St. Lawrence County has seen a rise in homelessness in recent years, as have surrounding counties. A summit held in Ogdensburg allowed officials to discuss best options for addressing the growing need.

Canton plaza campers move on Police chief says squatters cleared the area without incident

BY PAUL MITCHELL
North Country This Week

CANTON - The growing congregation of homeless people who made the Midtown Plaza their home for the past several weeks have moved on. Canton Police Chief James Santimaw said Tuesday morning that the makeshift tenants have cleared with no incidents. "We spoke with them earlier this week and told them the building was not safe. There was zero coercion," Santimaw stated. The police chief noted that some of the homeless men have family in the area but it's unknown where many of them will relocate. The area in the plaza is still littered with odds and ends which the village Department of Public Works will soon remove. A fence will be installed around that area for safety purposes. The 19 Miner Street property now has signage in place saying "No Loitering" and "No Trespassing." One homeless man was seen sleeping Tuesday morning in front of the Yoga Loft in the former Aubuchon building, 21 Miner St., that is private property. Canton Mayor Michael Dalton has been dealing with the homeless compound situation for several weeks,

King of Sitcoms lauds SUNY Potsdam

Big Bang Theory creator gives million dollar gift after sharing stories with community

BY JEFF CHUDZINSKI
North Country This Week

POTSDAM — SUNY Potsdam was a "safe environment for a foolish young man" in the early 1970's. That's how Hollywood legend Chuck Lorre described his two years at SUNY Potsdam during a discussion with President Suzanne Smith on Sept. 23.

Lorre, who has worked as a writer, director, executive producer and show-runner on numerous hit sitcoms since the 1980's, returned to SUNY Potsdam for the first time since 2009 to detail his time in the North Country and what led him to Hollywood.

When asked why he chose to attend SUNY Potsdam, Lorre offered a surprising take.

"Do you want me to be honest?" he jokingly asked Smith.

"I looked at the map of New York and found the school closest to the Canadian border," Lorre said.

He told Smith and the hundreds of attendees that he was 100 pounds when he graduated high school and "knew he wouldn't be a good soldier."

$80 million health center opening

St. Lawrence Health president says new regional care pavilion is 'game changer'

BY ADAM ATKINSON
North Country This Week

POTSDAM — St. Lawrence Health's $80 million regional care pavilion project is nearing completion and the SLH president says the new building will allow for major advancements in healthcare for the North Country. A grand opening for the 108,000-square-foot expansion of the Canton-Potsdam Hospital on Cottage Street, the first major expansion at the facility in years, is planned for Monday, Oct. 7. However, the new emergency department on the ground level of the huge four-story addition opened last week to the public. The new wing's main entrance and lobby will be open to the public officially on Tuesday, Oct. 15. "This is a game changer for health care in the North Country," said SLH president Donna M. McGregor. "This project is allowing us to have a platform to expand, providing regional care." McGregor told North Country This Week the reason the health system calls the expansion a "regional care pavilion" was that as the hospital system grows and expands with continued integration with Rochester Regional Health system, CPH will continue to advance the services it provides at the Potsdam facility as well. "This is a platform for growth and for the community for years to come," she said. "We are super, super excited that this is happening. That we are able to open the ED (Emergency Department) on time. The project is not only on time, it's on budget." McGregor said the project is all about community, and providing the hospital's clinical, administrative and operational professionals with a state-of-the-art facility to provide care to that community. The regional care pavilion, costing a total of $79,860,000

Firm handling lead survey of Potsdam water lines directed to improve communication with residents

BY ADAM ATKINSON
North Country This Week

POTSDAM -- Lead survey teams from the firm ElectroScan have been put on notice that they need to improve their communication with residents regarding keeping appointments to survey and inventory lateral service lines supplying water to homes and businesses.

David Powers from Barton & Loguidice, the head firm on the project to survey the village's 1400 lateral water service lines for lead, told village board members at their meeting Monday, Sept. 23, that he had reached out to Mike App, ElectroScan VP of business development, regarding the concerns.

