A symbol of change

Members of the From Mourning to Hope and HAYLOS (Hope After Your Loved One's Suicide) support groups at Central Church released butterflies last Thursday, July 11, in a ceremony as a way to remember and honor loved ones who have died by suicide, natural or unknown causes. A total of 50 butterflies were released — a mix of monarchs, painted ladies and swallowtails — in honor of the lives lost to suicide so far this year in Brown County and in acknowledgement of the deaths which will happen as the year goes on. The butterflies serve as a symbol of change, transformation and beauty for those working through grief.

PACK program creates bond between officers, local youth

BY GRACELYN GIESE
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

DE PERE – This summer, De Pere City Police Department officers have been taking time out of their schedules to spend quality time with the local children.

Through the Police and City Kids (PACK) Program officers and children have created a bond.

The PACK program began in summer of 2015 to “bring kids in the community closer to law enforcement and bridge the gap between us,” explained Officer Joe Johnson.

By giving local kids an opportunity to engage with police men and women, the officers hoped children would learn that “police are human beings” and that “it is okay to talk to us and not be scared.”

Oneida Casino marks three decades in local entertainment

BY PRESS TIMES STAFF

ONEIDA NATION – The Oneida Casino will mark its 30-year anniversary of gaming entertainment in Green Bay July 26-28.

What began as a small bingo operation held in a local gymnasium has grown into a multi-location gaming entertainment business that includes slots, table games, poker, sports betting, dining and hotel.

From its beginning as a bingo hall, Oneida Casino has transformed into a gaming entertainment destination.

“Three decades ago, the Oneida Nation embarked on a journey to increase economic opportunity and growth for our people,” said Oneida Gaming General Manager Louise Cornelius. “Oneida Casino has far exceeded expectations, becoming a cornerstone of our Nation’s success and a significant contributor to the Green Bay economy. Over the years we are confident in estimating we’ve welcomed over 50 million customers through our doors. We venture to say, few if any businesses match that number.”

Oneida Casino management said that it takes pride in its partnerships in the community, fostering economic growth and supporting local businesses in Green Bay.

“Oneida Casino is a significant employer in the area, providing thousands of jobs with competitive wages and benefits. Located immediately across from an international airport and just off major highways, Oneida Casino and Oneida Hotel are truly a destination for travelers coming into this region,” the company said.

GREEN BAY – The First Evangelical Lutheran Church is hosted their annual Carillon concert this week, playing many different hymn songs throughout the city of Green Bay. Before the concert, a tour was offered showing the many unique glass window sets around the church and murals of biblical characters set up on the walls. The bells are inside of the tallest part of the church, with 47 bells in total. Each of the bells gives off their own unique sound to create the songs. Through this event, the community has an opportunity to learn more about Carillon bells. This Carillon bell is one out of the three sets in Wisconsin. The other bells are located at UW-Milwaukee and Marquette University — the only opportunity to hear the unique harmonies of the Carillon Bells. The Carillon bells have been set up at The First Evangelical Lutheran Church for over 50 years — first built in 1957 by a local

Green Bay family who had the idea of bringing these unique bells to their hometown. Mr. and Mrs. Otto Kaap donated funding toward the bells to honor their grandparents so they could be reminded of their grandparents' love every time the bells would play. The bells are not just played for the annual concert; they play every day through an automatic player at noon and 6 p.m. The First Evangelical Lutheran Church is located at 743 S. Monroe Avenue in Green Bay.

A women-led movement is pushing back against patriarchal attitudes

BY ZHEN WANG
WISCONSIN WATCH

NORTHERN WISCONSIN – Monica Lo stayed silent for years as the man she married abused her.

She said he punched and even choked her.

Lo said she didn't report the violence to law enforcement and lied to doctors about her injuries. She was taught to obey men and feared speaking out would bring her family shame.

"I didn't want anybody to know what's going on with me and my family," Lo told Wisconsin Watch.

The abuse escalated into a death threat along a highway in 1998, prompting Lo to wonder if she would survive or become yet another casualty of domestic violence.

Lo would ultimately escape the abuse and get back on her feet with help from The Women's Community, Inc., a nonprofit that serves domestic violence and trafficking survivors.

She would go on to earn a masters degree in social work before returning to help Hmong women through challenges like she faced.

Lo, who has spent the last six years as an advocate and program coordinator for The Women's Community, is among Hmong women pushing back against attitudes that prevent women from leaving violent relationships.

That includes offering safe housing, counseling and representation in mediation processes that precede a divorce sanctioned by Hmong leaders.

The women are also speaking out in an ongoing debate about the role patriarchal attitudes play in shaping potentially deadly scenarios.

Hmong residents, the largest Asian racial ethnic group in Wisconsin, make up just 1% of Wisconsin's population but have mourned a litany of killings linked to domestic abuse.

In an unofficial tally from news coverage and advocacy group reports, Wisconsin Watch counted 20 Wisconsin homicide cases since 1990 in which Hmong men have killed their intimate partners and, in some cases, additional women.

Those include 14 cases since 2005.

More recent victims include Mai Rue "Lily" Vang of Wausau.

Even with her parents' support, she struggled to leave a partner who reportedly abused her for years before killing her in March 2021.

Some Hmong men say blame for such violence should focus on individuals.

They bristle when advocates say old cultural attitudes play a role.

Those suggestions, some Hmong men say, stigmatize and divide Hmong communities that have remained tight-knit in Wisconsin since a generation arrived from refugee camps in Thailand after the Vietnam War.

To be sure, domestic violence is a national and statewide scourge that criminal justice and legal systems have struggled to address.

Ninety-six people of various backgrounds in Wisconsin died due to domestic violence in 2022, according to the advocacy nonprofit End Domestic Abuse.

But leaving abusive relationships can prove particularly challenging within traditional Hmong structures that value interdependence over independence, advocates say.

When families negotiate terms of a marriage or separation, cultural divorce can prove particularly messy.

"It takes individuals up to seven attempts to leave their abusers," said Cheeia Lo, executive director of the Green Bay-based domestic violence program Golden House. "And the number is a lot higher in the Hmong community. I would say almost double that."

Quantifying domestic violence difficult

How pervasive is domestic violence against Hmong women?

That's hard to measure, said Pa Thao, executive director of Black and Brown Womyn Power Coalition.

Hmong women often stay silent to avoid inflicting shame on themselves and their families.

Domestic violence survivors, regardless of ethnicity, often avoid speaking to law enforcement.

Just 52% of domestic violence victims who responded to the 2019 National Crime Victimization Survey said they reported the violence to police.

Thao's nonprofit runs a 24/7 Hmong-speaking helpline for survivors of domestic violence and their supporters.

It received 117 calls, most from within Wisconsin, between October 2022 and September 2023 alone.

Nearly two-thirds related to domestic violence at home, followed by 27% from service providers seeking consultation and 18% related to shelter and housing.

Those callers represent a tiny fraction of all who face domestic violence since many won't call, Thao said.

"In our community, it's really a taboo to talk about marital issues that are going on in the home and outside of the family structure."

Clan, family structures can complicate divorce

Hmong Americans organize themselves in an 18-clan structure — with clans recognizing a common ancestor.

Clans play a major role in family dynamics, including cultural marriage and divorce.

Hmong Americans traditionally choose spouses from outside their birth clans and families negotiate terms of cultural marriage or divorce.

A Hmong wife will traditionally join her husband's clan and family.

Such interdependence can make leaving an abusive relationship particularly challenging, Hmong advocates say.

Cultural divorce involves an agreement among clans and can include lengthy mediation sessions that prioritize keeping a couple together.

It took years for Monica Lo to contemplate her divorce, even as the abuse escalated, she said.

But within a year of experiencing the 1998 death threat along the highway, at age 25, she resolved to leave a marriage that started just after high school.

Her first step: phoning The Women's Community.

It helped her petition a court for a restraining order and offered temporary shelter and additional support to Lo and her son as she planned her next steps.

Lo said her father supported her and both of her parents agreed to help with child care, but finalizing the cultural divorce took time because it required her then-husband's clan to agree.

That happened only after three hours-long mediation sessions in which male clan leaders, she said, encouraged her to remain in the relationship before it became clear that the violence persisted.

Improving services for domestic violence survivors

Jane Graham Jennings, executive director of The Women's Community, remembers seeing Lo when she turned to the agency for help in 1999.

It was early in Jennings' tenure at the nonprofit and around its launch of culturally specific services for Hmong clients.

