Pair of Tomahawk veterans take Never Forgotten Honor Flight

LEADER

WASHINGTON. D.C. Numerous area veterans, including two from Tomahawk, participated in this week's Forgotten Honor Flight (NFHF) to Washington, D.C., to see the memorials that honor their service.

The flight, which took place on Monday, April 22, was organized by the Wausau-based NFHF organization, which serves veterans in Barron, Clark, Iron, Langlade, Lin-Marathon, Oneida, Portage, Price, Rusk, Taylor, Vilas and Wood counties.

The flight marked the Wausau-based NFHF organization's 47th flight since the first took place in April 2010.

A total of 106 veterans - 11 Korean War veterans and 95 Vietnam War veterans – took the flight.

Among those listed to take the trip were Tomahawk residents Thomas Lund, Navy; and Charles Schaar, Air Force.

Veterans from other communities throughout northern and central Wisconsin. including Abbotsford, Antigo, Medford, Merrill, Mosinee, Park Falls, Phillips, Rhinelander, Tripoli and Wausau, were also on the flight roster.

The veterans were accompanied by 67 guardians on the one-day round trip that departed Central Wisconsin Airport (CWA) in Mosinee at 6:30 a.m. and was scheduled to return at approximately 10

The public was invited to CWA to welcome the veterans

As part of NFHF, veterans receive a free round-trip flight, and guardians pay $500.00 for the opportunity to accompany one, two or three veterans on the trip.

Veterans and guardians interested in taking a future Honor Flight must complete an application at www.neverforgottenhonorflight.com or contact the organization at 715-573-8519.

All veterans from the World War II, Korean War and Vietnam War eras are encouraged to submit an application. The only criteria for veterans to qualify for an Honor Flight is to have served (active duty, reserves or National Guard) prior to May 7, 1975, regardless of where they served.

Completed applications for veterans and guardians also can be mailed to Never Forgotten Honor Flight, 4404 Rib Mountain Dr., #234, Wausau, Wis., 54401.

NFHF said the veterans are selected based upon the order in which their applications are received and the conflict they served in.

"Preference is given to World War II veterans, then Korea Veterans, and then Vietnam era veterans," NFHF stated. "Veterans who are terminally ill, regardless of when they served in those three eras, are given top preference Guardians should be 18 to 69 years old and able to lend physical assistance to Jesus tells us "I am the true vine, and my Father is the vinedresser." (John 15:1). This simple and direct statement tells us that to have faith, we must know Jesus and be connected to Jesus. Therefore, read the words of Jesus, pray in his name and open your heart to Jesus.

Grapes flourish when attached to a good vine. Humans do too. Jesus is the true, the best, the ultimate vine.

If something seems to be missing in your life, perhaps you are not connected to the true vine of life. Trust in Jesus, and your life will be full and better.

To know Jesus and invite Him into your life is to get connected to a higher power. Blessed is the person who is connected to Jesus.

VA Caregiver Program

VA caregivers are people who support the health and wellness of a service-disabled veteran or a member of the Armed Forces undergoing a medical discharge from the military. Caregivers can be family members, but they don't have to be.

Previously, a veteran had to be service-connected for a serious injury or illness incurred or aggravated in the line of duty on or after Sept. 11, 2001, or on or before May 7, 1975. As of Oct. 1, 2022, this program expanded to include caregivers of eligible veterans of all eras.

Eligible veterans must have a single or combined service-connected disability rating of 70% or more. Veterans who have a single or combined 60% disability rating and are receiving Individual Unemployability are not eligible.

Veterans must also be in need of inperson care services for a minimum of six continuous months based on either an inability to perform an Activity of Daily Living (ADL) or they must have a need for supervision, protection or instruction, which means a functional impairment that directly impacts his/her ability to maintain his/her personal safety on a daily basis.

To be eligible to be a veteran's caregiver, a person must be at least 18 years old; be a family member or someone who lives with the veteran full-time or will do so if designated as his/her caregiver; be initially assessed by the VA as being able to complete caregiver education and training; and complete caregiver training and demonstrate the ability to carry out the specific personal care services, core competencies and additional care requirements.

Benefits for approved caregivers include education and training; access to health insurance, if caregiver is uninsured; mental health counseling; financial stipend; respite care; wellness contact; and travel and per diem compensation when traveling for veteran's VA health care appointments.

To apply for the VA Caregiver Program, download and fill out VA Form 10-10CG and mail it to Oscar G. Johnson VA Medical Center, Attn: Caregiver Program, 325 E. H St., Iron Mountain, Mich., 49801; go to www. tinvurl.com/2b68vmbv and apply online; or call our office and we can apply online for you.

