that's exactly what I did.

By the time I finished off the last few bites of the encore sandwich, I was painfully aware that I'd passed "full" at least half a sandwich ago. And that's when the guilt pangs set in, knowing the extra helping of bacon and mayo probably cancelled the health benefits of the earlier workout.

So, I'm reasoning it away with the following logic: I can exercise again tomorrow, and the day after that, and the day after that. But garden-fresh tomatoes are here for a limited time only. We've got to eat them while the eating is good. And, boy, is it good.

PUBLIC HEALTH CORNER

Juvenile Arthritis Awareness Month

By Kirstyn Dietle, CHES[®]
Health Educator
Adair County Health Department

Welcome to the Public Health Corner: Juvenile Arthritis Awareness Month

Juvenile arthritis is a condition which affects 1 in 1,000 children, and is marked by chronic joint pain, swelling, and stiffness which impacts a child under 16 years old's daily activities and growth. During the month of July, Juvenile Arthritis Awareness Month is brought to the forefront to increase understanding about the condition, highlight its impact on youth and families, and promote research initiatives. As we bring awareness to this disease, it's crucial to recognize the challenges faced by young individuals with juvenile arthritis and to take active steps to support them.

Understanding Juvenile Arthritis

Juvenile arthritis refers to a group of autoimmune and inflammatory conditions that affect children under 16. These conditions can lead to persistent joint pain, swelling, and stiffness, impacting a child's overall growth and daily life. While the exact cause remains unknown, genetic and environmental factors are believed to play a role. Ongoing research seeks to uncover the underlying mechanisms and develop effective treatments.

Promoting Joint Health

Maintaining joint health is essential for managing juvenile arthritis and improving the quality of life for affected children. Activities such as swimming, biking, and yoga can help keep joints flexible and reduce pain. A balanced diet rich in anti-inflammatory foods, adequate hydration, and regular medical check-ups are also crucial for managing symptoms and promoting overall well-being.

Early Detection and Diagnosis

Early detection and diagnosis of juvenile arthritis are critical for accessing appropriate treatments and support services. Recognizing signs such as joint pain, swelling, stiffness, and limited range of motion can prompt timely medical evaluation. Pediatric rheumatologists can conduct comprehensive assessments and diagnostic tests to determine the presence and type of juvenile arthritis, enabling the development of an effective treatment plan.

Support for Families and Caregivers

Juvenile arthritis impacts not only the child but also their families and caregivers, placing a significant burden on them. Providing support and resources is essential to help families navigate the challenges of managing juvenile arthritis. Support groups, educational programs, and community resources offer valuable assistance, emotional support, and guidance throughout the caregiving journey.

Advocacy and Research

Advocacy efforts and research initiatives are crucial for advancing our understanding of juvenile arthritis, developing effective treatments, and ultimately finding a cure. By raising awareness, advocating for increased funding and research investments, and participating in clinical trials and studies, individuals can contribute to the collective effort to combat juvenile arthritis and improve outcomes for affected children.

During Juvenile Arthritis Awareness Month, it's crucial to unite in support of the young individuals facing this condition. Fostering joint health, advancing research, and advocating for greater awareness and resources are essential steps towards a brighter future for those affected. Our collective efforts can make a profound difference, enhancing lives and working towards a world where juvenile arthritis no longer poses a threat. Let's take meaningful action, spread awareness, and demonstrate our commitment to overcoming juvenile arthritis.

Just Me and My Silver Canoe

My body was hardened... at least that's what I thought... until I had paddled for an hour or two,
Around Spring Lake... exploring each inlet...
just me and my silver canoe.
The water would swirl... with each stroke that I made... cat tails lined up on the shore,
I glided along... without a care in the world...
just knowing ahead there was more.
What a day to be alive... the lake is my brother...
when we're together, we don't want to part,
If only I could capture... those feelings of youth...
but my memories will give me a start.

