GREEN BAY – Green Bay’s newest boutique hotel officially opened on Jan. 10 and Legacy Hotel Majority Owner Vicki Fabry said its “Legacy Hotel” name serves as more than just a moniker. “We really are thrilled to be added to the wonderful, wonderful businesses and venues that are already in Green Bay that have made Green Bay the best to live in,” she said. “We’re honored to be a part of that and be counted in that group. We do with approach being a vibrant part of the community. We kind of talk about ourselves as a social epicenter that just happens to have 100 suites and we’ve got great people here to welcome you and help you have a great experience. “Our vision was really just to have a great place that people can meet and greet, gather and actually start to create, start to help to build your own legacy. So, the ‘Legacy’ name really has a lot of meaning to us, and we want people to understand that everyone has a legacy. Every day you live it — every day, every interaction — and we invite you to come here and help build your legacy and live your legacy and kind of feel the vibe.” The six-story hotel located on Brett Favre Pass features 83 studio suites, 15 “Signature Suites” and three “Grand Penthouse Suites.” See HOTEL page 3

GREEN BAY – The New Community Shelter is a local shelter for Brown County that focuses on responsibility and accountability. This year, the nonprofit is celebrating its 30th anniversary in Green Bay. In addition to housing, this facility provides educational programming, mentorship and a reliable community meal program. The residents of New Community Shelter are placed with case managers who specialize in training and helping residents to reach their goals. Whether it’s managing mental health, addressing addiction, or improving finances, the shelter seeks to work with residents to attain healthy goals. “As long as you’re improving, you’re welcome,” the shelter advocates. One of the most important aspects of helping the residents of New Community Shelter is providing “toolkits” for residents to use throughout their lifetime — even after they move out of the shelter. Educational programming is a cornerstone of their facility. The shelter offers a wide variety of classes for their residents including a “Rent Smart” class, which teaches the residents how to communicate with neighbors, how to be a good tenant and how to budget. See SHELTER page 7

Alternative court shows the way to recovery

BROWN COUNTY – One by one, seven participants in the Brown County Alternative Court for their fourth conviction of operating while under the influence reported to Brown County Circuit Judge John Zakowski on Friday, Jan. 5, to see how they have fared since their last appearance.

Conviction of a fourth OWI is a Class H Felony with a fine of at least $600 and a minimum sentence of 60 days in jail. But as a condition, according to Criminal Justice Services Manager Mark Vanden Hoogen, a person can be referred to the alternative courts after their conviction by officials, family or others. When the referral is made, the Brown County district attorney’s office does a thorough examination of the person’s past. Some of the charges on the initial examination may not be enough to deny the application, according to VandenHoogen. “You may have the charges in front of you right now that are on the edge of what you feel comfortable with but then you have to start using some additional factors,” he explained. “I think our DA’s office does a good job of factoring those in because at the end of the day there are clear-cut items that you can or can’t deny for so they’ll pass them on through but say they don’t support this at the triage level which I think is fair. It’s my job as the leader of the treatment team it’s my responsibility to understand those limitations to help the person See DRUG COURT page 8

‘Bridging cultures, celebrating differences’

BY MICKEY SCHOMMER
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

GREEN BAY – On Jan. 13, the Brown County MLK Committee hosted the 29th annual MLK Celebration in partnership with Northeast Wisconsin Technical College (NWTC).

This year’s theme was “Bridging Cultures, Celebrating Differences” which reflects on the “colorful fabric” of which every community is woven, said Miriam Brabham, co-chair of the Brown County MLK Committee.

The event was hosted online due to weather, but this didn’t stop the celebration — over 100 participants attended the event online.

The celebration included a competition for K-12 students to create an interpretation of this year’s theme, recognitions for teacher’s awards, an interpretive dance, a recitation of Martin Luther King Jr.’s “I Have A Dream” speech, among other events.

During the event, UW-Green Bay Vice Chancellor Dr. Dawn Crim gave some remarks during the event to expound on the “Bridging Culture, Celebrating Differences” theme, stating, “We strive for inclusivity. Inclusivity that sees values and celebrates our differences that connects our humanity. Inclusivity benefits everyone. If we follow that mentality, when we individually do better, it leads to everyone doing better.”

This annual celebration is not only a signature event in the community, but necessary said Brabham, who explained that even during tumultuous times, there is a need for celebration.

The annual MLK Celebration strives to promote Martin Luther King Jr.’s legacy through the cornerstones of Martin Luther King Jr.’s dream — justice, equality and harmony — are maintained through active participation in events like these, said Brabham.

“We have an amazing head chef; we have an amazing mixologist — world-class, world-renowned. They are looking forward to introducing you to their foods, their beverages. I like to say that they have taken the notion of making their menus both in the spirit — and drinks — and the food, as kind of an homage to the past, but a tip to the future. So, we will have a lot of kind of old-fashioned flavorings and tastings and feelings, which could have a little tip-off in the future where some nuances, some really great things. So they are really excited to get to know all of you and they’ve gotten amazing staffs working with them,” Fabry explained.

Fabry said that the hotel’s atrium will also feature live music and other entertainment each week.

“We’re going to rock because of the people that we have and what they’re going to be able to do to make you all and everyone in the community welcome and feel as if you are just on top of the world,” she stated.

“I hope this will be a place that will inspire you to honor your pathway to create new lives.”

Burial grounds: What remains

BY KRIS LEONHARDT
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

In 1838, Astor and Navarino, situated to the north of Astor, combined to form Green Bay and the sandy hill that once served as a prime location for burials now became a prime location for residential property.

By this time, many of the wooden crosses and markers had likely rotted away and stone markings may have been repositioned, rendering it impossible to identify the location of all burial spots.

While many of the bodies were disinterred and reinterred in a mass grave at the Allouez Catholic Cemetery, others remained to be found later as the city grew and progressed.

Even the location of the mass grave was lost to time until years later when a road was being created in the Allouez cemetery and a 20-foot trench was located containing human remains.

Upon the 1886 discovery of skulls and bones in front of a lot where the F.W. Basche home was being constructed, local pioneer John Jacobs said that at one time all people were buried there together, “both Indians and whites,” he stated.

The skeletal remains were two feet or less below the surface, “from which we judge that during the last half-century the sand must have washed away into the river to a depth of three or four feet,” a Green Bay Advocate article read.

The article stated that many homes were constructed in the three years following the platting of Astor, leaving the burial area unmarked.

“About the year 1836, the plat of ground now used as a cemetery in Shantytown (Allouez) was purchased, and most of the remains removed there from the [La Baye burial grounds], since which time there have been no interments here. It is probable, however, that only those were removed whose friends were able or willing to bear the expenses and the streets were laid out and the buildings erected right over the remains of the others. Occasionally, in digging a post hole, well or foundation for a building, human remains have been found.”

As recent as 2006, remains have turned up during utility or construction work.

On April 11, 2006, city work crews discovered a leg, hand and rib cage while digging on the 400 block of South Adams Street about eight feet below the ground surface while performing water utility work.

Smudge brings good spirit to OPD

ONEIDA – The Oneida Police Department (OPD) recently added another member to their team — Smudge, an eight-week-old labradoodle.

Smudge will work with Student Resource Officer Eddie Metoxen to provide therapeutic aid at Oneida High School and Turtle School for students, teachers and police officers alike.

Smudge has already started her first session working of training which focused mainly on teaching her handler, Metoxen, how to effectively work with her.

So far, the goal is to get the puppy introduced to as many positive social interactions as possible.