ElectroScan is the subcontractor, working under B&L, supplying the electrolysis technology and tech teams to conduct the actual surveying onsite at residences and businesses.

Village officials had told Powers at their meeting last month that many residents had complained that appointments set with ElectroScan were canceled last minute and that the firm had been difficult to nail down on reschedules.

Pierrepont Avenue resident Matthew Manierre told North Country This Week separately that the firm had dropped the ball multiple times in their attempts to get his service lines surveyed. Manierre told NCTW that "not only is ElectroScan failing to show up very often, but they are frequently incapable of doing the work when they do show up."

At the meeting, Powers told board members that he had raised the concerns voiced by Manierre and other residents and those voiced by village officials to ElectroScan.

"We got into quite a number of things," Powers said. He said notably he and App discussed the "no-call-no-shows" that were apparently caused by a COVID outbreak among the inspection team, but still have raised the ire of village residents.

Currently the village has had low residential compliance for getting the service line survey and inspections done under the U.S.

Environmental Protection Agency deadline. Municipalities need to have an inventory log of all water service lines entered into a database by the middle of October and identify sections containing lead. Sections containing lead can then be removed by the village over the next decade as required by the EPA. Cost of the inspection is 100 percent covered thanks to a million dollar grant received by the village. There is no cost to residents.

But, so far there are still hundreds of inspections in the village to be done.

Powers said B&G also emphasized to ElectroScan that their call-in number was not user friendly and often busy when residents reach out to set up their appointment.

"I brought that up to them previously and said it was not a very user friendly system, and apparently it was overlooked. I brought it up again and he said it would be changed immediately," Powers told the board.

Powers said he also has requested full access to ElectroScan's scheduling software so he can review it. He also requested regular copies of the firm's inspection logs weekly.

Furthermore, Powers said ElectroScan's project manager for the Potsdam inspection has been removed and a new supervisor and two additional techs have been assigned to the project. App will apparently be taking over project management duties.

"Ultimately the take away from our meeting is that obviously, communication is first and foremost," Powers said.

"We really impressed upon (ElectroScan) that to date things have been rocky. They've been poorly executed and quite frankly, we're very disappointed, the village is disappointed and confidence has been shaken to the point where there's not really room for a lot of missteps remaining at this point," Powers said.

Two jailed for burglary

HOPKINTON -- Two Winthrop residents have been arrested on burglary charges.

State Police say Barbara A. Brossoit, 32, and Matthew D. Bray, 50, were arrested on Sept. 16 following a suspicious person complaint on Sheldon Road in the town of Hopkinton.

Police say an investigation determined the two entered a residence through a window without permission.

Brossoit and Bray were remanded to St. Lawrence County Correctional Facility in lieu of $15,000 cash bail.

New Ives Park bathhouse nearly complete, but some residents not happy

BY ADAM ATKINSON
North Country This Week

POTSDAM — Some residents are not happy with the village's construction of public bathrooms in Ives Park.

Two residents spoke out against the construction at the village board meeting Monday, Sept. 23. Residents stated that the construction, which the village board has talked about publicly for a couple years and has several articles in local media outlets, was surprising.

One resident feels the construction is cramming more structures into a park that was better as an idyllic green space in the middle of the village.

Earlier in the meeting, Village Mayor Alexandra Jacobs Wilke reported to the board that the construction of the new bathhouse in the park was underway.

"As you know, construction has begun on the new bathroom facility in Ives Park. Thank you to Everett Scanlon and his company, they won the bid for that project, and it is moving along," Wilke said.

"I know I won't be the only person who will be relieved that members of our public won't have to relieve themselves publicly in our park," Wilke said. The mayor said having a public restroom in Ives would be a big asset to the community by improving bathroom access for families with children and the elderly.