TURNING THE PAGE

History of a mill

By Blytha Ellis, President
Adair County Historical Society and Museum

The elder Michael Weber (1823-1890), a native of France, served in the Union Army during the U.S. Civil War

Michael and Magdalena (Spielmann) Weber, as we learned last week, left France in 1847 when their son, young Michael, was 3 months old because they were tired of war in their home country and did not want their son to be a soldier and fight in endless wars. Unfortunately, the elder Michael would find that this New World was not free from war either. Fourteen years after he left France, he would face, not a war of conquering other countries as Napoleon had done in France, but a war of countrymen fighting against their fellow countrymen in the U.S. Civil War.

The elder Michael Weber and his family had spent 11 years in Ohio before moving to Missouri in 1858. The Webers are listed in the 1860 census in Liberty Township of Adair County, Mo., with Ringo Point as their Post Office. Michael was 38 and Magdalena 35. They had five children at this time: young Michael 13, George 10, Philip 8, Mary Eva 5, and Jacob 2. However, they should have had six children. Daughter, Elizabeth, who would have been 9 in this census is not listed. We can only assume that she had died, but records do not indicate when this occurred.

When Civil War broke out in the United States, one can assume that the older Michael believed in the value of his adopted country because he enlisted to help save the Union. He served in Co. H, 2nd Missouri State Militia Cavalry and in Co. C, 11th Missouri State Militia Cavalry. Fortunately, he was able to survive the war and return to his family in Adair County.

Two more children were born to the Weber family after the 1860 census — Magdalena “Lena” in December 1860, and Sarah Elizabeth in September 1866.

Young Michael grew to manhood in Adair County, working on his father’s farm. He would later say that in those early days, the first plowing was done with cattle and a wooden plow. He stated that wild ducks could be seen in droves of hundreds. Prairie chickens were thicker than fowls in a farmyard, and wild turkeys were quite plentiful. There were so many deer then that he had seen them driven into the barnyard with the cattle.

Young Michael was 15 when the Battle of Kirksville occurred on August 6, 1862. He later said he could hear the guns and cannons being shot during the battle from his father’s farm near Nind.

When young Michael was 20 years old in 1867, he married a girl from the neighborhood named Eva Haas, daughter of George Jacob Haas, Sr. (1824-1895). Eva was born in Bavaria and came to the U.S. with her family in 1853. She and Michael were married for 13 years, but there seems to be no record of them having any children. Eva died on May 17, 1880, of unknown causes and is buried in Mount Carmel Cemetery near Yarrow, Mo..

A year later, young Michael married Magnolia Florence Hays, daughter of Harrison Faith Hays, a Civil War Veteran, and Rachel Jane (Waddill), who lived in the same community as the Webers. Magnolia was the oldest child in her family, and her mother died when she was 13. Her father remarried, and Magnolia had siblings as well as half-siblings whom she had no doubt cared for.

Going back to the year 1847 when the Webers came to America, there was a family from Switzerland just settling on the east side of the Chariton River in Adair County approximately 10 miles southwest of Kirksville. It was the John A. Duemy family. His wife was Ann Mariah “Marie” (Pfister) Duemy. (This surname has also been spelled Domey and Doomy, but it is Duemy on John and Marie’s tombstones.)

In January of 1847, this couple was living in Ohio and had just welcomed their first child, Daniel Duemy. Later that year, they had moved to Adair County, Mo. John Duemy, who was a millwright by profession, was working to set up a grist mill business. He had applied for and received a state charter permitting him to build a dam across the Chariton River. He also built a one-story mill which had its power wheel underneath the part of the building extending over the edge of the river.

John Duemy operated a successful mill business in this location for seven years. A small village grew around Duemy’s Mill, so this became the name of the village.

The Duemys had two more children, Rosanne born in 1849 and Louise born in 1851. Sadly, John Duemy died October 11, 1854, of unknown causes. He was buried in what became the Yarrow Cemetery (known then as the Pierceville Cemetery). In the 1860 census, John’s wife, Ann Marie, listed her occupation as miller, so it appears she continued to run the mill herself, perhaps with the help of her son, Daniel, who was then 13, or with hired help.