Leading that effort was the late Mao Khang, a fierce advocate for Hmong women facing domestic violence.

Initially, when clients would ask The Women's Community staff to explain to their husbands the legal ramifications of abusive behavior, Jennings would decline — saying her organization served victims and didn't talk to those who harm them.

Khang changed that mindset, Jennings said.

"We don't decide what victims need," Jennings said. "They tell us what they need, and we figure it out."

Outraged in the mid-2000s after a series of domestic violence-related homicides of Hmong women in Wisconsin, Khang challenged the clan system to change its treatment of survivors.

Making mediation more inclusive

Khang helped The Women's Community set up its own mediation services for clients seeking some clan involvement in a cultural divorce.

That process brings together leaders from each spouse's clan and immediate family.

The goal is to respect each side's wishes.

It's unlike traditional mediation, which primarily aims to keep couples together and tends to take longer.

When mediation results in a divorce, the nonprofit may bring in a family law attorney to guide each party through legal requirements.

This type of mediation has shown promise, Jennings said, with clan leaders more likely to grant cultural divorces, allowing women to move on. But she acknowledged fewer couples are seeking mediation since Khang died of liver cancer in 2022.

Nao Shoua Xiong, a military veteran, is among three clan leaders who have collaborated with The Women's Community in mediation.

He said he has mediated nearly 200 cases involving a cultural divorce since 2000.

Those include about 20 cases in collaboration with the nonprofit.

Xiong said he urges spouses to stay faithful, end extramarital relationships and respect their clans. Xiong said mediation helps de-escalate abuse and violence.

He often advises husbands to consider the impacts of their actions on children as well.

When violence persists in extreme cases, he said, mediation stops.

"That's it. There's no negotiations," he said in Hmong as Wisconsin Watch interviewed him through a translator. "They have to go and do it the legal way."

Xiong said roughly half of today's Hmong couples — and they tend to be younger — will bypass the clan system and go straight to the courthouse for divorce.

Xiong is among those who don't see domestic violence as structural within Hmong communities.

"It's not a community problem. It's an individual problem," he said. "It's an issue where everybody is responsible for their own actions."

Advocates who serve Hmong women disagree, saying perpetrators may include men who hold sway and are supposed to act as moral compasses.

Remembering Lily Vang

Mediation didn't save Lily Vang from her partner Umberto Lo.

Lo murdered the 30-year-old nail technician following multiple instances in which police responded to domestic abuse complaints.

That included one complaint when Vang was five months pregnant in April 2020.

Vang told a responding officer that Lo had sworn at her and shoved her.

Police arrested Lo, who faced charges of disorderly conduct with domestic abuse and repeater enhancements.

He was released after posting a $1,500 bond and ordered

St. Joseph's Orphanage: A roof over their heads

BY KRIS LEONHARDT
EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

The 1909 "White House Conference on the Care of Dependent Children" initiated by President Theodore Roosevelt brought together social workers, educators, juvenile court judges and other civic leaders in opposition to the institutionalization of neglected and orphaned children.

The conference led to the creation of the Children's Bureau, the widows' pension movement and the growth of adoption agencies.

"At the 1930 White House Conference on Child Health and Protection, Home Folks, a long-time critic of orphanages, reported that 220,000 needy children remained in 'their own homes,' thanks to state mother's pensions; these allowed women to care for their children at home rather than place them in orphanages. At long last, folks hoped, professional social workers were able to implement the 'fundamental principles of social work' articulated at the 1909 White House Conference on Dependent Children: most significantly, 'home life is the highest and finest product of civilization....Except in unusual circumstances, the home should not be broken up for reasons of poverty.' But the nation had already descended into the Great Depression, an 'unusual circumstance' that devastated families and moved thousands of children into foster homes and orphanages," wrote Marian J. Morton in "Surviving the Great Depression" for John Carroll University.

One of those children affected by "unusual circumstances" was June Muller, now 91 and living in the Green Bay area.

"I was about 12 years old when my sister and I were placed in the orphanage because my mother couldn't take care of us and nobody else in their family," recalled Muller, whose father had died young from cancer.

Muller and her sister, JoAnn, were born in Illinois, but after their dad's passing, their mother moved them to Wisconsin where she hoped that the girls' grandmother could assist.

"And she couldn't take care of us; so, she put us in the orphanage to have a place to keep until she could find a job and an apartment," Muller added.

"We were away from our mother and we were kept being told that my mother was coming to get us," Muller said.

"We had to put up with the rules and regulations; it was run by nuns and priests.

"There were a lot of other kids that were running away that had no place to go that were also placed in the orphanage.

"We all had chores to do, and we all had like serial numbers in our clothes so they knew who we were, and we all went to church every day.

"The orphanage wasn't the sweetest place to be, believe me. It was the place that took care of us, taught us things; we went to school there.

"We were all there for different reasons."

Even after a year, when their mother was back on her feet she still needed to prove her stability before the girls were returned to her custody.

"My mother worked hard to win us back," Muller added.

Bea Seidl recalled a cold day in 1942 as she was deposited at the St. Joseph's Orphanage with no explanation as to why her mother lost custody of her and her siblings.

"Sister Edythe closed the door, pulled the chair to the room's center and snapped her fingers at me, indicating I was to sit down. I thought otherwise and almost made it to the door before the nun caught me by the arm and forced me into the chair. Producing a pair of scissors, she cut my hair with no thought to any style. It fell to the floor in ragged bunches," she recalled in her book Orphan Doors.

"Sister Edythe undressed me and tossed my new dress and shoes away as if they were rags. Before I could object, the nun motioned me into a shower where she proceeded to scrub me from head to toes.

"Out of the shower, I sneezed as she raked a powdery substance through what remained of my hair."

Seidl spent eight years with what is described as stern nuns, rigid regimens and scant tenderness.

But as more and more national reform was instituted and the Depression subsided, the number of institutionalized children declined.

not to contact Vang. Less than a year later, Vang was found dead on the floor of her apartment.

A jury last January found Lo guilty of first-degree intentional homicide.

In May, a circuit court judge sentenced him to life without extended supervision.

Feanna Vang, Lily's youngest sister, wishes she had more strongly urged Lily to leave the relationship.

Feanna said Lily would confide in her, saying the relationships provided some sense of security.

At The Women's Community, Monica Lo closely followed the case.

She said Lily tried hard to exit the relationship, even seeking clan mediation, but her partner refused to cooperate.

Lo said Lily's death illustrates the challenge many younger Hmong American face in adapting to American cultural and legal norms that frown upon abuse while maintaining some patriarchal ideas.

To honor Lily, Feanna, who in May graduated from UW-Madison after majoring in psychology, dreams of opening a mental health clinic with an in-house nail salon to allow clients to express themselves freely.

Monica Lo aims to build upon Khang's legacy, challenging patriarchal views while remaining proud of her Hmong heritage.

Both are possible, she said. She is optimistic that younger generations will strike that balance.

She's encouraging her 29-year-old son to join a movement that requires buy-in from men to succeed.

"It's your generation that will have to try to change us more," she said. "It's gonna take another generation, two or three generations."

Lambeau: The passing game

BY KRIS LEONHARDT

Curly Lambeau's partial year at Notre Dame provided him with an "education" that would prove important to the early success of the Green Bay Packers.

Though there for just a short time, it was long enough for him to grasp the offensive system style of Notre Dame Coach Knute Rockne, commonly referred to as the "Notre Dame Box," one of the three primary offenses of the 1920s, along with the single-wing and short-punt formations.

In the Box, players lined up in a straight T formation then shifted to a box formation, which resembled a parallelogram.

The formation differed from the typical single-wing formation in that there was no featured tailback or any featured back.

In Lambeau's early years, the ball could be snapped to any of four backs.

Later, any of three backs would receive the snap.

That was why Lambeau placed a high priority on finding versatile backs.

In the 26 league seasons that Lambeau ran Rockne's system, his left halfback, right halfback and quarterback all served as primary passers at different times.

His best play callers were Red Dunn, who played quarterback from 1927-31, and Joe Laws, who played mostly right halfback from 1934-45.

One of Lambeau's greatest strengths as a coach was adapting his offense to his personnel.

The formation also fit right into Lambeau's preferred use of passing.

In his youth, the passing game allowed Lambeau to be the star of the Packers until a knee injury curtailed his career in 1925.

During his playing days prior to that, Lambeau did nearly all the passing in the right halfback position.

Even with rules making it difficult to implement the forward pass, particularly before 1933, under Lambeau's coaching the Packers became a team that could use it at any time from any place on the field.