Training with the puppy will continue until she's a year old and then she will become a certified therapy dog.

Metoxen works with the counselors, social workers and psychologists at the schools, so he's involved "when something happens to the kids."

The officer is aware that police officers can look daunting while in uniform, especially for younger students. Smudge helps with alleviating that intimidation.

The puppy's name comes from a Native American tradition called "smudging" in which sage is burnt to rid places or people of negative energies and promote positivity — a truly perfect name for the OPD's new dog.

Though Smudge is adorable, Metoxen leaving the school takes significantly longer than without her.

"It takes a half-hour if I want to walk down the hallway at school because everybody wants to stop and say hi," laughed the student resource officer.

Metoxen and the OPD have "no doubt" that Smudge will fit right in and make a positive impact on the school communities.

Jerry Augustine: The No. 1 goal

BY KRIS LEONHARDT

After graduating from Kewaunee High School, Jerry Augustine headed to UW-La Crosse to pursue a double major in physical education and health.

"I wanted to play baseball; that was my number one goal. I wanted to play sports and I tore my knee up in high school, so I couldn't play football," Jerry Augustine recalled.

"I went there as a freshman, and I remember we used to work out at five in the morning — we would go from 5-7 a.m. every morning. I remember my first year it was, it was really funny because I came as a pitcher; we had try-outs for the team. Jerry Hundt was a really close friend of mine, and we were both freshmen. The difference was he just got out of the service and I was a little 18-year-old kid and we got to be very close.

"And I'll never forget that one time after we were done with practice. We're in taking a shower and one of our varsity players that was one of our best pitchers, he came in there and he was talking to us ... He says, 'Well, I think there's two freshmen that are gonna make the team out. And they're pretty good — pretty good pitchers. I like that little lefty.' He said, 'One of them is Augustine, and the other one's Hundt.' And that was Jerry and I was in the shower. We looked at each other; we just started laughing and we became roommates and best friends forever after that."

At UW-La Crosse, Augustine lettered three years in baseball and was a member of two Wisconsin State University Conference (WSUC) championship team for two consecutive years — 1972 and 1973. During the 1973 season, he garnered all-conference recognition with a 4-0 record, 49 strikeouts and a 2.91 earned run average.

Jerry also got married to his high school girlfriend, Nancy Flaherty, after his freshman year and soon started a family. "I think more so than going to school and getting an education, I think [college] allowed me to grow up. I got married very young and had a child and it really helped me to grow up and understand that there are things you have to do in life you have to grow up and you have to be responsible.

Augustine said that good coaching in high school and college also had a lot to do with him "getting that frame of mind I needed to be No. 1, responsible and yet if I want to play athletics I had to work hard."

Augustine graduated in 1974.

Green Bay Area Crime Stoppers receives recognition

BY PRESS TIMES STAFF

GREEN BAY — Green Bay Area Crime Stoppers was recently honored for its mat design implemented in 26 school entrances across Green Bay and Brown County.

The initiative, part of the "Students Stopping Crime" program, aims to "empower students to play an active role in maintaining a safe and secure school environment."

"The award-winning mat design was produced by Badger Mats out of Mineral Point and features the names and logos of each participating school, reinforcing the collaborative effort to ensure safety," a Crimestoppers release stated.

"Importantly, the mats provide clear information on various ways students can confidentially report concerns, including threats, drugs, weapons, alcohol and bullying.

"This initiative not only fosters a sense of responsibility among students but also strengthens the partnership between schools and Green Bay Area Crime Stoppers."

The recognition was presented late last year by Chris Cameron, chairman of Crime Stoppers USA, to Hans Lux, Jr., program coordinator of Green Bay Area Crime Stoppers, during the Crime Stoppers USA Annual Conference in Denver, Colo.

"We are truly honored to receive this award for our 'Students Stopping Crime' program. The success of this initiative is a testament to the dedication of our team, the collaboration with local schools and the commitment of our community to ensuring the safety of our students," Lux stated.

The Green Bay Area Crime Stoppers Program formed in 1987, spearheaded by the Green Bay Police Department with a federal crime prevention grant.

The program was implemented through an eight-member citizens board formed by the city's mayor.

One year later, the program was expanded to all of Brown County and became the Green Bay Area Crime Stoppers was adopted with a mission to "deter, reduce and assist in the solving of crime."

Re-Rooted: A local Connecti-Rican

Re-rooted in Northeast Wisconsin

BY FREDDY MOYANO
GUEST COLUMNIST

“I was born in Bridgeport, CT. My family moved to Puerto Rico. So I basically grew up in Puerto Rico” said Gustavo Irizarry, whose parents are both Puerto Rican and they still live there.

“So, I am a Connecti-Rican,” he said laughing.

Irizarry has siblings and his parents still living there. A younger brother who recently passed away, two other brothers and one sister.

“I am the oldest of them all,” he added.

At the age of five, Irizarry left for Puerto Rico where he grew up before serving in the Army.

Irizarry has been in northeastern Wisconsin, living with his wife Marilyn Alago, for the past couple of decades working as a builder.

He spends a lot of time in Green Bay and Door County, supervising and performing renovation and construction work, operating under a business he owns, M@G Renovators.

Irizarry is also passionate of the UFC-MMA fights.

“I started in 1993. I have not competed in the last four years as I got hurt but I love the sport,” he said.

But aside from fighting in rings, he has cultivated an even bigger passion as of recent years.

“I love [screen] acting,” Irizarry said.

He said roles as bodyguard and law enforcement officer are his preferred ones as they tie in with the discipline skills he acquired while in the military.

Irizarry said he has been doing screen acting work for the past seven years, even helping as crew member in productions with props he builds for sets.

Most recently he joined the cast of “Union House Hotel,” with seven episodes filming in the Green Bay area through the end of spring.

In it he plays the role of Jonah, a pirate-dressed character whose personality evolves throughout the 1890s fiction series.

Irizarry retired from the U.S. Army after 20 years of service, including his participation in Afghanistan.

“[Initially] I was a helicopter builder [in the Army], fixing communications, fly control [issues]. After about six years in the Army, I decided to become an officer and I flew helicopters. From there, I joined the Special Forces and I worked there until I retired” recalled Irizarry.

“I spent a lot of time in combat transferring people from one site to another, serving my country.”

Irizarry said he worked closely with the George W.

Bush administration in the security (sniper duties) area.

As for life goals, “five years down the line I want to be [permanent part of] the big screen” Irizarry said, referring to his acting passion.

Irizarry is also a gifted cook.

He began cooking “flanes” while deployed in Texas in the military.

taurants,” he said about the recipe he learned from his family in Puerto Rico.

About Green Bay, Irizarry also noted the uniqueness of Lambeau Field.

“I remember the first time I went to [Lambeau Field for] one of the Packers games. The environment there was amazing. I felt like I was one of the players. People are amazing in there.”

Their “Employment Readiness” program is hosted to teach residents about employability, such as how to fill out online applications, how to present oneself to employers and how to build a resume.

The facility will even invite other community members to teach about life skills if they have the background for it.

Community Outreach Coordinator Jim Schmidt said that if someone has an idea for a class or a series of them, the shelter is more than willing to entertain it.

The goal at New Community Shelter is to get residents connected with the community.

In addition to educational programming, New Community Shelter offers a daily meal program that has never been cancelled — no matter the weather.

Dinner is served daily while lunch is served by the Salvation Army down the road.

However, if the building is closed — usually on holidays — the shelter will provide lunch.