The mill was then sold to a man named Dr. Johns, then to a man from England named John B. “Yankee” Williams who renamed the business Williams’ Mill. The mill was destroyed in the mid 1870s after a flood broke up the original building and swept it downstream. Mr. Williams rebuilt the mill in 1876 and made it three stories high. It featured a sawmill because Mr. Williams was chiefly in the lumber business. Young Michael Weber, who was 29 at this time, helped with the building of this mill. In the 1880 census of Adair County, John B. Williams and his family were living in Pettis Township, and his occupation was listed as miller.

In 1882, a new bridge was built across the Chariton River at Williams’ Mill and called the Lower Iron Bridge. As of this time, the village near this bridge and near the Williams’ Mill had no name. (It would later become Yarrow, but this name would not be heard of until 1903.) What had once been the village of Duemy’s Mill was now often referred to as Lower Iron Bridge or Williams’ Mill.

Only a mile away from this village was the hamlet of Linderville. Rev. James Harvey Linder had come to this area in 1854 from Ohio and established a store, school and church. A Post Office was officially established at Linderville after the Civil War in 1865. (For a complete discussion of Linderville, see Part 67 of this history series.)

Many believed that Linderville would be the commercial center for this vicinity, that was until the railroad came through and changed everything in 1903. But, we are not there yet. We are still back 20 years prior to this.

In December 1882, John B. Williams was selling out in order to move to Arkansas. He advertised a public sale in the “Kirksville Graphic” newspaper to be held “at his residence, Williams’ Mill, near the new bridge, on Tuesday, Dec. 26th.” He had for sale “a lot of lumber, 5 horses, 2 mules, 5 milk cows, 15 sheep, a lot of hogs, 1 buggy, 3 wagons, farm implements, hay, corn, and household goods.”

Some articles say Mr. Williams continued to own the mill until 1890 when he finally sold it to the younger Michael Weber. An August 1890 “Kirksville Daily Journal” newspaper article states that Michael Weber “purchased the Linderville Mill a few weeks ago.” This is confusing as the Williams’ Mill had not previously been referred to as the Linderville Mill. However, it is known that Michael Weber did purchase the mill discussed here.

After purchasing the mill, Michael moved his family to the mill community and built a large two-story house on a hill a short distance from the mill which now became the Weber Mill.

110 Years Ago, July 6, 1914

Church services at the First Methodist Episcopal Church came to an abrupt close when a section of plaster under the balcony fell hitting six or seven women sitting under it. Two women sustained head injuries and were taken to local physicians for treatment. The plaster fell shortly after Dr. English started his sermon. After the women were cared for, he attempted to continue with the service, but the congregation was too excited to sit still. The church services were discontinued. Although the injuries caused only minor scalp wounds the sight of blood freely running down the women’s faces startled the congregation. The plaster had been in place fifteen or sixteen years and sections of it had fallen previously, but never during the church services.

For two weeks prior to the July 4th celebration in Kirksville local media advertised that a special airplane attraction would highlight the holiday celebration. Charles Rorabaugh, native Adair Countian and Kirksville businessman who owned and operated a battery station was to fly his plane in an aerial attraction at the city’s celebration. That was not to be. On July 3 Rorabaugh and a LaPlata man, Dean Wenger went to Kansas City to pick up the plane and fly it to Kirksville preparatory to the next day’s event. Immediately after the two men left Kansas City at about 800 feet altitude, the plane developed engine trouble and crashed to the ground. Rorabaugh was burned to death after the plane’s engine fell on him pinning him underneath. Wenger managed to free himself from the plane. While his injuries were extremely painful, it was believed he would recover. The funeral for Rorabaugh, age 32, was held in Kirksville, and he was buried in Forest Cemetery.

Two dance halls in Kirksville were visited by Mayor Stookey and two Kirksville ministers, Revs. Cosper and Waggoner. They visited the businesses on a Saturday night to see if they were being conducted as they should be and to satisfy themselves as to the conditions that were reported to be going on at the establishments. After visiting the Gayety Hall, the mayor reported that everything was all right there. He stated that there was “plenty of light in the room, even though it does appear to be dark to anyone on the street.” He also said that the crowd was an orderly one, and he “did not detect any odor of whiskey or opium about the place.” The three men also went to the Tony Zucchi dance pavilion in the northwest part of town and watched the dances for some time. Again, they did not see anything objectionable.