Curly Lambeau draws out a play for his team.

The use of the passing game with Red Dunn at quarterback was a crucial tactic in obtaining championships in 1929, 1930 and 1931.

Like Rockne, Lambeau used the punting game with Verne Lewellen to dictate field position.

But the Packers basically had the most prolific passing game in the NFL, starting with their first season in 1921.

Cal Hubbard, who played tackle during those championship years, recounted Lambeau's football IQ in those early years in Ralph Hickok's Vagabound Halfback: The Saga of Johnny Blood McNally.

"To be frank, Curly re-drawed it. He'd have impossible blocking assignments, or the play would just take too long to develop, the defense would mess it up before it got going," he said.

Hubbard added that Johnny Blood often became the spokesperson for the players, as he was one of the few people willing to speak up to Lambeau at that time.

But Lambeau's visionary style still proved significant to the team's success.

"Lambeau was the first pass-minded coach in the NFL, and his teams were like their leader: impatient and explosive. An excellent passer in his own right, Curly flew in the face of common practice," the NFL Hall of Fame website said of Lambeau.

ally didn't know all that much about football. After all, he spent just that one year at Notre Dame — how much did he learn? Most of us knew more because we spent more time learning, four years of college and then, for most of us, some professional experience too. Why, sometimes Curly would design a new play, draw it up on the blackboard, and we just knew it wouldn't work the way he

Ashwaubenon School Board prepares 2024-25 budget High school to unveil AHS Athletic Hall of Fame

BY GRACELYN GIESE
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

ASHWAUBENON – On Wednesday, July 10, the Ashwaubenon School Board held its annual meeting, budget hearing and board meeting.

The board began the budget hearing with a budget presentation from Ashwaubenon Assistant Superintendent of Schools Keith Lucius.

Lucius explained how the district creates their budget, which includes the state budget variables, staffing levels and student counts.

While rates of resident students have been declining, an influx of open enrollment students have helped to offset the difference.

These factors play into the revenue limit, which is "the maximum amount of revenue that may be raised through state general aid and property tax for General, Non-Referendum Debt and Capital Expansion Funds."

For the School District of Ashwaubenon, operations are 37% state aid funded and 63% property tax levy funded.

This is due to high property values within Ashwaubenon.

This also affects the mill rate on property taxes, which is estimated at $6.897 per $1,000 of property value.

This is a small decrease from last year's $6.95 mill rate and state equalized mill rate of $7.18.

The 2024-25 school year has a revenue limit of $23,610,650, which is a net increase of $1,981,727 from the 2022-23 school year.

Still, with a referendum reduction of $1,000,000, the school district will be creating a reduction of $981,727.

"We did exactly what we promised to do and will continue to do so," School Superintendent Kurt Weyers said.

"It is important to note that these amounts are not set and are still estimates.

The board then moved into the annual meeting, beginning with a presentation on the Ashwaubenon School District Strategic Plan by Brian Anderson.

The main pillars each individual school will focus on are "Safe, Inclusive Learning Environments" and "High Expectations for All."

They were noted as "long term goals" that will "allow [the school district] to remain focused on high leverage tasks over the coming years."

One example of implementation that will develop with students throughout the years is the Career and Community Readiness Skills courses.

As a part of Academic and Career Planning, standards will be set for students grades six through 12 and graded each quarter on their ability to set and achieve goals.

This will help students build a career plan by the time they graduate.

Remuneration for school board members was the next item on the agenda.

The board took a 4% pay raise, which was the same rate of increase as the staff members.

This set payments at $5,427.96 for the president and $4,669.32 for the other members.

The last meeting of the night was the regularly scheduled monthly board meeting.

The meeting began with the Superintendent's Report, where Weyers congratulated Thea Kral on being named the 2023-24 Gatorade Wisconsin Girls Track & Field Player of the Year.

Afterwards, Activities Director Nick Senger moved into more athletic news.

Ashwaubenon High School will soon be unveiling their AHS Athletic Hall of Fame.

The inaugural class was selected by seven committee members from accomplished athletes and coaches between 1965-2000.

The inductees will be recognized on a digital board display, plaques in the fieldhouse lobby and at the induction event on Aug. 29.

The Ashwaubenon School Board will hold their next meeting on Wednesday, Aug. 14, at 6:30 p.m. in the District Office at 1055 Griffiths Lane in Ashwaubenon.

Suamico Village Board looks at relationship with historical society

BY GRACELYN GIESE
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

SUAMICO – During its first July meeting, the Suamico Village Board reviewed the Howard-Suamico Historical Society lease and Memorandum of Understanding.

This proposal was brought forward due to continuous complaints and a call for the reexamination of the 99-year lease granted to the historical society by the village of Suamico in 2011.

After the board discussed the "absence of cooperation" between the parties, a motion was passed to open the floor to public comment.

Neighbors of the historical society, Ruth and Tom Lund and Linda and Grailing Jones voiced their grievances; this included the usage of the barn as a party rental space, parked cars and event attendees crossing property lines, violations of the noise ordinance and complications working with a historical society representative.

Ken Calewarts, attorney of the Howard-Suamico Historical Society, spoke for the group.

The village board was asked for time for the society to review documentation and speak directly to those residing on neighboring properties who voiced concerns.

The Howard-Suamico Historical Society was granted an opportunity to speak with its neighbors and resolve things together before any documentation is altered.

Sanitary Sewer Facilities Needs Study

The board meeting was closed with public works and utility items; this included approving a resolution to accept the Sanitary Sewer Facilities Needs Study.

The study proposed an expansion of sanitary systems towards Lineville Road.

Bay Port music teacher Ashley Siegrist to be honored by Barry Manilow

HOWARD/SUAMICO – Barry Manilow has announced that Bay Port High School teacher Ashley Siegrist is the winner of his Manilow Music Project Teacher Award in Green Bay and will receive a $10,000 grant from the Manilow Fund.

The Manilow Music Project Award contest is part of Manilow's "Last, Last Tour" and was created to support high school music teachers and bands throughout the US.

Ten local high schools in each tour city submitted the names of their favorite music teachers and then voted to select the winner.

The winning high school, Bay Port High School, will receive $5,000 in new band instruments for their school band and the winning teacher, Ashley Siegrist, will receive another $5,000 grant.

Manilow launched the Manilow Music Project in response to a friend's request for a saxophone for his high school daughter.

Manilow was surprised to discover that most public schools had suffered considerable budget cuts in their school music programs and that high school music teachers were taking part time jobs just to raise the money to buy new drum sticks or a used trumpet so kids could play in the band.

With no staff and all volunteers from the community and Manilow's management company, the Manilow Music Project has gifted more than $10 million in instruments and scholarships to high school and college music students throughout the United States.

Details on the Manilow Music Project are online at manilowmusicproject.org

Allouez receives grant for work on Libal Street

BY JANELLE FISHER
CITY PAGES EDITOR

ALLOUEZ – The Allouez Village Board voted to accept a Surface Transportation Block Grant which will provide federal funding up to 80% for construction costs on the resurfacing of Libal St. from LeBrun St. to Hoffman Rd.

The estimated construction cost, including construction inspection, for the project is $1,424,100.

The grant will provide federal funding to a limit of $1,139,280 with the village being responsible for the remaining 20% and any additional funds needed.

The proposed street project, which is currently scheduled for 2028, will include resurfacing the existing pavement, spot repair of defective curb and gutter sidewalk, upgrading curb ramps to ADA standards, pavement marking and signing and spot repair of storm sewer pipe and structures.

Additionally, the project will improve pedestrian and bicycle facilities in the area by filling in the sidewalk gap along the east side of Libal St. and adding marked bike lanes.

In other news, Allouez has also begun the process of updating its bicycle and pedestrian plan, which aims to establish goals and objectives to ensure a connected, safe and accessible bicycle and pedestrian transportation system throughout the village.

As a part of the update, a survey has been opened to collect input that will help identify bicycle and pedestrian needs, issues and opportunities throughout the village.

"If you want input on where we have sidewalks and how many sidewalks and bike lanes and pedestrian crosswalks, this is the time to do it," Village President Jim Rafter said. "We look forward to everyone's comments and input."

The survey will be available through Sunday, July 21, at <https://arcg.is/r1aKG0> and at Village Hall.

Visit Detroit, Detroit Sports Commission release Draft impact numbers

DETROIT – On July 11, Visit Detroit and the Detroit Sports Commission released that the 2024 NFL Draft generated a $213.6 million economic impact for the city of Detroit and region, including $161.3 million from visitors coming to southeast Michigan.