“Even during COVID-19,” explained Olson, “we never missed a meal.”

Through the community meal program, case managers can connect with people who need care if they aren’t already staying at the shelter.

“A lot of times, we’ll have people who are like, ‘Yeah, I can eat today!’ because we know that they usually aren’t able to eat with us,” said Olson. “We try to get them engaged. A lot of times we’re building a lot of different relationships with people who aren’t staying here that probably should because of mental health or addiction.

“If someone is under the influence and they can’t eat in our dining room, we’ll give them a bagged lunch. ‘Try again tomorrow.’”

The residents at New Community Shelter are held to strict standards, but it allows for the facility to uphold its zero-tolerance policies and creates an environment that is less triggering for those suffering from addiction.

The shelter has a strict curfew and does breathalyzer tests to ensure that this policy is being maintained.

“We’re very transparent with everything. If we say we’re zero-tolerance, we’re going to mean it, so that’s why we breathe people. That’s why we do outside drug testing. That’s why we provide the services to help with those issues,” Olson added.

“It’s more of a tough-love approach to how you would deal with homelessness, but it works. That’s how we raise our kids — we have expectations.

“Our program is [about] helping people so they don’t get in that situation again.

“Do people relapse? Absolutely. But when they relapse, they get asked to leave (for 30 days), but that’s the consequence. [The residents] always know what to expect. [They] know what the rules are.”

Olson emphasizes accountability as the single most important aspect of the shelter.

Despite this “tough-love approach,” Olson noted that the residents prefer it to a more relaxed policy.

“They’re here because they’re working on themselves. They don’t want to be next to someone who’s been drinking because that’s triggering.”

New Community Shelter also makes an effort to work with individuals who are afraid of becoming homeless, who are currently homeless and after homelessness.

“We make sure to extend our services for as long as a person needs them,” said Olson.

“You can always come back. We never end our services.”

Olson recognizes that many people don’t want to talk about homelessness because it’s uncomfortable.

However, ignorance often creates misconceptions.

“I was a person that, at one time in my life, said, ‘Well, people just need to get a job,’” said Olson. “I’m very embarrassed and humbled by that now that I could be so ignorant to think that that is the problem — that they just need to get a job — because most of our people here are working at least one job — they’re just not making enough to make ends meet. They might have eviction debt, or medical debt, fines; there are a lot of different reasons why.”

New Community Shelter serves its residents with more than just housing, providing educational programming and mentorship under a zero-tolerance policy that promotes accountability and responsibility.

through that process. The criminal justice system is messy. If you have someone with addiction or mental health issues and expect them to go through all the different appointments it's very challenging for someone who doesn't have a lot of support."

An applicant is also put through the Risk and Needs Triage (RANT) tool, which yields an immediate and easily understandable report that classifies offenders into one of four risk/needs quadrants, each with different implications for selecting suitable correctional decisions by judges, probation and parole officers, attorneys and other decision-makers.

The risk to repeat determines the level of intervention needed.

"In the early phases of our OWI Treatment Court, participants are required to attend frequent and random drug and alcohol testing, have electronic alcohol monitoring in place, attend frequent meetings with their case manager and probation agent, and attend court on a weekly or bi-weekly basis," Treatment Court Manager Blake Artis said. "We focus on making sure they have appropriate housing, are scheduling and attending clinical assessments to determine treatment needs, and addressing any other risk factors that might cause an immediate concern to their overall well-being or their long-term success in the program." If participants fail to meet requirements they can be placed back in jail for several days, have electronic monitoring devices placed on them or both. All of the participants in the hearing on Jan. 5 had successfully navigated holiday gatherings where alcohol is prevalent, were meeting all their screenings successfully and are managing their lives.

For "Zeke" (not his real name) the alternative court has provided him greater insight into himself.

"It's ultimately a lot of self-reflection," he said. "It's who I am and who I want to be. What does the future look like and how do I create that future?"

Zeke said in the past he had been doing well for years but hit a rough patch in the late 1900s and early 2000s.

"I stopped going to meetings," he recalled. "Nobody wants to have a disease, nobody wants to be powerless, you know? I got to the point where I couldn't have a drink. For several years, I didn't drink at home or didn't drink that often, but my off switch is broken. Once I start I don't stop."

When the latest incident happened, he considered it an aberration.

"I was just lying to myself so it would have been another one down the line. I put myself in danger; I put other people in danger. It takes a while to accept the fact that I don't have control of myself 100% of the time. The only way I can do that is by avoiding alcohol. Bad decisions don't sound as bad when you're under the influence," he added.

Drinking was part of a social thing for Zeke and during his sobriety, finding places to go and things to do without alcohol being served is a challenge.

Zeke is looking most forward to taking care of his obligations and getting everything completely behind him.

"I'm looking forward to building my savings and would like to be able to travel," he said.

His first destination choice is somewhere in middle or eastern Europe.

Mark is now in aftercare, having completed his regimen in court.

Mark is in the 12th and final step of the 12 steps in Alcoholics Anonymous which is: "Having had a spiritual awakening as the result of these steps, we tried to carry this message to alcoholics, and to practice these principles in all our affairs."

"Being involved in OWI Treatment Court I'm able to spread that message," he explained.

Mark sees treatment programs in northeastern Wisconsin as entering a new and urgent era.

"The epidemic we have as far as fentanyl's concerned—you know it's not like it used to be. When I was a younger man, heroin was heroin. Now it's not just heroin. Things like marijuana and cocaine are laced with fentanyl. It's becoming to the point in recovery that it's not just about alcohol anymore," he said.

Treatment organizations have expanded to include heroin anonymous (HA), cocaine anonymous (CA), and drug addiction anonymous (DAA). Mark added there is also an organization called Smart Recovery.

So he plans to continue to make people aware of the help that is available.

"Once you get a bit of recovery under your belt you are not going to a meeting so you don't drink, you go to a meeting to help live your life sober. We can't tell people what will happen on their way to recovery but we can show them," he said.

shelter in the summer while still a student at UW-Green Bay.

When she came in before the Fourth of July, she heard that the shelter planned to euthanize many of the animals who she had grown to love while volunteering.

The shelter's reasoning was that they needed to free up space for pets that might run away from firework noise. Amanda couldn't stand by that practice. "We have to make change," she thought, "our [animal welfare] community can do better than this."

Back then, no-kill shelters were far from the norm.

"We just didn't know any different," Amanda said, "We didn't know what other options existed."

When she began this work, over 50% of animals in the shelter system nationwide were euthanized each year, Amanda said.

That number has drastically decreased, Marcus was quick to point out — now, the majority of shelter animals are adopted.

That change was spurred in part by the nationwide "no-kill" movement.

Happily Ever After was built upon a no-kill foundation when Amanda began the shelter in her family garage at the age of 21.

She was pursuing an education degree at UW-Green Bay at that time.

She attempted to balance both, but got advice from professors and mentors that she couldn't both teach and devote her time to establishing a shelter.

So, she made a choice.

With the help of Amanda and Marcus' parents, the shelter moved from their garage to their grandfather's barn in Marion and continued into their Green Bay facility, which opened its doors in 2016.

Education at the heart

Amanda said she still keeps what she learned at UW-Green Bay with her.

"Education is embedded in everything that I do on a daily basis," said Amanda.

One of Happily Ever After's five pillars is education and she embodies that in her work with the veterinary community, volunteers and families who come to adopt.

"While I'm not in the classroom anymore, I get to do it every day in the field," said Amanda.