Village Administrator Isabelle Gates-Shult gave an update on the construction progress at the site later during the meeting.

"It's really coming along. The underground plumbing is complete. The concrete work is finished and the wall framing is being installed this week," Gates-Shult said. "So it sounds like, with our continued progress, that we should have this up and ready by November."

However, not everyone at the meeting was as enthusiastic about the project.

During the public comment portion of the meeting, Jan Rutella, who lives on Division Street, took the village to task over the construction.

Rutella, who has lived in the village since the 1970s, questioned why the village continues to add things to the park, which she said used to be a lush green space.

"I was very upset when I saw the construction of the bathroom in Ives Park, as were other people in the neighborhood," Rutella told the board. "I didn't know it was coming. I don't think anyone knew it was coming. It just kind of appeared."

"I've been in this town since 1979. I've had a very close relationship with Ives Park. I think it was the reason I fell in love with Potsdam," she said.

"And, over the last two years it seems like we just can't put enough stuff in that park," Rutella said.

"I know we lost a lot of trees to the ice storm, but that park used to be just lush. It had a little sandstone meandering path, and trees. Then, first we built a gazebo. Then we put in signage. Then we put in a huge plastic boat ramp that quite honestly, I think wasn't really necessary. The kayakers don't really use it," she told the board.

"And now, the playground which is beautiful, and now a bathroom right in the middle of the park," Rutella said.

She said she doesn't have a problem with a public bathroom, but took issue with where it was located in the park, suggesting it could have been in a different location away from the main section of the space there.

"I lost sleep over this. It's heartbreaking to me," Rutella said.

She was critical of ongoing village discussions about building a boat house for kayak and canoe storage and rentals in Ives. "In the one corner of that is still dark and lush and private?" Rutella said. "This is not a parking lot."

Robin Bovay of Hewittville also spoke, criticizing the village's decision to build the bathroom. Bovay also claimed the village did not give the public any notice of the construction project.

"You guys always said 'transparency, transparency, transparency.' Why'd you hide the bathhouse?" Bovay said. "Nobody knew about it. Nobody knew it was coming till you broke ground."

Bovay questioned if the job was put out to bid.

"You already have a pisser. They would have to walk a 100 yards, but just use the West Dam. At least it would be used for something," he said.

Village Mayor Alexandra Wilke later responded to the questions regarding the notification of the public of the bathhouse project, pointing out that the village board has discussed the issue in public multiple times over the last two years. She also said the project was publicized in local media outlets, and that the work was put out to bid, which was won by Scanlon.

"This was one of the projects that the board determined made it to our final list of projects funded by our American Rescue Plan money," Wilke said.

"And there was extensive public conversation, including a special meeting on how we would determine our APRA projects, what were our criteria for choosing those and kind of scoring those as a board which we did. This made the list."

Wilke said she would be happy to forward the various news articles regarding the ARPA fund list and the project to those that wanted them. She said the board has also had numerous board meetings since then where the project was discussed.

The village board meetings are not only scheduled in advance and the public notified through several means, they are open to the public to attend and can also be viewed on the village's Facebook page where they are broadcasted.

Village Trustee Lynzie Shulte reiterated the mayor's comments on the bathhouse construction and how transparent the village has been in implementing the project over the last two years. She also defended the village's potential plans to install a kayak and canoe house in the park.

She said although there are kayak rentals at Sandstoner Park, the location was not ideal due to the nature of the river there, but added there have been no decisions made on the boathouse construction yet.

"But it is something we are looking at," Shulte said.

Massive Canton solar project gets final siting permit

BY PAUL MITCHELL
North Country This Week

CANTON - State officials have issued a final siting permit for a solar project slated to be built on Rich Road in the Town of Canton.

The Office of Renewable Energy Siting (ORES) issued the permit to Rich Road Solar Energy Center, LLC today, Sept. 24.

"After 3 years of effort to get to this point, it's an exciting day to have achieved the final siting permit for the project," said EDF Renewables' Project Developer Jonathan Geldard.