The comprehensive study, developed by Dr. Patrick Rishe, director of the Sports Business Program at Washington University in St. Louis, analyzed spending levels by both visiting fans and locals, as well as the NFL.

ty for years to come. I am also proud that more than 50 million people watched Detroit shine on national television, which will be critical for Michigan's long-term population and economic growth," said Claude Molinari, president and CEO of Visit Detroit and co-chair of the Detroit Local Organizing Committee (DLOC) for the NFL Draft.

In addition to the strong economic impact and record-setting attendance, the 2024 NFL Draft provided a unique opportunity to highlight Detroit's diverse community with inclusive activations and partnerships representative of the local cultures.

"The Detroit Local Organizing Committee (DLOC) for the 2024 NFL Draft has been committed to prioritizing business opportunities for minority-owned businesses in Detroit and the surrounding region since we began our strategic planning in 2022," said Alexis Wiley, founder of Moment Strategies and co-chair of the DLOC. # International Jugglers Association lights up the night at Leicht Park

By Justin Buchanan
Contributing Writer

As the sun started to set on July 12, the International Jugglers Association (IJA) began to set the stage for Fire Night, an annual tradition of the organization held this year at Leicht Memorial Park.

This event brought out participants and spectators from not only the Green Bay area, but also from Madison, Milwaukee and even the United Kingdom. Bringing people from all over the world, there was a variety of ages and personalities. Everybody came together to light up the night with fire juggling.

Many people arrived at Fire Night matching the theme of the origin of juggling, having on jokers, magicians and tricksters costumes as if they were in a medieval play, while others dressed up as ninjas, anime character's and even as superheroes — all adding to the excitement felt by the audience as they waited for the performances to begin.

Like a normal juggling routine, participants in Friday night's event came prepared with equipment including hula hoops, fans and more, but with the added element and challenge of fire.

"I have been waiting for an event like this for months," one participant said. "There aren't many times you get to show off your juggling skills while having your equipment on fire, it really puts you to the test."

Once the sun had gone down, the only light to be seen in Leicht Park was the orange, red and blue hues cast by the flames as the jugglers began their routines.

There was no end to the excitement and tricks the participants had, spinning their props around their bodies, holding them in their mouths and even juggling with their feet.

Duos and trios came onto the stage together, working in harmony to create a performance to remember.

Everyone had a chance to come and show off their talents and unique set of skills.

The entertainment seemed never ending as more and more people came to the stage to perform with five to seven people on the stage at once, all demonstrating their unquestionable passion for Juggling.

"This is what I love to do, others love sports, games and traveling but I love to juggle," a participant said. "When I am juggling everything is peaceful and I am focusing only on myself."

Inspired by that passion, audience members felt inspired to try their hand at juggling but quickly discovered it is not a skill that is easily learned.

"Juggling is easier than it looks, you just have to put your mind through difficult training and exercise, just as athletes go through practice and training," said one juggler. CP

BEACH BOYS MAKE STOP AT CAPITAL CREDIT UNION PARK

By Kris Leonhardt
Editor-in-chief

For over six decades, the music of the Beach Boys has conjured images of sun and surf to multiple generations of music lovers.

While their music has been associated with California culture, its hooks and lyrics transcend the boundaries of the Golden State, with visions of fun, bliss and love.

The band was formed in Hawthorne, Calif., in 1961, a suburb of Los Angeles, not far from the California coast where their family camped when they arrived in California.

The group's songs about sun and surf were a natural progression in their youth.

"Well, I grew up in a home with a grand piano, an organ and a harp," said Mike Love, who formed the band with his cousins — Wilson brothers Brian, Carl and Dennis — and friend, Al Jardine. But my mom was obsessed with opera. She loved opera music. She actually woke us up in the morning to go to school with her music, and as high as that would go on the record. If we played rock and roll even half as loud, it was too loud. We would get together for birthdays, Thanksgiving, Christmas, New Year's Eve, any special occasion, it was always about music. In fact, at Christmas time, we would literally rehearse our Christmas songs in the living room, and then the aunts and uncles and all the kids and friends would literally go around our neighborhood and Christmas carol. So it was always about music with the Wilsons and Loves."

The Wilson and Love's grandmother had nine children, which led to a large extended family.

"The one died in infancy and the other eight lived to — let's be generous and call it maturity," Love joked. "We have all kinds of uncles, cousins, all that kind of stuff. A radio station in Los Angeles had a feature where they played a lot of new songs on the radio; the one that got the most calls would become the 'Record of the week'... with all our nephews, aunts and uncles, friends and neighbors. We very handily won that contest in 1961. The song was called 'Surfin' and here we are six decades later."

The hit was on a small independent label which later declared bankruptcy.

They later signed with Capitol and recorded Surfin' Safari, the first of many hit albums.

The Surfin' Safari album cover was created at Paradise Cove — a place near Malibu, Calif. — where they returned to film their recent documentary with Disney +.

"And that was really neat because Brian and I sat next to each other and he remembered stuff from our high school days and I'd even forgotten and so there's long term memories in great shape physically, though he's challenged because we'll walk her to go to a wheelchair and all that stuff. He's not getting around very easily anymore, but his memory is fantastic. And we got a chance to sing some songs together," Love recalled.

Road to success

But six decades earlier, things looked a little different.

"We were touring in Minnesota and we're in a little place where people go for concerts — Lake Minnetonka, it was called — and there's this little building there which we had four sets a night," Love said. "When you start out that's what you do; you go to these ballrooms, armories and different places. My cousin Brian and I went outside and looked down the road and there were cars for about a mile down the road. You can see the lights they're still trying to come to the concert, but it was sold out and people were actually breaking the windows to get in. And I looked down the road and I said to Brian, 'This is what it must have been like for Elvis Presley when he started,' because we had no frame of reference."

And those two cousins were the perfect songwriting team.

"Unlike my cousin Brian who can sit at the piano and run down chord progressions of Four Freshmen songs, which is not easy. I was more into the lyrics and the hook because I was very much into literature and history and culture and languages. So that's me and that's when I came in handy when you're writing lyrics to songs," Love said. "Inside outside USA, Let's go surfing now everybody's learning how, all those kinds of things, you know, I learned a lot from Chuck Berry. He was one — 'I got on the city bus and found a vacant seat. I thought I saw my future bride walkin' up the street. I shouted to the driver 'Hey, conductor, you must slow down. I think I see her, please let me off this bus.' And I would go — 'Well she got her daddy's car and she cruised through the hamburger stand now. Seems she forgot all about the library like she told her old man now.' So it's like alliteration. I was in the language of poetry. I was the most well-read kid in grade school, junior high and high school. So it came in handy when it came time to partner with Brian creating these songs."

Across generations

"The most wonderful thing is seeing entire families show up to our concerts, you know, the grandparents, their kids and grandchildren. And sometimes there's four generations or sometimes the great grandparents are coming out. There'll be people in their 80s and beyond. And children, babies, five years old," Love explained. I think the secret ingredient is love. We love to get together and harmonize. And we're obsessed with the blend actually. We borrowed the blend from the Everly Brothers, they blended beautifully. And maybe it was a family connection; there certainly was with us. And so when we do our four-part harmonies — a lot of people do two-part harmonies or three harmonies, but not so many do four-part harmonies."

But, sometimes the words are as important as the harmonies.

Love recalled the making of "Good Vibrations" — one of his favorite groups of lyrics from the Beach Boys.

"There was psychedelic stuff going on in the West Coast in particular, and some in the East Coast, but California was full bore into all the psychedelic stuff. And so there was a Vietnam War going on and there were student demonstrations, there were integration issues. We all knew that stuff was going on. We all had draft numbers and draft cards and stuff," Love recalled. I just want to accentuate the positive because at the same time all that negativity was going on. There were people that were in the peace and love and flower power, and I just wanted to create a poem about a girl who was all into peace and love and harmony and nature, so that was the inspiration for 'Good Vibrations.' The track was amazing that my cousin Brian finally did after doing several different versions at different studios, but I handed him the lyrics to the song and he liked it. That song went to number one. In the fall of 1966, we were voted the No. 1 group in England; No. 2 being the Beatles. That was pretty amazing."

Today, the group continues to tour and share their songs of fun and sun, as Love said the audience keeps them going.

The Beach Boys appeared on stage at Capital Credit Union Park in Green Bay on July 11 with guests Dave Mason and John Stamos for the 79-stop The Beach Boys' Endless Summer Gold tour.