Marcus studied communication, which led to an opportunity at Shopko Corporate and then 11 years with Elevate 97 in Green Bay.

Reflecting on his transition from college to his early career, Marcus said, "I started to recognize that every problem stemmed back to communication... and I was uniquely equipped to help solve those [problems] because I had this wonderful education from UWGB."

When his sister's nonprofit got an opportunity to expand thanks to a donor giving a building to the cause, Marcus decided to put his skills and education to use at Happily Ever After.

Marcus now works on branding and development for the nonprofit, while Amanda works on the animal care and medical side of the business.

Together, they've written a new chapter of Happily Ever After, growing as both a sanctuary and a brand over the years and honing in on the mission they hope to accomplish.

A community served

"We're on a mission to increase humanity's capacity to care for its companion animals," Marcus said.

He and Amanda are the first to admit it's a big statement, but it's one Happily Ever After is ready to take on.

Marcus said that caring for companion animals isn't all about transitioning shelters to no-kill—it's also about making sure people are educated on what it takes to care for animals, that options for adoption, the importance of spaying/neutering and the process of rehabilitation are communicated to the communities that also hold a stake in ensuring animal welfare.

Community, for the Re-itizes, has always been vital to their mission.

They recognize the strength of connection.

That connection to community has built Happily Ever After into the facility it is.

Despite all the growth over the past 18 years, when you step into Happily Ever After, you'll notice a distinct hominess.

It has all the charm of a family business — holiday decorations up, an array of t-shirts and hoodies with kitschy sayings like "Shed Happens," and the occasional excited bark from a room away, a pleasant reminder of the purpose this building serves.

Large in the room is an almost floor-to-ceiling photo print of the Marion barn where Happily Ever After got its legs almost 18 years ago.

Big things are happening now — Amanda and Marcus are on a search for a CEO to take the next step in growing an animal sanctuary into something bigger.

Their mission extends to all of humanity, but their soul is still local.

"Our intentions and the things we're working on are way bigger than just what's happening here," said Marcus, "but it's this community that's going to help make it possible."

Plan for closing surprises when negotiating

Dear Monty

BY RICHARD MONTGOMERY
SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR MONTY,

Our contract called for the buyer to move in on the closing day.

It is two weeks before closing, and they want to move the closing up five days.

We scheduled the movers for the day before closing and could not move the date.

Now, they are threatening to back out. Any advice would be appreciated.

MONTY'S ANSWER

An attorney's immediate counsel is required. The attorney will be able to advise you.

Assuming you have a solid contract, they may come to their senses when learning about the potential consequences.

Whether you have numerous moves, or this is your first home sale, signals get crossed or something like this can happen.

Minimize risk with rent after closing

It is an excellent practice for the seller to occupy after closing and pay rent daily for a short period.

This negotiation is a conscious part of the offer to purchase.

The closing often does not occur as scheduled.

That condition may have made the buyer's request doable.

When the closing fails, and they do, if the seller agrees to vacate on or before the day of closing, it will be frustrating and expensive for both parties unless they have protected themselves contractually.

Moving tips

- Only take things you need; garage sales are options.

- Label boxes by number and if it is fragile. Keep a separate corresponding list by box number of the contents and the room to place it for unpacking purposes.

- If you left the old home spotless, your new home may not be. In the purchase agreement, insist on a clean, vacant house. Have cleaning supplies handy, just in case.

- Avoid carrying heavy boxes alone or too many boxes, where they obstruct your vision.

- Have a first aid kit on hand just in case of an accident.

- Take an inventory of items and walk through the home for a final inspection of empty rooms, closets, the basement, cupboards, and the attic. The purchase contract should contain a pre-closing inspection a day or two before the closing.

- You should set aside essential tools like a screwdriver, pliers, tape measure, and hammer, which are readily accessible.

A checklist

Check off the procedures and items below to ensure you are ready for a successful move.

1. If you rented, coordinate the move with your lease's end and give your landlord proper notice.

2. Change of address at the post office.

3. Notify banks, insurance companies, friends, relatives and employers of your new address.

4. Be sure newspapers, magazines, and other services are aware of your new address.

5. Advise all utility companies of your moving date at prior and new locations.

6. Reserve a tentative date with the moving company.

7. Plan care for infants, pets and plants.

8. Get agreement on the date of occupancy.

9. Gather all your house keys, including from friends or relatives. Leave them with the new owner.

10. Go through the home after loading everything to ensure you did not leave anything behind.

11. Unhook appliances to be ready for moving.

12. Have a new address recorded on your driver's license.

13. At the new home, check all the pilot lights and smoke detector batteries.

Snow much to do at Winterfest on Broadway

By Janelle Fisher
City Pages Editor

Winter weather has finally arrived, and On Broadway, Inc. is inviting community members to celebrate the season at Winterfest on Broadway.

While the bitter cold, snow and ice may not be everyone's cup of tea, Mary Rhode, director of marketing at On Broadway, said the goal of Winterfest is to highlight all of the good things winter in Wisconsin has to offer.

"This year's Winterfest on Broadway presented by Green Bay Packers Give Back is focused on all the things we love so much about this time of the year," she said. "Whether it's enjoying the ice sculptures and winter games outdoors or warming your belly's indoors with flavorful soups courtesy of the Broadway District Soup Contest, there is no shortage of fun activities for all ages."

- ▲ Attendees of Winterfest on Broadway will have the opportunity to roas smores over an open fire.
- ▶ Winter games and activities will abound at Winterfest on Broadway, happening Saturday, Jan. 20, in Green Bay's Broadway District.
- ◀ The Candy Land Scavenger Hunt map can be found on the back page of City Pages. Submitted photos

This year's Winterfest, scheduled to take place on Saturday, Jan. 20, from 11 a.m.-3 p.m., features a lineup of activities including making s'mores over an open fire, horse and carriage rides, Paw Patrol characters, face painting and henna tattoos, art and craft vendors, a presentation from Heritage Hill, the Candy Land Scavenger Hunt and more.

"Certainly many fan-favorite events will be returning, including the ice sculptures which will be interactive, offering a perfect winter photo op," Rhode said. "S'mores, horse and carriage rides, the Candy Land Scavenger Hunt and the Soup Contest are also all returning events this year. Additionally, this year, On Broadway, Inc. will be collecting donations for the New Community Shelter. A collection box will be located at the information table located inside Old Fort Square and a list of needed items is available on our website."

Rhode said Winterfest has opportunities in store not only for attendees, but also for businesses within the Broadway District.

"Winterfest On Broadway provides opportunities for all to enjoy the beauty of the Broadway District this time of year," she said. "This includes supporting District businesses that are participating in the Candy Land Scavenger Hunt. This event truly is so much fun for the entire family and provides yet another reason to visit and experience the Broadway District."

This year's participating businesses include Bay Area Burger Co., Edit Home Design, Cockloft Vintage, Beerntsen's Candies, Board and Brush, Glass Nickel Pizza, Pop Up (formerly House of Homebrew), The Cannery, Titledown Brewing Company and Cultivate Taste.

For those planning to attend Winterfest, Rhode said there are a few things to know to help make the most of your experience.