Officials say the 240-megawatt project will produce enough power for 61,000 average-size homes, according to the permit approval.

As part of the project, a 20-megawatt battery energy storage facility will also be located at the site, despite public opposition from residents and town officials alike.

EDF Renewables is expected to begin the construction phase of the solar project in 2025 with completion in 2027.

"We are excited and will continue to work alongside the Canton community to integrate the design. We are proud of our efforts and look forward to working with the local community as we move forward to the next phase," stated Haylee Ferington, community relations manager for EDF Renewables.

In the siting permit, state officials say ORES weighed many factors, including public health and safety, pertinent social, economic and environmental factors of the solar facility.

Officials say the facility complies with Article VIII and application provisions from ORES, substantive provision of applicable state laws and regulations, local laws and ordinances, while also minimizing or mitigating, "to the maximum extent practicable, potential significant adverse environmental impacts of the Facility."

Officials also say the project "achieves a net conservation benefit with respect to any impacted threatened or endangered species."

Any potential changes to the facility proposed by Rich Road Solar Energy Center, LLC will be subject to review by the office in compliance with Part 1100, state officials said.

The siting permit will automatically expire if the solar facility does not commence commerce operation within seven years from the date of issuance as well.

Projects of this size are controlled by the state and Canton Town code regulations are superseded.

Trial for man accused of SLC murders slated for Oct. 15

BY JEFF CHUDZINSKI
North Country This Week

CANTON -- A Lake Placid man accused of murdering two men in February 2023 and March 2023 is heading to trial beginning October 15.

Adam Smith, 48, stands accused of murdering Ronald Durham, 72, Gouverneur, and William Freeman, 67, Rossie last year.

Smith was indicted on charges of first and second degree murder, manslaughter, first degree robbery, and first degree assault for the Feb. 11, 2023 killing of Durham.

The indictment also charged Smith with the crimes of first and second degree murder, manslaughter, first degree robbery, and first degree assault, third and multiple accounts of fourth degree grand larceny for the March 1, 2023 killing of Freeman.

The larceny charges stem from Smith allegedly stealing Freeman's 2018 Chevy Silverado, before being apprehended by Jefferson County Sheriff's Deputies.

Smith was subsequently transferred back to St. Lawrence County, where the Sheriff's Office charged him with fourth-degree criminal possession of stolen property as well. Smith was officially charged with second-degree murder in the death of Freeman on March 7.

At that time, former St. Lawrence County Sheriff Brooks Bigwarfe reported that Smith stabbed Freeman to death on March 1 in Freeman's trailer on County Route 10 in the town of Rossie.

Evidence gathered at the scene, coupled with Smith's criminal history and probation status quickly led police to him, according to the sheriff's department.

On Feb. 11 State Police responded to East Side Cemetery on Van Buren Road around 8:20 a.m. following a report of a deceased male.

When troopers arrived on the scene, they reportedly located Durham deceased under suspicious circumstances.

An autopsy has determined Durham died from sharp force injury to the neck.

During a press conference held last year, St. Lawrence County District Attorney Gary Pasqua said Smith was also involved in the killing of Durham. He was later formally charged with murder.

Since his arrest, Smith has been an inmate at St. Lawrence County Correctional Facility.

County officials said numerous interviews have been conducted by multiple departments, with numerous leads followed up on that led to the arrest, with numerous search warrants issued on multiple properties, vehicles and locations relevant to the investigation.

Prior to Smith being a suspect, police had charged Frederick Wing, 22, with the murder of Durham. Wing was released from county jail on Friday, March 3 at the request of Pasqua and law enforcement after evidence came to light during the Freeman murder investigation that implicated Smith in the case.

According to Pasqua, the arrest was "not made on a whim" and was only made after physical evidence at the scene gave law enforcement probable cause to arrest Wing.