New sculpture coming to Mulva Cultural Center

For City Pages

Local social media has been buzzing with curiosity ever since a “big yellow dome” was installed on the patio at Mulva Cultural Center.

While some have speculated that it may be related to the current LEGO exhibit on display, that the yellow dome is the actual sculpture or that it’s meant to look like a Minion from Despicable Me, one thing is certain — “it must be something very exciting!”

While the Mulva Cultural Center isn’t ready to spoil the surprise and reveal exactly what is in the works just yet, they have revealed details about the artist behind the sculpture being created under the dome.

The sculpture, titled “The Curious Planet,” is a new work from Danish-Icelandic artist Olafur Eliasson, who is currently based in Berlin, Germany.

“The Curious Planet” has been in planning for over two years, generously supported by Jim and Miriam Mulva, who have been actively involved in its development, visiting Eliasson’s studio in Germany and engaging closely with him and his talented team.

What awaits us at Mulva Cultural Center is truly a unique opportunity to engage with artwork by a world-renowned artist.

Eliasson’s works explore the profound impact of art on the world. Born in 1967, Eliasson studied at the Royal Danish Academy of Fine Arts from 1989 to 1995, before establishing Studio Olafur Eliasson in Berlin.

The studio includes a diverse team of craftspeople, architects, researchers, administrators, cooks, programmers, art historians and specialized technicians.

On site in De Pere, the project is managed by three remarkable individuals.

Ilja Leda, from Eliasson’s studio, oversees design and ensures meticulous attention to detail to realize the artist’s vision.

Tillman Vanhóf supports Ilja in development and production, leveraging expertise in computer-aided design and 3D modeling for on-site installation.

Additionally, Hanko Stensland, owner of Danish company Struer Facader, brings extensive construction management expertise to the project. Stensland has collaborated on notable projects like the Opera and DR Huset in Copenhagen.

Situated on the terrace of the center, “The Curious Planet” will be on view starting from the end of August 2024.

The sculpture reflects the center’s vision by uniting the arts and sciences in a globe-shaped network of trails and pathways.

“It is tempting to see the world as a solid, relatively stable, unchanging sphere. It is an image that is so familiar as to be mundane. The truth is, however, that the world is constantly in motion and these movements are sometimes too fast to capture and sometimes too slow to comprehend. Water is constantly circulating through the oceans and rivers and into the atmosphere in weather patterns that unfold quickly and seemingly unpredictably. Not to mention the activities of humans and the migration of animals in herds and flocks. On the other extreme, the changes in climate, the ice ages and desertification; the movement of tectonic plates; the creation and destruction of mountain ranges all unfold over millennia. “The Curious Planet,” 2024, my new artwork for Mulva Cultural Center, envisions a globe of networks. Reminiscent of brain synapses, lava trails or ripple marks, these networks mirror the intricate web of connections that bind us together to our environments. The curious planet places faith in the recognition that everything is connected and constantly evolving,” said Eliasson of the project.

The curious planet consists of four layers of progressively more complex geometrical forms.

Expanding exponentially from the core, the globe contains several implied layers, each more complex than the last.

The emphasis of the work, however, lies not on this geometrical substructure, but on the root-like bronze crossbars that connect the layers, extending outwards from its heart.

Circular panes of blue glass float inside the structure, and irregular hexagonal fading mirrors form some of the faces of the outermost layer.

At night, when the work is illuminated from within, the combination of materials, angles and shapes conjures a diverse interplay of light, color and shadows.

For nearly three decades, Eliasson has explored the conditions that inform our perception in sculptures, installations, paintings, photographs and public projects.

“The Curious Planet” furthers Eliasson’s ambition to promote a greater awareness of the way we engage with and interpret the world. CP

Green Bay to receive public transportation funding

FOR THE PRESS TIMES

GREEN BAY – U.S. Senator Tammy Baldwin (D-WI) recently announced that the city of Appleton and the city of Green Bay will receive over $15 million to improve public transportation, invest in zero-emission buses and build a new transit storage and maintenance facility.

The investments, from the Federal Transit Administration's Grants for Buses and Bus Facilities program, are funded through the Bipartisan Infrastructure Law.

"High-quality public transportation helps reduce traffic and get people safely to work, school, and the grocery store," said Senator Baldwin.

"I fought hard to secure funding to upgrade our public transit, investing in zero-emission buses that reduce pollution, cut fuel costs, and keep riders across Northeast Wisconsin safe for years to come."

"I am extremely proud that the city's efforts to reduce our carbon footprint are receiving recognition and support from the federal government," said Green Bay Mayor Eric Genrich.

The city of Green Bay Transit System will receive $3,112,663 to replace diesel-powered buses with battery electric buses and charging equipment, improving safety and decreasing greenhouse gas emissions.

These efforts are expected to reduce maintenance costs as they bring Green Bay closer to reaching their goal of 100% clean energy by 2050.

The U.S. Department of Transportation's Federal Transit Administration Low and No Emission and Bus & Bus Facilities Grant Programs provide federal funding to support state and local efforts to buy or modernize buses, improve bus facilities, and support workforce development.

The Bipartisan Infrastructure Law provides $5.6 billion through 2026 for the Low-No Program and nearly $2 million for the Bus & Bus Facilities Grant Program.

Root invasion threatens home foundation

Dear Monty

BY RICHARD MONTGOMERY
SYNDICATED COLUMNIST

DEAR MONTY,

I bought a home 21 years ago near a city swimming pool.

The entrance to the pool has a driveway that runs along the side of my property.

About two years after I lived in my house, the local parks department planted three trees along the entrance driveway on the side of my property.

Now, those trees' roots are near my house's foundation.

The city's forestry division says they will monitor the trees and their roots.

This past weekend, I was looking at the roots, and one is right at my foundation, which is on a slab.

The person over forestry will not cut the trees down because they're alive and stated they are an asset to the community.

I live on a corner lot adjacent to the pool. The pool is only open June through the first two weeks in August.

How are the trees an asset to the community when the roots will damage my property?

I was told if I kill the roots and the trees die and do damage to my house,

I would be responsible. What can I do with tree roots growing in my yard and heading towards the foundation of my home?

Please advise.

MONTY'S ANSWER

The tree roots are a threat. Here are a few steps you can take to address the issue:

Document the problem

Take photos of the tree roots and their proximity to your foundation. Keep a record of your correspondence with the city's forestry division.

Get a professional assessment

Hire a certified arborist or a structural engineer to assess the potential damage the tree roots could cause to your foundation. Their report can help support your case when dealing with the city.

Explore root barrier options

Consult with the arborist about the possibility of installing root barriers to redirect the roots away from your foundation without harming the trees. This could be a compromise solution.

Seek legal advice

If the city is unwilling to act, consult with a local attorney specializing in property disputes. They can advise you on your rights and help you navigate the legal system to protect your property.

You can raise your concerns during public comment sessions at city council meetings. Your voice can help bring attention to the issue.

Consider mediation

If all else fails, propose mediation with the city to find a mutually agreeable solution. A neutral third party can help facilitate the discussion and reach a compromise.

A few additional thoughts

In a discussion with your attorney, ask what would happen if you cut the roots at your lot line and the trees died.

Could your damages be limited to the cost of replacing the trees with saplings the same size as the original saplings?

Municipalities often have wards or districts with elected or appointed representatives who attend to resident concerns.

Invite that individual to inspect the root invasion.

Frequently, such a visit will lead to the representative becoming an advocate who can convince the forestry leader to recant.

While the trees may provide some benefit to the community, you have a right to protect your property from damage.

Be persistent and explore all available options to find a resolution that addresses your concerns while minimizing harm to the trees, if possible.

PUBLISHER'S LETTER

Embracing Stoicism

Dear Reader,

In the hustle and bustle of our modern world, it is easy to feel overwhelmed by the pressures and challenges we face daily. However, the timeless wisdom of Stoicism, as articulated by great thinkers like Seneca, Cicero, and Marcus Aurelius, offers a path to inner peace and a meaningful life. By viewing each day as a separate life, practicing restraint and moderation, regulating our emotions, and seizing the opportunities life presents, we can transform our existence.

Seneca, one of the most prominent Stoic philosophers, teaches us to live each day as if it were a complete life. This concept encourages us to focus on the present moment, appreciating the here and now without being burdened by regrets of the past or anxieties about the future. By treating each day as a new beginning, we can cultivate a sense of gratitude and purpose, making the most of our time and experiences.