Navigating the Medication Maze: Finding Balance in Health

Dear Reader,

In today's world, medications have become ubiquitous, with many of us relying on pharmaceuticals to manage various illnesses and conditions. Whether it's a daily vitamin, a painkiller for a headache, or a prescription medication for a chronic condition, the use of drugs to address health concerns has become ingrained in our daily routines. However, with this reliance on medication comes the delicate balance of managing our health without succumbing to potential side effects or dependencies.

There are benefits of medication in treating illnesses and improving quality of life. However, there are potential risks and side effects associated with certain drugs, emphasizing the importance of informed decision-making and monitoring by healthcare professionals.

There is a growing interest in complementary and alternative medicines, such as herbal supplements, acupuncture, and mindfulness practices. Some of these therapies can provide additional support or alternatives to traditional pharmaceutical treatments, promoting a holistic approach to health and wellness.

It's important to have a personalized treatment plan tailored to your unique needs, preferences, and medical history. Patients and healthcare providers need to collaborate in finding the right balance of medications and therapies to achieve optimal health outcomes while minimizing potential risks.

Patients need to advocate for themselves in discussions about medication with their healthcare providers, including asking questions, expressing concerns, and exploring alternative options. It's essential to have open communication and ongoing dialogue between patients, caregivers, and healthcare professionals to ensure comprehensive and holistic care.

As we steer through the complex landscape of medication and health management, it's essential to approach the journey with a sense of balance and mindfulness. By staying informed, engaging in open communication with healthcare providers, and embracing a holistic approach to wellness, we can strive to optimize our health while minimizing the potential pitfalls of medication. Ultimately, it's about finding the right balance that allows us to lead healthy, fulfilling lives.

"For people of all abilities, we can fit things in throughout the day; even if it's just a couple of minutes here and there, that's still really good," Renik noted, emphasizing the value of consistency over duration.

Lack of accountability: One of the key obstacles to maintaining a fitness routine is accountability. Renik recommends finding a workout partner or working with a trainer to stay motivated and on track.

"Knowing that someone else's time is at stake, too, not just your own, makes a big difference in showing up," she explained.

Aspirus said Renik's insights underscore the significance of regular exercise in a healthy lifestyle.

"Despite the challenges, making fitness a priority is a rewarding practice that positively impacts overall health," Aspirus stated.

"Not every workout is going to be a good one," Renik said. "It's important to have a positive mindset and remember that not every day is a good day, but that's part of the journey."

Natural Connections: Protecting Birds from Your Windows

BY EMILY STONE NATURALIST/EDUCATION DIRECTOR, CABLE NATURAL HISTORY MUSEUM

The soft but sickening thud sent out a wave of Conversation, impacts. typing, and higher-level thinking stopped. From four corners of the office, heads instinctively turned toward the sound. Bright morning sunshine streaming through the window illuminated nothing unusual, though. With a mix of hope and dread, I opened the back door and scanned up and down the patio. Nothing. I sighed with relief and stepped back inside.

I'd been expecting to find a small bird—lying either lifeless or stunned and glassy-eyed—at the base of the large row of windows that face the Museum's back yard. Low-angled sunlight in the spring, in the fall, and early in the day, sneaks under awnings and tints the glass of our windows with stunningly accurate reflections of trees and skv. When little birds try to fly into that scene, they get a painful—and often deadly—surprise.

Birds can collide with windows in any season, but I've always noticed an increasing number of those sickening thuds in spring. As waves of migrating birds head north, we see both a huge increase in the number of individuals, and an increase in birds who are new to the neighborhood and more likely to be hoodwinked by windows.

According to the Humane Society, roughly half of the birds who hit windows succumb to their injuries or are killed by predators while they're vulnerable. The thud I heard was from one of the lucky ones who flew away. An estimated 1 billion birds die this way each

From the number of calls and emails I get on this topic, I know that these bird deaths weigh heavy on the hearts of many. Not only is it distressing to find feathered corpses outside your home, or to watch the

MOVIES YOU GOTTA SEE

'Smokey and the Bandit' is a reminder that sometimes, being cool is the most important thing

TOMAHAWK LEADER

BY JALEN MAKI

Jerry Reed sagely summarized the plot of the 1977 action comedy film Smokey and the Bandit in his absolute banger "Eastbound and Down":

"The boys are thirsty in Atlanta/And there's beer in Texarkana/And we'll bring it back, no matter what it takes."