"Old Fort Square will be your best starting point upon arrival at Winterfest On Broadway," she said. "Stop by the information table to pick up your Candy Land Scavenger Hunt map, shop local art and craft vendors and partake in the Broadway District Soup Contest. You'll be able to taste and vote for your favorite of four popular soups crafted by Broadway District restaurateurs. Soup Contest punch cards are $5.00 and include samples of each soup (while supplies last) and a voting ballot. Once you've stopped in at Old Fort Square, attendees are welcome to head to Red Sculpture Park for outdoor activities, food, ice sculptures, and other winter fun activities. Parking, including handicap accessible parking, is available behind Old Fort Square and on surrounding streets. Restrooms are also available inside Old Fort Square. Be sure to dress for the weather as some activities do take place outdoors. Food and beverage sales will also take place outdoors and picnic tables are available for seating."

More details about Winterfest on Broadway can be found at downtowngreenbay.com or on On Broadway, Inc.'s Facebook page.

EPIC ADVENTURE ON STAGE

Knight Theatre presents The Lightning Thief: A Percy Jackson Story

By Janelle Fisher
City Pages Editor

While the St. Norbert College campus is still mostly empty with many students still home for winter break, one group of students have been hard at work preparing for a show opening next week.

Knight Theatre, a student-run theater group at SNC, is almost ready to present its production of The Lightning Thief: A Percy Jackson Story — a show which might sound familiar to fans of a certain young adult book series.

“It’s a musical that follows the first book of the Percy Jackson and the Olympians series by Rick Riordan,” said Seth Mayrer, president of Knight Theatre. “In the musical adaptation, it’s slightly different from the book. Percy is a teenager who discovers that the Greek gods are actually real and not only that, but he is what’s called a half-blood — so he’s a demigod. He’s kind of just thrust into this life that he didn’t ask for and he has to figure out what that means for him as he tries to discover a different side of him that he never knew existed. The driving plot point is that he gets framed for stealing Zeus’ lightning bolt, so Zeus and a lot of the other gods are really mad at him and are coming after him and he doesn’t know why. So he has to go on a quest to clear his name and figure out who is the one that’s trying to frame him.”

Mayrer said fans of the book will be delighted to find that the stage adaptation remains mostly true to the plot of the book.

“It’s a little bit different in the sense that [Percy and his friends] are aged up a bit,” he said. “In the books, they started at 12 years old, which makes a little more sense for the book, but in the show — especially since it’s only following the first book, they did age them up a bit. It actually does a really good job staying true to the book. A book-to-stage adaptation is pretty difficult, so they actually do a pretty good job condensing an entire book’s worth of content into a show that flows really well. I was actually really impressed with it... It does a really good job adapting the story from the books and making slight changes to fit the stage adaptation and condensing the initial book of a series into its own singular story.”

Sprinkled throughout the show, Mayrer said, are references to the original story.

“There’s plenty of references to the books and things that will be mentioned that avid fans of the book will definitely pick up,” he said. “There’s a few songs in there where they cover a lot of traveling experiences and they hit a lot of different scenes that would have been subplots in the book. They’ll call back to characters that are in the books and things like that as they go along their travels, so book fans will definitely have a lot of fun with it.”

Even those who haven’t read the book, Mayrer said, will find things to enjoy in the show.

◀ Knight Theatre gives an opportunity for students to participate in the performing arts, regardless of what their major may be. Submitted photos

"I have now read the book, but I didn't come into it initially reading the book," he said. "I knew the story because I grew up with a lot of friends who read it, but my first viewing of the show was totally not reading the book and I had no issue following along or enjoying the story. Then, when I read the book, I just got that much more out of it. I think that's what the show does well — you don't have to have read the book coming in but if you have read the book, there's going to be a lot more extra things you'll pick up on and get a lot of enjoyment out of."

One of Mayrer's favorite scenes in the production follows Percy and his friends to the Underworld.

"There's a really cool scene where they go to the Underworld, which is Los Angeles — which I think is hilarious," he said. "They go to the Underworld and it's not exactly how Percy expects it because he's very new to this whole Greek mythology thing... He goes down there and it's kind of just like a lobby... There's this really cool dance number where it incorporates a lot of the creatures from the Underworld from Greek mythology, but then also dead historical figures like Mozart make an appearance... So we get to pull from some cool historical figures who show up and contribute to the music in some way... The song is really cool and the dance number, and there's a lot of cool lighting effects there and the cast just has a ton of fun doing it."

When picking a show for Knight Theatre to put on this year, Mayrer said consideration was given to the previous years' shows.

"Two years ago, we did Carrie: The Musical, which was a little bit more of a somber show with a lot more mature themes and then Spelling Bee was very contrasting to that — it was very slapstick silly and very much a comedy," he said. "We felt that this show was a very unique middle ground. It's an adventure story, so it has plenty of light-hearted moments — especially since it's adapted from a young adult book. Kids and adults of all ages will enjoy the story, but then it also handles a lot of more mature themes, too, as Percy is trying to figure out his role with his dad because his dad's never been present in his life... It's a really cool middle ground of this epic adventure story but then it also deals a lot with kind of a coming-of-age side of things, too. It's a pretty cool middle ground and I thought it was a cool direction for our company to go this year."

And Mayrer said describing Knight Theatre as a company is more accurate than you might expect.

"Knight Theatre is probably the most unique student organization — if I do say so myself — on campus," he said. "Every aspect of putting together a show is done by students. We do have guidance from advisors, and thank God for that, but my job as president and producer was not only to decide on a show. I have to negotiate the rights and do all the legal work there to make sure we're good and following Disney's laws because they own the rights to [The Lightning Thief: A Percy Jackson Story]... It's almost like we're our own company, and I kind of get to fill the CEO role... It's really cool to give students the opportunity to step into positions of authority... There's really no other group that's so student-driven... There's a lot of things that go into it, and it's pretty cool to give students the opportunity to take that on and then to see them grow and rise up to the occasion."

What makes Knight Theatre even more unique is that it creates opportunities for all students, regardless of their major, to participate in theater.

"One of the coolest parts of St. Norbert is that you don't have to be a music or theater major to engage in those things," he said. "I'm an economics major and I run the thing. What's really cool about being at a place like St. Norbert is that you have the liberty to study what you want, pursue what you want, but you still have access to those other aspects that you enjoy about college. Knight Theatre is a really good example of that — we pull people from all across campus and it's a really cooperative effort. It's not just the music kids. It's students from all over and that's really special to me and I think that kind of sets this group and this show apart from others in the area."

PUBLISHER'S LETTER

The Wind Down

Dear Reader,

We all become addicted to time. We become more addicted the older we get. Hanging on and savoring the gift of another day is not another given so we push in to it with a little more heart.

Recently I attended a funeral. The life lived was long – linked with many beautiful times and people joined along the way. She had pressed the world hard for all the juices each day would give up. Those who were there were heart-filled with joy and celebration. A tinge of sadness hung subtly in the air but the vision of spirituality shined brightly ahead.

The joy outweighed the grief knowing the ethereal paths ahead were ones of eternity where down the line we'll all be together again... He truly is a loving God.

Watch for signs of Emerald Ash Borer

FROM THE WISCONSIN DNR

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) encourages property owners to watch for woodpecker damage to their ash trees this winter. If damage is found, property owners should make plans to take action in the spring.

Woodpecker damage, often called "flecking," happens when birds peck away some of a tree's bark to access the larvae underneath. Flecking is a common early sign that an ash tree might be infested with emerald ash borer (EAB), an invasive insect.

EAB is the most damaging threat to Wisconsin trees, killing more than 99% of the untreated ash trees it infests.