Cicero, renowned for his eloquence and philosophical insights, emphasized the importance of restraint and moderation in all aspects of life. He believed that true happiness comes from balance and self-control, not from excess or indulgence. By exercising moderation in our desires and actions, we can avoid the pitfalls of overindulgence and maintain a steady course towards a virtuous and fulfilling life.

Marcus Aurelius, the Stoic emperor, provides profound guidance on regulating our emotions. In his Meditations, he reflects on the importance of inner tranquility and emotional resilience. By understanding that our perceptions shape our reality, we can learn to manage our responses to external events. Practicing mindfulness and self-awareness allows us to maintain our composure and clarity of thought, even in the face of adversity.

Life is fleeting, and the Stoics remind us of the urgency to seize the opportunities it offers. Seneca, Cicero, and Marcus Aurelius all highlight the importance of taking initiative and making the most of our potential. This Stoic principle encourages us to act with purpose and determination, recognizing that our time is limited and each moment is precious.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Showing up

DEAR EDITOR,

In June, my son Benjamin Calderon passed away.

He had spent many years being homeless, and like many other homeless people, spent a lot of time riding the buses or just hanging out at the Metro Station.

During that time, he formed a friendship with the drivers, the staff and many others whom he liked to refer to as his "Metro family."

Even after being provided with an apartment, he was still in touch with his friends at the Metro whenever they were open.

Shortly after his passing, two of the drivers reached out with beautiful messages about Ben and how much he meant to them all.

A celebration of life was held for him and our family was surprised beyond belief that a group of drivers, staff and metro friends showed up to honor him and help to console us (and make us smile).

In 2012, Ben had the honor of being named the "Big Brother of the Year" for the state of Wisconsin.

A Metro employee had secured newspaper articles regarding this and presented us with a framed collection.

Wonderfully amazing.

I just want to publicly thank this group of people who took kindness to the next level.

No wonder Ben loved you!

DNR warns of contaminated private wells

BY THE WISCONSIN DEPARTMENT OF NATURAL RESOURCES

The Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources (DNR) encourages private well owners to consider testing their drinking water after significant rainfall and flooding.

Heavy rains, such as those that swept through much of northern Wisconsin, can impact drinking water quality.

Flood waters and runoff contain bacteria and other contaminants that can affect private water supplies and cause the spread of waterborne illness.

Wells located in pits, basements and low-lying areas are especially susceptible to contamination.

Well owners who experience flooding or observe changes to the taste, color or sediment levels in their water following heavy rainfall should assume their well is contaminated and take the following steps:

Stop drinking the water and find an alternate source of safe water.

Disinfect your well. This procedure is best done by a licensed well driller or pump installer with the expertise and equipment.

Before resuming water consumption, sample the well after pumping and disinfection to ensure its safety.

Even without obvious signs of flooding, a well can become contaminated.

The DNR's Recommendations for Private Wells Inundated by Flooding webpage provides information on how to test and disinfect a private well after a flood event.

Private well owners are encouraged to test their wells annually for bacteria and nitrates to ensure the water is safe to drink.

The DNR's Wells webpage provides more information on bacteriological contamination of drinking water wells and lists of licensed well drillers, pump installers and labs certified to analyze water samples.

For individuals who receive their drinking water from a public water supply, these systems are designed and operated to keep contaminants out.

If you have concerns about the safety of your community's drinking water, contact your public water supplier.

For those impacted by the recent severe weather, the DNR's Coping with Flooding webpage provides information on how to keep your family safe and minimize property damage during a flood.

The Wisconsin Department of Health Services also provides information and links to resources on its Flood Hazards and Recovery webpage.

SAVVY

or a PIN to access and can be difficult if not impossible to retrieve if someone is incapacitated or passes away.

Creating a digital will (also known as a digital estate plan) will help your loved ones access your electronic devices and online accounts more easily so they can manage your electronic affairs, according to your wishes, after you're gone.

This in turn will also protect your digital assets from hackers or fraud, which can happen to dormant accounts after you die.

How to write a digital will

Your first step in creating a digital will is to make an inventory list of your digital assets, which includes everything from hardware to email accounts. Here are a few categories to help kick-start your list:

- Electronic devices (computer, smartphone, tablet, external hard drive).
- Digital files (for photos, videos or documents)
- Financial accounts

(like bank and brokerage accounts, credit cards, cryptocurrency).

- Bill paying accounts (utilities, mortgage accounts)

- Social media accounts (like Facebook, Instagram, Twitter, LinkedIn).

- Email accounts (Gmail, Yahoo, Outlook, etc.)

- Cloud-storage accounts (like Google Cloud, iCloud, Dropbox, Microsoft OneDrive)

- Movie or music streaming services (like Netflix, Hulu, Spotify, Apple Music)

- Online purchasing accounts (like Venmo or PayPal)

- Subscription services (magazines, newspapers, Amazon Prime, etc.)

- Reward programs (travel, stores, etc.).

- Membership organizations (AARP, AAA, etc.).

When making your list, you'll need to include usernames, passwords, PINS, account numbers or security questions for accessing each account.

And provide instructions on how you want your assets managed after your death.

For example: Do you want certain accounts closed, archived or transferred? Do you want specific files or photos to be deleted or shared with loved ones? Do you want your social media profiles memorialized or deleted? Be clear and specific about your wishes.

You'll also need to appoint a digital executor that you trust to execute your wishes after you die.

From a legal perspective, you should know that most states have enacted the Revised Uniform Fiduciary Access to Digital Assets Act (RUFADAA), which legally recognizes digital estates.

This law gives your personal representative or executor legally protected access to your online accounts.

Once your digital will is written, store it with your other estate plan documents either in a fireproof safe or file cabinet at home, on your computer hard drive, with your estate planning attorney or online at a reputable digital estate planning service like Everplans.com or Clocr.com. But make sure your executor knows where it is and has access to it.

Also remember to keep your digital will updated regularly when you create any new digital accounts or change passwords.

Site of more state record trout and salmon catches than anywhere else on Lake Michigan, the Kewaunee/Door County Peninsula is producing some giant Chinooks this season.

After just the first three days of the 42nd annual Kewaunee/Door County Salmon Tournament, six 30-pound-plus "kings" were atop the leaderboard and 52 other 25-pound-plus whoppers weighed.

The 10-day event runs through noon Sunday and tickets can be purchased any time before you fish.

If the skies are clear and the winds allow, expect some anglers to fish all night as a full moon nears.

As of midday Monday, Lorie Combs Schmidt of Sturgeon Bay was in first place with a 41-inch, 33.97-pound trophy that hit a flasher/Howie Fly combo off the Bank Reef.

Clinton Meier of Elk River, Minnesota was in second with a 41-inch, 32.73-pounder caught aboard the Mad Russian, one of the Gail Force Sportfishing charter boats in Algoma. That fish also hit a flasher/fly combo.

Kewaunee produced the next two, fish of 31 and 30.96 pounds. Both of those hit spoons.

More than 220 20-pound-plus salmon were weighed the first three days. It seems likely that it will take a trophy of at least 25 pounds to get in on the final payout.

Anyone interested can keep up with the leaderboard daily at <https://www.facebook.com/kdsalmon2022>.

Asian carp update

Construction is set to begin on a project designed to protect the Great Lakes from invasive bighead, silver and black carp (often called "Asian" carp).

After years of studies, panning, engineering and design — and months of negotiations — a multi-state agreement was signed to partner with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to build a complex series of deterrents (sound, a flushing lock, and an electric barrier) to prevent upstream movement of invasive carp

The Brandon Road Interbasin Project on the Des Plaines river is located about 27 miles southwest of Chicago and two miles southwest of Joliet. It is about 286 miles above the confluence of the Illinois River with the Mississippi River.

Best binoculars?

Looking to purchase binoculars for birding and other wildlife watching? The options are nearly unlimited.

Since the quality of anything but the cheapest binoculars is pretty impressive these days, you'll need to consider your budget and what power and field of view you prefer.

Nikon, Nocs, Tasco, Celestron, Vortex and Bushnell are among the brands that'll do fine on a budget. If price isn't a concern, consider Zeiss, Swarovski, Leica or Steiner.

Compact binoculars with small objective lenses are rarely a good choice. Many birders recommend 8x42 binoculars for the right combination of magnification and field of view. Others prefer

Surrounded by the rest of his crew as well as first mate Kyle Gerbert and Capt. Riley Mancl, Minnesota angler Clinton Meier strained to hold a 32.73-pound Chinook he reeled in last weekend. The fish was caught late in the evening and sat on ice for about 14 hours before being weighed.