Got that? Good. But just in case you don't, here's a rundown of one of the most breezy and fun movies of the '70s:

Smokey and the Bandit starts in Atlanta, where a couple of rich dudes from Texas - Big Enos Burdette and his son, Little Enos are sponsoring a driver in a race. The Enoses want to party it up after their guy wins, but they're in a bit of a pickle: every good rager needs beer, and they're currently dry. Enter Bo "Bandit" Darville (Burt Reynolds), who could best be described as a...legendary outlaw driver, I guess? How does one get that reputation, exactly? I'm not sure. Anyway, Enos and Other, Smaller Enos challenge Bandit to go to Texarkana, Texas, pick up 400 cases of Coors, and haul the bounty back to Atlanta within 28 hours. Everyone involved knows that transporting such cargo across state lines is against the law, but if Bandit pulls it off, he gets $80,000.00, which would be just shy of 415 grand in today's money: A payday worth risking a few nights in the ol' Crowbar Hotel for, in my opinion!

Enos Squared supply Bandit with a sick Pontiac Trans Am for the job, and he visits his old pal (and men's fashion icon) Cledus "Snowman" Snow (Reed) to convince him to tag along. Bandit's plan: Snowman will be in Bandit's semi, hauling the trailer full of the bootlegged beer; meanwhile, Bandit will be driving the Trans Am as a "blocker," distracting the cops from pulling Snowman over and finding the illegal freight.

Century21BestWay.com

property has to offer. $352,900

Bandit, Snowman, and Snowman's trusty companion, a hound dog named Fred, cruise to Texarkana, load up the beer, and start to head back to Atlanta. All is going well until they run into a wedding gownwearing woman named Carrie (Sally Field) standing on the road. Bandit picks her up, which draws the ire of Texas sheriff Buford T. Justice (Jackie Gleason). Carrie was supposed to marry Justice's dimwitted son, Junior, but she got cold feet bailed on the ceremony. Justice and Junior learn that she's riding with Bandit and take off in pursuit, but they're unaware of the fact that they're chasing someone trying to pull off the Longest Beer Run in History. Meanwhile, Bandit is dumbfounded by Justice's doggedness because Carrie doesn't immediately reveal that it was Justice's kid that she left at the altar.

So, those are the bones of Smokey and the Bandit. A cross-Dixie chase occurs, hijinks ensue, and it's just an all-around good

I say this as a compliment and with nothing but adoration for this film: I have the impression that the entire idea behind Smokey and the Bandit was simply to find a cool guy (in this case, Reynolds) and have them do something cool (drive a cool car while wearing a cool hat). The plot, as fun as it is, feels secondary to the sheer spectacle of the action and having a star at the center of it all. At the end of the day, you gotta give the people what they want, and what they want is to see Bandit pull some sweet 180 turns and maybe do a burnout or two. Toss in Field as a charming love interest, Reed as a wisecracking sidekick, and a slew of delightful oddballs to create a rich tapestry of characters and personalities, and boom, you've got a certified hit on your hands. What's the movie actually about? What are they doing, and why? Who cares? Did you see the part where Bandit jumped a dismantled bridge? That ruled!

Apparently, a prereguisite to be a truck driver in the 1970s was to have a quick wit. The movie is nonstop guips and banter. and for some reason it's at least 15% more effective when it's delivered via trucker-speak over CB radio. Another reason why Smokey and the Bandit rips: roughly half of the characters have an awesome handle. Case in point, a guy driving a hearse is called "The Grave Robber." I'll repeat that: the hearse guy is called The Grave Robber. That unequivocally rocks! Another trucker goes by "Silver-Tongued Devil"; also awesome, even if it seems like he might've given that handle to himself. If you've ever seen Smokey and the Bandit, you've probably put some thought into what your handle would be. I never had a true nickname growing up (people call me "Jay" for short, which doesn't really count), and I'm kind of thankful for that: back in the day, if my friends had taken it upon themselves to give me a moniker, they almost cerand horrifying to hear said in public. But, if I did have a handle, I'd like it to be a tribute to my Wisconsin roots. Maybe Badger? Or Brewer? Cheese? We'll workshop it.