100 Years Ago, July 6, 1924

Between 20,000 and 30,000 people were estimated in attendance at the Ku Klux Klan’s Fourth of July celebration at Ownbey Lake July 3 and 4. Organizers of the event said, “It was the largest crowd ever gathered here for any celebration.” Those in charge of parking on and near the grounds said they parked over 5,000 cars as many attendees were from out of town. The Klan parade included about 250 robed Klansmen. The parade started from the high school building and proceeded around the downtown square and then down First Street to Ownbey Lake. For many in attendance it was their first glimpse of a robed Klansman. Besides two Klan speakers from the national organization, the celebration featured an aerial fireworks show. The display was provided by Lieutenant Webber and was the climax of the event. When Webber made his appearance in the sky the fiery cross, the Klan insignia, blazed forth from the bottom of the plane. The cross consisted of a series of red lights the entire length and breadth of the plane that were lighted by the plane’s electrical system. After flying around at a low altitude for about 15 minutes Webber set off a display called the “Silver Trail.” This was followed by the reappearance of the red cross. Webber flew the plane solo as he said it was a hazardous mission.

A Greencastle man, John Conwell, received severe injuries when a car ran over him as he cranked the motor to start it. When the motor started the car leaped toward him. He placed a foot on the front axle to stop it and then fell backward with his legs doubled up over his body. He sustained broken ribs and numerous bruises and abrasions.

55 Years Ago, July 1, 1969

A severe thunderstorm with straight line winds or a possible tornado ripped across the Cresthaven Mobile Home Park south of Kirksville on Highway 63. Fifteen mobile homes were destroyed, and the home of Dwayne Pratt located at the end of Halliburton Street was extensively damaged. Early erroneous news releases regarding the storm in Kirksville reported that “Kirksville had been wiped out” by a tornado. The National Weather Service sent a St. Louis meteorologist to Kirksville to assess the storm damage. After his examination he determined that the storm was not a tornado, but a severe thunder storm with straight line winds from 75 to 80 miles per hour. Kirksville residents were skeptical of the weatherman’s analysis of the storm and believed that the weather event was a tornado.

45 Years Ago, July 2, 1979

An early morning fire ravaged Esterline Motor Company in Kirksville and destroyed fourteen automobiles and the building. The fire call came in at 12:36 a.m. just 30 minutes after the owner of the dealership, Chuck Esterline and several city police officers searched the building after a report came in that a large amount of water was leaking out the back door of the building. After an extensive search of the entire building, shop area, showroom, and roof, no indication of a fire was discovered. It was determined that the building’s sprinkler system had malfunctioned, and the system was shut down. There were eight automobiles in the service area and six autos in the showroom. Esterline said the vehicles in the shop were destroyed, while those in the showroom received extensive damage. He had no estimate on the amount of the loss. Esterline said sales and office business operations would resume immediately in a trailer that had been placed in the parking lot across the street. Service operations would resume in a few days in a storage area in the parking lot on North Franklin Street. Kirksville fire chief, Clarence Babcock, said a total of 26 firemen in four trucks battled the blaze for nine hours. Two firemen, deputy chief, Ron Stewart, and assistant chief, Jack Maize were slightly injured when struck by falling bricks. Esterline Motors had been at that location for 11 years. The building was constructed in 1914 and was originally occupied by the Sands Motor Company. In 1934 the facility was purchased by the Truitt Motor Company which remained in the building until Esterline took over in 1968. The cause of the fire was undetermined, but an investigation was ongoing.

Missouri junior rodeo athletes showcase talent in Iowa

By Shane Gravlin Daily Express

DES MOINES, Iowa — Young rodeo athletes and their families from all over the world have descended on the Iowa State Fair Grounds in Des Moines for the 2024 National Junior High Rodeo Finals.

The Junior High Division was founded in 2004, and the National High School Rodeo Association has roots all the way back to the 1940s. The organization aims to promote the sport of rodeo and preserve Western heritage through family bonding, continuing education and maintaining high regard for livestock.