Upriver sturgeon tags

Anyone hoping to draw one of just 500 coveted tags for the upriver lakes spearing season on the Winnebago system need to apply by the Aug. 1 deadline.

A much higher success rate for sturgeon staging before the spring spawning run up the Wolf River makes lakes Poygan, Winneconne and Butte des Morts popular sites for those with limited time. The draw is based on a preference points system.

Tags are unlimited on the main lake, Winnebago.

There is an Oct. 31 purchase deadline for those.

Separate harvest caps are in place for each system, so there's no worry about overharvest.

The 2025 sturgeon spearing season opens Feb. 8.

Weekly water levels

As of July 12, Lake Michigan and Green Bay's water levels had increased four inches in the past month and were an inch higher than last year at this time. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers projected that levels were five inches above the 100-year average, but down 28 inches since the monthly record set in 2020.

Green Bay walleye fishing on upswing

Green Bay walleye fishing is slowly on an upswing, with good days and tough days still the rule and not the exception. The mud-trolling bite has been the most inconsistent. Fish are definitely there, following schools of alewife and perch, but they're not always cooperating. The best presentation has been trolling No. 7 flicker or No. 9 flicker minnows in shades of purple on 2 oz. snap weights behind planer boards. Spinner/crawler harnesses are taking fish too. The best approach is to locate fish first with sonar, then set up to run baits slightly above the fish. Jig fishermen are finding walleyes on rocks, with the areas of Chaudior's Dock, North-South Reef, Macco's Reef, Volks Reef, Bayshore and Vincent Point putting out some fish. Ripper minnows, shiver minnows, jig/crawler and spoons are all working at times. Pulling bottom bouncers with slow death rigs also caught some fish. The walleye in all areas are certainly moody because of the bait that is lingering around the bay. Perch fishing has been good, with areas around Oconto and Bayshore seeing good catches. Minnows, hellgrammites and crawler pieces were best baits. Musky fishing still slow, give it another week and you will do fine. If you go, please be safe and take a kid fishing.

Nicolet NATIONAL BANK PRESENTS Senior Spotlight

Aidan Burich, Notre Dame Academy, tennis

Parents' names: Jeff Burich, Mary Burich
Siblings: None
Instagram: @a_burich_tree
Position or events: 1 Doubles
Career highlight: The best part of my tennis career this season was when my partner and I got second in the doubles individual State Tournament.

At what age did you start playing your main sport?

Six years old.

Who introduced you to the sport?

My parents started me in tennis lessons.

Has this always been your favorite sport?

Yes. Although I have played many sports over the years, I have always been drawn to tennis.

How has balancing academics and athletics been different for you from your freshman year to your senior year?

I have been lucky that every year since freshman year I have been able to keep up a solid balance between academics and athletics. Although it looked different every year I was able to consistently find this balance.

What is your favorite part about this sport? What about it has caused you to stick with it for this long?

I like tennis because it is as much of a team game as an individual sport. As a player on the team you completely control your role on the team. However, that is only 1/7th of the team results. This makes you focus not only on yourself and your own results but also forces teamwork and toughness as a tennis team.

Is there a professional athlete you look up to? If so, who?

Federer has always been an inspiration because of how he handles himself on the court mentally. His level head is something all tennis players should strive for.

What would you say is your biggest asset on the court?

My serve is by far the best part of my game and is my biggest asset when I step on the court.

What has been your most memorable experience in high school sports so far?

One of my most memorable matches in high school tennis was my first match sophomore year. It was my first 1 doubles match. My partner and I lost the first set 0-6. We then rallied back and somehow won the second set 6-0. We finished the comeback by winning in the tiebreaker 10-8. It definitely was one of the weirdest matches I've played.

How does it feel as a senior, to look back throughout high school and see your growth (as a person and athlete)?

The biggest growth I see in myself is my motivation and commitment. When I compare my freshman and sophomore years to my junior and senior year there is so much more focus and commitment to my academics and sports. This caused me to have the success I did in tennis and school. It also showed me the value of working hard and gave me the tools to succeed in the future.

Do you have any pre-match rituals/routines/superstitions?

Usually you can catch me playing games on my phone.

Do you take any extra steps to prepare for a big match/game/meet, outside of regular practices?

I'll talk to Matty Gugliuzza because I know he will tell me everything I have to do to prepare for a big match.

Any memorable coaches or teammates you'd like to give a shout out to?

Definitely want to shout out Matty Gugliuzza. Matty was my doubles partner this year. Matty was great at scouting our competition and always had us ready for our next match. As a team, Matty and I were able to finish second in individual state.

Any hobbies outside of sports?

I enjoy playing pickleball, fishing and just being outdoors.

Favorite song?
 "Lose Yourself," by Eminem.

Sports drinks like Gatorade and Powerade or water?

My favorite Gatorade is G2 Raspberry Lemonade.

What is a fun fact about yourself?

I am an Eagle Scout.

Future Plans? (college, major, career, etc.)

I plan on attending UW-Madison in the fall and majoring in biomedical engineering.

of the game that did what he did."

In 1995, Coach Buss became the first coach to be inducted into the Phoenix Hall of Fame.

Wicks said that Coach Buss's impact on the players he coached during his time at UW-Green Bay was profound and is echoed throughout the program even today.

"When I was in Green Bay, I would call Coach Buss maybe once every two to three weeks to just check in and talk. He's been a basketball junkie his whole life and when you are a coach you're a coach forever," said Wicks.

"Just because you stop coaching doesn't mean you're done being a coach. I think that's what makes great coaches, great mentors, great teachers and great leaders. It's a lifelong commitment to the relationships and to the learning process. You're always searching for that new way to evolve."

According to Wicks, Coach Buss was a devoted Phoenix through and through and cared deeply about every player he interacted with on and off the court.

"Every time I talked to Coach Buss he would tell me a story about a great player or a time he was coaching and I would always take a lesson from that message or that conversation we would have. Two weeks ago I was out in Laramie and I was returning phone calls and I wanted to make sure I called Coach Buss because he is a special guy for me. I still have his bobblehead. His bobblehead stays with me in my office," said Wicks of his respect and admiration of the legendary coach.

to one of the greatest turnaround seasons in NCAA DI history, Wicks said that he had the opportunity to see first-hand the ways that Coach Buss influenced everyone in Phoenix Athletics.

"The lasting impact is never on the wins or the record. It's on the men. It's on those you came in contact with. Every single player to play for Coach Buss has unbelievable things to say about how he challenged them and changed their lives," said Wicks.

"I know the mark of a great coach by the type of men that I interact with that he led. Tom Anderson, Jerry Blackwell, Paul Anderson, Ron Ripley — all the Green Bay G.O.A.T.s — they are everyday examples of his impact on the greater Green Bay area."

Wicks said that everything Coach Buss did was for the betterment of the Phoenix and the Green Bay community.

"Back in the day, he recruited local legends and all those men that he coached during that time are, for the most part, still in the area. His impact is felt in the community every single day by those guys that are out there, keeping his legacy alive," said Wicks.

Outside of basketball, Wicks said that he believes Coach Buss truly lived his life in a way that he can be proud of the impact he has left behind.

"None of us get out alive, so it's what you do with your time on this Earth that matters. For anybody that thinks it doesn't, they're sorely mistaken. I think he lived that and instilled that into the hearts of his players that stayed close to the Green Bay area," said Wicks.

"That's what made Green Bay special for me. There was so much belief and love and passion for the Phoenix. That started with the man who started the program — Dave Buss."

grow and see the same level of success in the future. "It's a treasure. If someone's not been there (Packers Hall of Fame), they have to go. The Pro Football Hall of Fame — I've been there and it's very, very nice — but the Packers Hall of Fame is just as nice. We are very proud of what we have at the Packers Hall of Fame," said Kluck.

Soaking it all in

One Green Bay Packers icon in particular said he is soaking in every moment of his last year taking to the course as an active member of the Packers.

Green Bay Packers President/CEO Mark Murphy said that his official time at the helm of the Packers organization will come to an end with the 2025 shareholders meeting next July.

"When I started many years ago, I knew that there was an endpoint, but it always seemed so far away. It's going to be really special with the Draft, but also with our boys. I think our team is going to have a really special year," said Murphy.

As he prepares to pass the baton, Murphy assured Packers fans that they will be in good hands following his retirement.