While it's a blast watching Bandit, Snowman, and Carrie be a trio of rule-of-law-disrespecting jokesters, it's Gleason who steals the movie as Justice. Our three protagonists are having a grand old time as they traverse the back roads of the American South; meanwhile, Justice is perpetually irritated, not only by Bandit, but also by Junior and pretty much every other person he comes into contact with over the course of the severalhundred-mile pursuit, and it's absolutely hysterical. If someone's not saying something stupid or annoying to him, they're contributing to the destruction of his police cruiser - a topnotch visual bit is how his car starts out in pristine shape, but as the movie goes along, it gets more and more demolished until it's barely even recognizable as an automobile by the time the credits roll. What Justice endures emotionally isn't dissimilar. Gleason captures the essence of an old Southern blowhard's browbeaten exasperation in such a distinctly funny way that I find it hard to compare to anything else. The man is on an all-time heater for the entire movie, chewing up scenery every chance he gets. Everything about Gleason's performance his line deliveries, his tim-

> Someday, when aliens land on Earth and demand to see our species' most acclaimed and cherished works of art, will the powers that be consider showing them Smokey and the Bandit? Probably not. But should they? Maybe! Look, I won't pretend to know what an extraterrestrial could learn about humanity from staring at the Mona Lisa or reading The Grapes of Wrath, but what I can tell you is that if they want to get an idea about what it means to be cool in America, then Smokey and the Bandit is a key text. And, on top of that, it's one of mankind's most inspirational stories: In the end, despite the odds, they do what they say can't be life go out of something so innocent and delicate. but headlines tell us that birds are in global decline due to habitat loss, climate change, and more. Each small life counts toward the whole.

Now that warm days are turning even window washing and yardwork into attractive tasks because they give us excuses to get outside, it's a good time to think about making your windows better for birds.

Window screens that go on the outside of the glass are one of the best tools for preventing collisions. Not only do they break up the reflection, they also act as a safety net. If your windows didn't come with bug screens, you can use bird netting from a garden store (meant to keep robins out of your strawberries) instead. Just make sure to pull the netting taut like a trampoline, and keep it at least 3 inches off the window so the hirds don't bottom out

A purely visual grid can also work well. Using tape, soap, tempera paint. or paint pens, you can add designs to your windows that make the glass visible to birds. If you're feeling artistic, an intricate doodle would do the trick.

Otherwise, using a level and a yardstick, you can simply draw lines. The key is to make the spaces between the lines small enough that birds don't try to squeak through. For best results, vertical lines should be no more than 4 inches apart, and horizontal lines no more than 2 inches apart. If your casualties include hummingbirds, then use the 2-inch measure all around.

While not practical for everyone, you could make the designs permanent by etching or sandblasting them directly onto the glass. If you'd rather use decals, they need to be just as densely spaced as the grid in order to be effective. A company called CollidEscape makes grids of dots and one-way transparent film that can do the job. But those single, elegant hawk silhouettes have been shown not to work. Likewise, past recommendations about how to safely space bird feeders away from windows haven't stood up to test-

You can also combine the ideas of a grid and a screen and make "Zen Curtains." Basically a grid made of cords; they hang down over the glass on the outside of the window. They can be easier to install than paint, longer lasting, and can be aesthetically pleasing. I've seen them made from sparkly string with tiny mirrors attached, and the effect was delightful! A simple internet search will turn up both commercial and DIY versions. Not every window or every homeowner can accommodate these ideal though. modifications, Using a simpler option, or a combination of techniques, is still helpful. At the Museum, we often tape a single length of curling ribbon at the top center of each window. As the ribbon blows and bounces in the breeze, it helps to deter birds. Awnings, external sunshades, and shutters can also minimize reflections. Having flowers and shrubs at the base of windows can encourage birds to dive in for shelter instead of trying to fly through to escape from a predator.

Making changes indoors can have an impact, too. Blinds, shades, or even sheer curtains on large windows change the reflection quite effectively. And my favorite recommendation is one of the easiest: letting your windows stay slightly dirty can cut down on the realism of the reflection.

Recent research found a positive relationship between the diversity of bird species in a neighborhood and the life satisfaction of people who live there. Add that to the reduction in those sickening thuds, and bird-proofing our windows feels like a great way to increase happiness this spring.

Golf: Hatchets brave chilly temps, wind at Reedsburg meet

FOR THE TOMAHAWK LEADER

REEDSBURG – The Tomahawk Hatchet golf team traveled to Reedsburg for a meet on Friday, April 19, where they placed 14th out of 24 teams.

The Tomahawk golfers ended the day with a team score of 360. The top three teams on the day were Holmen (318), Lodi (325) and La Crosse Central-Logan (326).

Sawyer Hanna and Austin Lamer were the Hatchets' top golfers, each ending with a score of 86. Carson Childers (93), Owen Dickrell (95) and Caiden Reichelt (96) rounded out the Tomahawk scorers.

Coach Garth Gerstenberger said it was 42 degrees with winds of 20-plus miles per hour during the meet.

"We hit the ball well off of the tee today," Gerstenberger stated after the meet. "We didn't chip as well as we would have liked to. Overall, it was a good day against some tough competition."

All five Hatchets recorded a birdie, Gerstenberger noted.