In 2023, EAB was found in three additional northern counties of Wisconsin and is now known to be present in 69 of Wisconsin's 72 counties. It is a common insect in the southern half of the state and woodpecker damage to ash trees is already widespread. EAB infestations are currently uncommon in most parts of northern Wisconsin, and woodpecker damage will be less abundant.

Landowners who spot woodpecker damage in their woodlot ash trees are encouraged to consult a DNR or consulting forester for management advice. Property owners who detect an EAB infestation in its early stages — often by looking for woodpecker damage — can take steps to protect their high-value ash trees by treating them with insecticide between mid-April and mid-May. Insecticide treatments are seldom practical or economical for woodlot ash trees. Insecticide treatment of valuable ash trees is more likely to succeed if the trees have low or moderate levels of woodpecker damage.

Now is a good time to make plans for insecticide protection this spring. Treatments are worth considering statewide. The highest risk of infestation is in communities already known to be infested or within 15 miles of a known infestation. More information on EAB protection can be found on the Wisconsin EAB website.

How to close social media accounts of a deceased loved one

DEAR SAVVY SENIOR,

How do I go about canceling a person's social media accounts when they die?

away their dormant accounts can become vulnerable to scammers who can hack into them and even steal your deceased loved one's identity. Here's a run-down of how you can cancel or change many different social media accounts after a loved one dies.

Facebook If your wife used Facebook, you can either "memorialize" or "delete" her account. A memorialized account serves as a place where family and friends can share memories to celebrate the deceased person's life, with the word "Remembering" shown next to the deceased person's name. Once an account is memorialized, content the person shared is still visible on Facebook to the audience it was originally shared with; however, the user's profile will not show up in public spaces such as people you may know, ads or birthday reminders. Ice anglers should proceed with caution

In the Outdoors

BY KEVIN NAZE
GUEST COLUMNIST

This week's frigid air has been ideal for making ice, especially on the inland lakes and away from the main flow on rivers.

A few anglers are even testing the ice at spots like Voyageur Park on the Fox River, Long Tail Point near Green Bay and the Sawyer Harbor and Little Sturgeon Bay areas.

High winds much of the week prevented a total freeze on the vast waters of Green Bay, and areas with strong current — creek inlets or outlets, springs and reefs, for example — should be avoided for a while yet.

Warmer air predicted next week could also cause some issues, especially on Green Bay if it's accompanied by strong southwest winds.

There's simply too much open water on the bay yet, which will allow the ice sheets to break off and move around.

In other words, it's certainly not time to just head out based on the recent cold snap and looks alone.

Even if planning to stick to the more protected areas, be aware that drifted snow can insulate thin ice and prevent it from getting strong enough to support the weight of a snowmobile, four-wheeler, UTV or even a cautious angler on foot.

There are also a lot of spots with busted and refrozen ice, which is not as strong as ice that sets under ideal conditions.

Use an ice chisel to test thickness as you go, and have emergency gear handy: a set of ice picks attached to your sleeve or clipped onto your jacket, a long length of rope to throw in case someone else falls through and a cell phone kept in a waterproof case.

The use of float or life jackets are encouraged.

This weekend, Jan. 20-21, is Wisconsin's annual winter Free Fishing Weekend.

You won't need a license or stamp, but all other regulations apply.

Meanwhile, ice skaters have been out scouting and shoveling new ice this week.

Colorful ice fishing shacks stood ready to be deployed in a prior season off southern Door County.

Parents and guardians should talk with their children about staying away from the ice unless there's adult supervision.

Short shots

Through Jan. 15, hunters had registered 292,683 whitetails in all seasons, 146,937 antlered bucks and 145,746 antlerless deer. The numbers include 3,649 in Door (1,714 bucks), 2,839 in Kewaunee (1,308 bucks) and 2,687 in Brown (1,368 bucks).

Candlelight ski and hike events are set for Jan. 20 at Point Beach State Forest, and Jan. 27 at Whitefish Dunes State Park. Admission stickers are required on all motor vehicles stopping in state parks, forests and recreation areas.

You don't need one if just driving through.

Lake Michigan water levels are about an inch higher than they were at this time last year, and are about four inches above the 100-year average.

Levels have dropped more than 30 inches since January, 2020.

USDDP voters to see referendum on ballot

BY LEE REINSCH
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

DE PERE — When they go to the polls on April 2, taxpayers in the Unified School District of De Pere (USDDP) will be asked to help keep the schools running in their current state.

The board of education on Jan. 8 voted 5-1 to place a referendum on the spring ballot asking for $4.75 million per year for five years.

The total, $23.75 million, would add an extra $1.35 per $1,000 of assessed property value, or $270 for a $200,000 home, onto property owners' tax bills.

The district says without the supplement, it falls short of its needs by $3 million for the 2024-25 fiscal year.

Within five years, the deficit will grow to $6.8 million, according to the district, unless it closes buildings, lets go of staff or cuts course offerings, sports and student activities.

The funding would allow the district to maintain its recommended class sizes and current programs and services, as well as maintenance, technology and transportation budgets.

The funds would also be used for raises.

"Employee compensation, including salaries and benefits that support maintaining our competitive edge as the highest-performing Green Bay-Fox Cities metro area school district, is a major focus for referendum funds," Superintendent Chris Thompson said. "Without this funding, the district will not be able to cover the cost of consumer price index (CPI) compensation increases."

The district was not able to fund the entire CPI increase for the 2023-24 school year.

The district points to a number of factors to explain the funding gap: increases in the cost of utilities, busing, health insurance and contracted services; the cost of technology and the security measures and updating it requires; recent state funding not making up for more than a decade of revenue limits, which have led to teachers leaving the district; and textbook companies shifting to online versions that have a finite shelf life.

Online curricular material costs the district more than $140,000 per year.

Thompson said the extra funding would enable the district to fully fund its technology plan, including student Chromebook devices, classroom projection technology, annual subscriptions, building infrastructure upgrades and protection against malware and cyber attacks.

In addition, the number of students the district serves is 25% greater than two decades ago.

Building capacity limits the number of open-enrollment students the district can accept, which means the district receives less funding for those students while still having to pay other districts for the students residing in the district who choose to attend other districts through open enrollment.

In the current 2023-24 school year, the district is missing out on $413,848 in open-enrollment revenue compared to the previous year.

The district also says that the Wisconsin legislature's new Act 20 literacy law, which applies to public schools and private schools that participate in the Wisconsin School Choice program, is an unfunded mandate and doesn't cover the cost of staff training or the purchase of resources.

"The district must increase curriculum and instructional funding due to increased costs for annual textbook online subscriptions and instructional material and teacher training costs associated with the state's passing of Act 20 literacy legislation," Thompson stated. "This funding will support the district in remaining cutting-edge in its instructional practices so that it remains academically competitive."

The funds will also enable the district to hire three intervention teachers for the middle school and high school. Interventionists also serve as instructional coaches who help students who need remedial learning.

The funding will also support district-wide mental health and coping skills development where prior grant funding has ended, and it will enable the district to add school bus routes.

Currently, some student-ride times are 90 minutes or more.

Board member Melissa Niffenegger cast the sole "no" vote, saying she objected to the measure because the money would be for operating expenses, and she didn't think the verbiage of the referendum was clear.

"Voters in the voting booth are going to think $4.75 million isn't that much," she said. "They're not going to times it by five to come up with $23.75 million."

Niffenegger likened the move to putting food and rent on a credit card and asked how much interest would be charged.

District Finance Director Dawn Foeller said borrowing and levying are not the same.