"Ed Policy has been in this position and been right there with me for everything the last 12 years. I think it will be a pretty smooth transition," said Murphy.

"He is really a smart man. He knows the business inside and out — his father was a president, not only with the 49ers but also the Browns. He is really community-minded and I think people will be pleased."

In looking towards his final year with the Packers, Murphy said that there will be plenty to keep him busy — especially with the upcoming 2025 NFL Draft.

"A little less than a year from now, preparations are underway. It's the League's event but we will be actively involved. Really excited about it. I think it will be the biggest event ever held in Green Bay," said Murphy. "Hopefully we are picking 32nd."

In true Green Bay Packers fashion, Murphy said the team is looking to their strong ties to the community to come into play over the course of the next year as Green Bay becomes the smallest city to host the NFL Draft.

Former Packers player Paul Kauffman tees off at the 50th annual Packers Hall of Fame Golf Classic.

"If you go to our website or type in 'volunteer, Draft' you can find more information. We are going to need a lot of people to help pull this off," said Murphy.

"It's really the League's event so we have been working with them to determine where the stage will be and I think we have some of those things ironed out now. This will be the smallest city to host the Draft. It's going to be great. We will showcase Wisconsin, and we will have people staying all over the state."

Howard will host inaugural Duck Creek Triathlon on July 28

BY THE VILLAGE OF HOWARD FOR THE PRESS TIMES

HOWARD – The Duck Creek Triathlon will make its debut on July 28. Hosted by the Village of Howard, this fully supported, timed sprint triathlon features a 750-meter swim in the popular Duck Creek Quarry, a 12-mile bike ride through scenic Howard and Suamico and an out-and-back 5k run on the Mountain Bay Trail.

The event, which is co-hosted by charity partner Greater Green Bay YMCA, met its registration capacity on July 6, two full weeks before the deadline.

"We have 242 athletes coming from 17 counties in Wisconsin, as well as from Michigan and Illinois, so it is going to be a wonderful opportunity to highlight our beautiful community," said Leigh Ann Wagner Kroening, the public information officer for the Village of Howard and one of the event's coordinators. "It has been amazing to watch this event come together with the support of our local sponsors, our peers in Suamico and Brown County and our volunteers."

Nick Haydon, the aquatics director for the West Side YMCA and the other event coordinator, said there are 186 people signed up for the individual event and 21 relay teams with their members participating in the three different legs of the race.

"I think the reason behind the great response is that there isn't a local triathlon anymore," Haydon said. "Our participants range from experienced triathletes to first timers, and it will be fun to watch athletes of different abilities give our inaugural event a try."

For those who want to be part of the fun but do not want to race, a variety of volunteer options still are available. All volunteers will receive a free t-shirt, a complimentary age-appropriate beverage from the Howard Commons Activity Center tap trailer and other fun stuff.

In addition to the athletes and volunteers, spectators and the whole community are invited to watch some or all of the triathlon, which officially starts at 8 a.m. at Duck Creek Quarry Park, and then head across Glendale Avenue to Howard Memorial Park for a post-race party that will begin at 10 a.m. The event will run until about noon and will include music from Downtown DJ Joel, cold beverages served from the Howard Commons tap trailer, coffee and breakfast goods from the Grounded on the Go truck as well as Mexican goodies from the La Tacoyota Food Truck.

For more information about the event or to volunteer, visit <https://www.villageofhoward.com/457/Duck-Creek-Triathlon> speaks to the popularity overall of the NFL."

With respect to the national revenue, numbers showed a 7.5% increase from $374.4 million to $402.3 million.

Murphy said that this trend can be attributed to national increases due to TV deals and how the NFL has been strategic in their relationship with streaming platforms.

"It's one of the few things that people watch live anymore. We are very fortunate that we are in that position and that networks are willing to pay, but we are also looking at where the future is going and certainly streaming is growing," said Murphy.

Outside of improvements on the national level, the Packers' local revenue is also up 6.7% from $235.9 million in 2023 to $251.8 million in 2024.

"Our team making a play-off run at the end of the year really helped us from a Pro Shop perspective," said Murphy.

Regarding total revenue, the Packers saw a 7.2% increase from $610.3 million in 2023 to $654.1 million in 2024.

However, total expenses outpaced this trend with a 9.7% increase from $541.6 million to $594 million.

"The one area we did go up is depreciation. We have invested quite a bit into the stadium," said Murphy. "I think the main projects were the video boards that you see, football facilities and then also the concourse renovations that we did in terms of our concession stands."

One remaining area of exponential growth for the Packers has been their Investment Fund, which is up 413.6%.

After facing a $20.5 million loss in 2023, the Packers are now in the black hitting $64.3 million in 2024.

"Looking to the future, we really feel that it's important to the Packers to continue to support that," said Murphy.

"We don't have a rich, deep-pocket owner and the economics of the league are changing pretty dramatically. You look at some of the recent sales with teams selling for $6.65 billion, we have to make sure we remain competitive on the field, but also make sure that we are maintaining Lambeau Field. Since 2003, I think we have put over $600 million into Lambeau Field, and none of that has been public money."

Overall, from April 1, 2023 to March 31, 2024, the Packers' net income saw a 175.8% increase from $35.6 million to $98.1 million.

GREEN BAY – The 2024 Green Bay Packers Hall of Fame Golf Classic was held at Green Bay Country Club on Monday, July 15.

The event saw 30 teams tee-off throughout the day, each one with a former Packers player, Hall of Famer or celebrity.

“The day went fantastic. It was a beautiful day here at Green Bay Country Club. We had 30 Packers alumni here with the 30 sponsored teams. Everyone seemed to have a great time,” said Green Bay Packers Hall of Fame Executive Director Sam Kluck.

“This is our 50th year doing this golf outing. We started it back 50 years ago and have been carrying it on ever since. It’s been a great event for our alumni, our association with the Packers and it helps the Hall of Fame continue its success.”

The annual golf outing seeks to bring Packers alumni back together with other former players and with the local Green Bay community in which they were all supported at some point in their careers.

“It’s been a great run and a great time for everyone that’s been involved, but it’s all about our alumni, all about our Hall of Famers and we are happy to honor them and hold these events,” said Kluck.

The Packers Hall of Fame intends to use these events to stimulate a sense of community and to provide a time for players and local fans to get together in a fun and active atmosphere.

“We give them (alumni) a call and say ‘Hey, what are you doing? Want to play some golf and have some fun?’ and most of them are really excited. A lot of the guys you see here — like Dave Robinson and Marv Flemming — I would venture to guess that maybe they’ve been here for just about every one of these things, but we do have some new guys here this year as well,” said Kluck.

In addition to the fun day on the course, the Packers Hall of Fame continues to receive support from the local community in order to GREEN BAY – After releasing their annual financial report, the Green Bay Packers revealed that although their operating profits took another dip this year, their team remains in an overall strong financial position.

After operating profits saw a 12% decrease from 2022-23 dropping from $77.7 million to $68.6 million, for the second year in a row the Packers saw a similar trend with their operating profit showing another decline — this time of 12.5% — to hit $60.1 million on a total revenue of $654.1 million.

Green Bay Packers President/CEO Mark Murphy said that although their profits were down, they are still in a “healthy range.”

“I think the main takeaway is, it’s another strong year from a financial standpoint for the Packers,” Murphy said. “It certainly

Phoenix legend passes, legacy lives on

Coach Buss’s impact on Green Bay

GREEN BAY – The UW-Green Bay Phoenix, as well as the entire Green Bay community, are mourning the recent passing of Phoenix legend, founder and first head coach of the Green Bay men’s basketball program, Dave Buss.

During Coach Buss’s time at the helm of the program from 1969-82, the Phoenix took the NCAA by storm rising through the ranks as they competed at the NAIA, DII and DI levels.

Coach Buss accumulated a record of 271-102 (.726) in his 13 seasons.

The Phoenix reached the peak of their success during their time at the DII level tacking two runner-up finishes and three Final Four appearances.

Wicks said that Coach Buss has been one of his basketball heroes for years and he still marvels at what he has accomplished for the game of basketball at UW-Green Bay.

“Great coaching is how well you handle heart. He literally did one of the hardest things in college basketball which was to take the team from NAIA to DII to DI. He transitioned the program across three levels, which is unheard of in the history of the game. I don’t know any other coach that has stayed at an institution and helped them transition across three levels and in such a short span. If you tried to do that nowadays, that would be unfathomable,” said Wicks.

“That legacy alone on top of winning game after game the way he did. I don’t think there is ever going to be another coach in the history