The NJHRF features about 1,200 athletes from 43 states, Mexico, Canada and Australia. NJHRF is the world's largest junior high rodeo.

From roping, to racing to riding, the National Junior High Rodeo Finals showcases several different types of events and runs from June 23-June 29.

Not only are there competitive rodeo contests, the athletes go to meetings, auctions, scholarship and award ceremonies, clinics, talent shows and more.

Missouri sent multiple competitors to Des Moines for the annual event. Raylea Sidwell, from Schuyler, Mo. competed in Pole Bending and Lonny Higgins, from Greentop, Mo. competed in Breakaway Roping.

Plus, they represented the state of Missouri as flag-carriers for the rodeo's grand entry.

Also competing on behalf of Missouri are siblings Kannan and Kail Wood. All four practiced their skills for months at the NEMO Fairgrounds in Kirksville before heading to Iowa for the big rodeo.

Sidwell had a solid showing in Pole Bending Performance 2 on Monday, posting a score of 26.662, but it was Lanie Brooks from Wisconsin who took home that event.

Kirksville's Kannan Wood had a fantastic showing in Junior High Bareback Riding Performance 3 on Monday, earning second place with a score of 62.

There are several other Missouri athletes competing, as well. Some of who are having success; Grayson Gadberry, of Kearney, Mo. won Bull Riding Performance 3 on Monday with a score of 67, narrowly beating Spur McCabe from Arizona who had 65.5.

Before that, Kynder Florea from Maryville, Mo. won Girls Breakaway Performance 1 on Sunday with a score of 2.13 over Parker Lenhardt from Montana.

It's clear Missouri is at the forefront of the future of rodeo, and they continue to shine on youth rodeo's brightest stage in Des Moines, Iowa.

Kirksville's Andrew Williams commits to Brigham Young

By Shane Gravlin Daily Express

KIRKSVILLE, Mo. — Kirksville Tiger Andrew Williams announced he will be a Brigham Young Cougar and continue his football career at BYU.

The 6'7", 275 lb. offensive tackle chose BYU over other Big 12 Conference schools including Iowa State, Kansas State and Kansas.

He also had received offers from Ivy League schools like Yale, Harvard and Princeton, as well as some from local schools such as Missouri State, Northern Iowa and Lindenwood.

It was his performance at camps he was invited to that sped up his recruiting process. Seeing his frame and explosiveness (Williams can leap an impressive 30-inch vertical) in person, coaches like BYU's Kalani Sitake had no choice but to offer him a scholarship.

According to recruiting website 247sports.com, Andrew Williams is the 8th best prospect in Missouri in the class of 2025 and is the nation's 58th best prospect.

In addition to football at KHS, Williams competes in track and field. He finished 5th at the Missouri Class 4 state meet in the discus with a personal best throw of 160-5.

Iowan and Mizzou national champion qualifies for 2024 Paris Olympics

By Shane Gravlin Daily Express

EUGENE, Ore. — Karissa Schweizer started running track and cross-country at Dowling Catholic High School in Urbandale, Iowa from an early age.

The daughter of two collegiate runners, and the sister of an eight-time state champion, Schweizer grew up around the sport.

Despite never winning a state title or qualifying for any national races, she earned a scholarship to Mizzou for track and cross-country in 2014.

In her first college-level championship event, she finished 155th.

Schweizer's career as a Tiger took off in 2016, when she qualified for and placed third in the 5000m at the NCAA Division 1 Outdoor Track and Field Championships.

The next year, she shocked the nation and defeated multiple more-favored runners to become the first female national champion in any sport in Missouri Tigers history. This was the first of her multiple NCAA titles.

She signed professionally in 2018 with a group sponsored by Nike and made her Olympic debut at the 2020 games in Tokyo, where she scratched the top ten in her 10,000m event.

Schweizer suffered a scare at the 2022 World Championships and endured an achilles and calf injury that required surgery.

She put that in the rear-view. It was her 14:45.12 time in the 5000m qualifier in Eugene, Oregon that landed her a spot on Team USA for the 2024 Paris games.

The 2024 U.S. Olympic Team Trials resume Thursday, June 27.

Level: Intermediate

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!