"When it's levied, there is no interest," Foeller said. "The $4.75 million would go on our tax bill every year (for five years), and we would use it toward our operations that year, then levy it again the following year. So there is no interest."

Computer lab upgrade

In other business, the board voted to approve the purchase of new computer workstations for two computer labs at the high school from Heartland Business Systems.

The new Dell workstations will replace the current HP workstations, which will be nine years old this spring.

Technology Director Curt Pieschek said that, among other things such as slow code loading time and incompatibility with the latest CAD program, the older systems cannot be updated and pose a security risk to the district.

The cost to the district is $33,600.

How it happened

RMU kept Green Bay scoreless for over three minutes to start the game, taking a 5-0 lead after Natalie Johnson splashed a three. Green Bay slowly got back in the game, taking a 9-7 lead once Schreiber drove through the lane for a layup. The Phoenix, after opening the game down five, ended the first quarter on a 16-4 run, taking a 16-9 advantage into the second frame. From there, Green Bay shot 3-of-8 and buried a couple of free throws to end the stanza on an 8-0 run, going into the break with a 28-19 lead.

Green Bay awoke from a rare offensive slumber to erupt for 26 points in the third quarter. McNeal went off, racking up 10 of her points in the frame, helping extend Green Bay’s lead to 28 by the end of the quarter. The Phoenix defense suffocated RMU’s shooting ability, holding the Colonials to just 28.8% from the field and 22.7% from beyond the arc. Green Bay surrendered 40 points, the lowest total an opponent has scored this season.

Big second half run leads Green Bay past Cleveland State

BY GREEN BAY ATHLETICS FOR THE PRESS TIMES

GREEN BAY – Noah Reynolds dropped his third 30+ point performance of the season to lead the Green Bay men’s basketball team to a 79-71 win over Cleveland State on Sunday. The Phoenix used a 12-0 run down the stretch to move to 11-8 on the year. Green Bay is tied at the top of the Horizon League standings with Oakland with a 6-2 conference record.

There were some other big performers for Green Bay, including a career-high 15 points from Foster Wonders and a second-consecutive double-double from Elijah Jones. Jones finished the afternoon with 13 points and 10 rebounds.

Cleveland State had some success inside, but the Green Bay defense did a good job limiting the Vikings from deep, allowing them to shoot just 4-for-20 (20.0%) from deep. Tristan Enaruna led the visitors with 22 points and six rebounds.

How it happened

Cleveland State led early, but the Phoenix responded with a 5-0 run after a made three from Wonders to take a 14-12 lead. Green Bay led for the remainder of the half and entered the locker room with a 38-35 advantage. Green Bay relied on its three-point shooting in the period, knocking down seven threes in the half.

Cleveland State continued to attack the paint and eventually built a 64-60 lead with just under five minutes to go. However, that’s when the Phoenix came alive and ripped off a 12-0 run over the next four minutes to take a commanding 72-64 lead. Green Bay hit five of six free throws down the stretch and secured the win, 79-71.

Game notes

Green Bay has won six of its last seven.

Blackjack tryouts

The Brown County Blackjacks hosted tryouts as they prepare for the 2024 football season. General Manager Brian Peterson said this will be the youngest roster the team has had in years. Tori Wittenbrock photos to see this new crop of players that are excited to develop as players and as people during their future season.

“We’ve got a much younger team this year. We have had a very veteran-heavy team the last few years, but we’ve got a lot of young guys on the team this year, so I’m excited to see what kind of performance they can put on,” said Peterson.

Although the coaching staff is still in the process of putting together their roster, Peterson said one aspect of the team that will be experiencing a big change this season is how young the roster is.

“It’s really going to be the youth on the team. Our average guy last year was on the team eight years and our average guy on the team this year is going to be two years,” said Peterson.

As spring grows nearer and nearer, Peterson said that the Blackjacks are ready to continue on their success after finishing last season off with a win at U.S. Bank Stadium in Minneapolis, Minn. in the championship.

it so seriously. You have to try to do other things. You can't just say that you want to play hockey since you are five years old and do nothing else. Just try to have fun every day and do things outside of hockey, too," said Gajan.

Although he has had amazing experiences playing hockey, Gajan said that he has had his fair share of adversity and mental slumps, like any young player.

"Last year before I committed to Minnesota Duluth, I wasn't playing terribly, but we were losing and every game was like a one-goal game. But then everything changed. I committed to Minnesota Duluth, we won our last few games back in Chippewa and got to go to world juniors — we had a great run there. I don't know, it's just something that happens to everyone, so just know that you have opportunities to have great games all season," said Gajan.

Gajan said that when mental blocks like this pop up for athletes, sometimes it is better to just rely on others to distract you from whatever problems you are having on the ice so that you can just relax.

"Sometimes I just need time to myself to think about everything. There is always some friend or someone you can talk to, not even about the problems you are having (on the ice) but other stuff so that you can forget about everything else. I have a mental coach but you don't really talk to him about problems you're having, it's more about performance and working to always be getting better," said Gajan.

"When hockey stuff isn't going great, I just talk to anyone about anything.

What the future holds

Gajan has great things ahead of him in his hockey career, including finding out what the future holds for him after being drafted by the NHL's Chicago Blackhawks.

"It was a great experience. Everything happened so fast for me. I could have been drafted a year ago, but no one even knew about me. I came to Chippewa, and after two games I talked to about 20 schools and so many NHL teams wanted me and everything just happened so fast last year. Being drafted so high, I mean, after last year, I wasn't even thinking about the draft. My dream was always to make it to the NHL but I wasn't thinking about the draft because I wasn't anywhere close to being drafted the year before. It wasn't my only goal coming to the USA, but I'm happy for it," said Gajan.

Unlike a lot of younger athletes, Gajan said he was entirely committed to making hockey his career, leaving home very young to pursue his dreams.

"I left home when I was 14 to play in Finland. My last two years in Slovakia I played in the furthest town from my hometown, so I'm used to living alone," said Gajan. "I had to do everything on my own, like laundry and cooking."

Gajan said it wasn't until he made it to Chippewa that he finally had people that he lived with and his experiences in Green Bay have been great, on and off the ice.

"I like it so far. There have been ups and downs. Not everything is going this season as I had hoped but you always just have to keep going and hope that it will get better," said Gajan.

Having close teammates has really made a difference, according to Gajan.

"I think we are a good group of guys," said Gajan. "Everyone works hard in practice and the guys are having fun. We have big goals this year, so hopefully we can accomplish something," said Gajan.

Although the Gamblers are in the latter half of their season, Gajan said that the team is more than ready to take on their next few games.

Green Bay Packers Quarterback Jordan Love said that he is pleased with the performance of his offensive line for allowing the run game to develop and the receivers to do their job. Tori Wittenbrock photo

going into this game, to run the ball well, and I think we did a great job of that," said Love.

Love also credited his offensive line for giving the rest of them the ability to perform well and run plays.

"It started up front. It started with the o-line pass protection. They stepped up big. They had a great game and kept me clean all night," said Love.

"Coming into the game we were going to establish the run early, and that's what we did."

Although he is reaching the end of his first season as a starting quarterback, Love said that he has become accustomed to his role and learned how to step up when his team needs him.

"I'm just playing quarterback. There's always going to be a pass rush there. I'm just trying to buy as much time as possible to get the read off. I think that's just playing quarterback. You've got to stay in there and take a few hits every now and then and just try to get the ball off," said Love.

One of the most important aspects of the team's win was their ability to start off strong on offense and have the defense's help to keep them out front.

Although Dak Prescott and the Cowboys were able to lessen the Packers' lead late in the game, Green Bay's dominance in the first half was a large part of what secured them the win.

By the end of the first half, the score was 27-7 and the Packers had clinched two turnovers from Dallas.

"That's the mindset, you know? We're trying to get the offense out there, start fast and put up points. That's what we've been doing all season and it's been working for us, so we are just trying to keep that rolling," said Love.

However, Love's appreciation for his offense doesn't end with his offensive line and running backs.

The young quarterback said that although his receivers are also young, they have proved themselves worthy of the spotlight as well.

"It's a very unselfish receiver room. They love to see others succeed, just as much as them, so I think that's just the key to it," said Love.

"I think we've got a lot of playmakers in that room and they continue to show what they are about."

The Green Bay Packers now advance to face the San Francisco 49ers in the NFL Divisional Round of the postseason on Sunday, Jan. 21.

LaFleur says stars are emerging from the young Pack

BY TORI WITTENBROCK
ASSOCIATE SPORTS
EDITOR

DALLAS, TEXAS — With perhaps the underdog win of the season now under their belts, the Packers have proven how deserving they are of their spot on the postseason stage.

"So proud of our guys and just the mindset that they had coming down here," said LaFleur.

Although by the end of the game it was close, LaFleur said that the narrowing of the score can be attributed to his decision-making and not the ability of the young but established performers he has on his squad.

"Certainly we knew it was going to be difficult and hats off to Dallas for making it a game at the end of the game there. Bad decision by me having to pull our guys and then having to put them back in, but luckily... they bailed me out in bad decisions so I just couldn't be happier for our guys," said LaFleur.

Despite the exciting win and becoming the first team in the NFL to win in the postseason as the seventh seed, LaFleur said that the team intends to carry the momentum while not underestimating the San Francisco 49ers — the top seed in the league.

"We've got our work cut out for us," said LaFleur. After standing by his quarterback all season, LaFleur said that he has been more than satisfied with the poise and leadership that Jordan Love has shown all season as he has grown in his role with the team, despite his youth.

"Jordan Love... wow. That's about all I can say. What he did, and the poise he shows, the command he shows...those are things that you can't necessarily — you can try to coach it — but what a moment," said LaFleur.

"It just shows the growth he's had since his first start against KC. I'm just so proud and happy for him."

After a 27-7 halftime score, LaFleur said that he is beyond proud of his team for the dedication they have shown all season and never letting up.

"We came in at halftime and I said, 'Hey, what's the score?' and they all said 0-0. It's one thing to say it and it's another to go out and do it, but fortunately, we built a lead that was too big to overcome," said LaFleur, praising the performance of his offense.

After securing a hefty lead, LaFleur made the decision to pull his starters off the field to rest them and prepare them for the next round, while giving his backups a few snaps.

However, this decision allowed Cowboys Quarterback Dak Prescott to lessen the Packers' lead and bring the game a lot closer.

"I'm mad at myself for pulling our guys at the end of the game," said LaFleur.

At the end of the day, LaFleur said that he was more than satisfied to see all of the hard work his team put in all season come to fruition.

"These guys — they went for it and that's exciting to see. Every phase, I thought you could see it in just the way we played, our play style and how aggressive we were," said LaFleur.

"Each phase contributed to the win."

The Packers now prepare to take on the San Francisco 49ers in the NFL Divisional Round of the postseason on Sunday, Jan. 21 in Northern California.

Much love for offense after win in Dallas

DALLAS, TEXAS – After being counted out for much of the season, the Packers have proved just how deserving they are of their spot in the playoffs.

After a 48-32 win in the NFL Wild Card Round of the post season against the Dallas Cowboys (12-6), the Green Bay Packers (10-8) are ready to take on the San Francisco 49ers (12-5) in the next round of the playoffs.

Packers Quarterback Jordan Love said that he is proud of his team for proving themselves and achieving what they set out to do.

“I just can’t say enough how proud I am of everyone in the locker room,” said Love.

“It’s been a long season. We have been counted out a lot of the season. Everyone keeps battling and keeps competing.”

Although the team has faced much speculation from football fans across the country, Love said that he and his team don’t take anything to heart.

“I think it’s just noise from the outside. I think that’s how everyone looks at it in the locker room,” said Love.

“We’re not worried about it. We just keep coming out here and showing what we are about.”

With 415 yards and 22 first downs, Love said that he is proud of his offense for being able to put together a great game.

“I think that was a key for us

Adam Gajan, a force to be reckoned with

BY TORI WITTENBROCK

GREEN BAY – Sitting in second place in the Eastern Conference of the USHL has been no easy feat all year for the Green Bay Gamblers.

However, their performance would no doubt be less impressive without high performing athletes on their squad, such as Adam Gajan, an international player from Poprad, Slovakia.

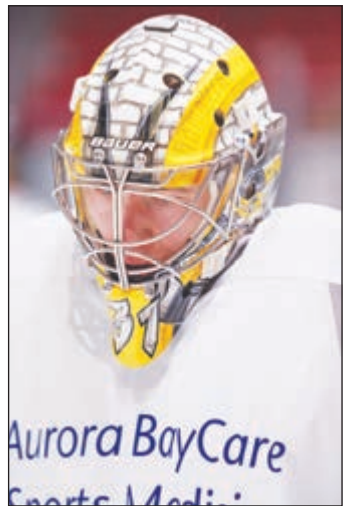

Although a force to be reckoned with now, Gajan said that he was the first person in his family have a profound love for hockey.

Making the decision for himself to play, Gajan said that he’s not sure why, but being a goalie was something he had always gravitated towards.

“I don’t even know. I just wanted to be a goalie since I was two years old,” said Gajan. “I don’t know what it was that made me want to be a goalie and obviously I don’t remember when I was that young, but my parents told me that I have always wanted to be a goalie. It just kind of started from nothing.”

Gajan said that he never gravitated towards any other sport the way he did with hockey.

“Hockey was always my priority. I was never deciding between two sports or something like that, but growing up, soccer is a pretty big thing in Europe so I played soccer. I was cycling and playing tennis and stuff like that like all of the other kids, but hockey was always number one,” said Gajan.

Originally from Slovakia, Gajan is one of eight international players on the Green Bay Gamblers roster.

mental toughness it takes to consistently perform at your best.

“Sometimes you have your best moments, other times you have harder moments, like when you lose a lot of games. It’s hard to get back and it bothers you for a while. It’s hard to get back on

“You just have to try to have fun every day and try not to take it so seriously. You have to try to do other things. You can’t just say that you want to play hockey since you are five years old and do nothing else.” - Adam Gajan

Someone to look up to

Like many other young players, Gajan said that his love for the game was fueled by watching his favorite player on the ice.

“My favorite goalie in the NHL is Andrei Vasilevskiy, so I like to watch him. I watch other [goalies] too and everything, but I really like him and how he plays,” said Gajan, giving praise to the Russian Tampa Bay Lightning goalie.

The mental side of things

Although his love for the sport is unfaltering, Gajan said that it can be rough at times and that a lot of people don’t understand the your game, so that’s probably the hardest part,” said Gajan.

“It’s hard, like what happened to me during the world juniors. It’s hard enough losing a regular game during the season to come back for your next game, but those games are once in a lifetime, so it’s really hard to get back.”

Despite his own youth, Gajan said that he has some of his own advice to give young people just starting out in their hockey careers.

“You just have to try to have fun every day and try not to take