It still remains unclear what motivation Smith had for committing either crime, however both Bigwarfe and Pasqua previously confirmed the victims and Smith did have connections and these were not random acts of violence.

Following the indictments, State

Police continued to investigate Smith's connections to Durham's homicide.

Pasqua also previously confirmed that Smith had violated his parole stemming from a previous burglary conviction at the time of the murders.

"I just want to say this, that this individual that has been arrested for this crime, a pretty heinous crime, appears to be a very dangerous individual," Bigwarfe said during the March 2023 press conference.

Following the indictments, State Police continued to investigate Smith's connections to Durham's homicide.

Pasqua also previously confirmed dSmith and Wing had no known connection, nor did the victims know each other.

"All individuals in the Durham case were known, there were no random coincidences in the case," Pasqua said.

Law enforcement also previously confirmed Smith had a criminal record and was on probation at the time of the murders.

Pasqua also previously confirmed that Smith had recently violated his parole stemming from a previous burglary conviction at the time of the murders.

"I just want to say this, that this individual that has been arrested for this crime, a pretty heinous crime, appears to be a very dangerous individual," Bigwarfe said during the March 2023 press conference.

"It was a quick turnaround with a lot to do. Getting him off the streets is super important to keep every citizen as safe as possible in the county," he said.

Resource for media when earthquakes hit 'Earthquake Man' of SLC passes away

BY PAUL MITCHELL
North Country This Week

POTSDAM – Whenever an earthquake shook the North Country, local media outlets immediately reached out to Frank A. Revetta.

An authority on earthquakes, Revetta passed away on Sunday, Sept. 15 at the age of 96.

Long-time editor of the Ogdensburg Journal James E. Reagan recalled the numerous times he and members of his news staff contacted Revetta when an earthquake hit.

"Frank was a tremendous resource and a friend of the North Country and the North Country media," stated Reagan. "He was always willing to help educate us on what was happening by providing detailed information when an earthquake occurred."

"Most people were aware of the St. Lawrence County history of earthquakes thanks to Frank. Frank's loss is a great loss to all of us. I always appreciated his candor and how he made these episodes into teachable moments," Reagan remarked. "He was always there for the public and the media."

For 50 years, Frank was a faculty member of the Geology Department at SUNY Potsdam and for 50 years, teaching was his obsession. His presence at SUNY Potsdam was immense. He taught thousands of undergraduates, graduates, grade schoolers, retirees, and prisoners in earth science, geophysics, and astronomy. He gave countless planetarium shows to anyone who would listen and located groundwater for anyone who needed it. He did these things passionately and always for free. He ran and operated seismology stations across the North Country and became known locally as "the earthquake man."

Revetta was born June 18, 1928 in Monongahela, Pennsylvania. He graduated from Monongahela High school in 1946 before working at Combustion Engineering Corp. On a whim, he took the college entrance exam and was accepted to the University of Pittsburgh, graduating in 1953 with a degree in Geology.

Always the absentminded scientist, Frank was drafted to the Army in 1954 after forgetting to register his draft card. He earned the rank of specialist first class as a laboratory technician and was stationed in Metz, France. Frank described his time in the military as, "the best years of my life" having spent two years touring Germany, Italy, and Spain. Following his discharge, he earned a master's degree in geophysics at the University of Indiana and a PhD from the University of Rochester. He was the first of his family to hold a college degree, his obituary reads.

In 1959 he met Joann Affinito and was welcomed into her large and loving family. Joann would become the love of his life and the mother to his two daughters, Lisa (Ismail) Orabi and Mia (John) Wicke. For 63 years of marriage, Joann was a faithful homemaker, ardent supporter, and feisty sparring partner. Together they traveled thousands of miles by car, enjoyed countless mornings at McCarthy's Restaurant, and thrived off their love for their grandchildren, Abraham (Noha) and Ismail.

Frank was a man of immeasurable passions and hobbies. He loved running the country roads of Potsdam, hiking the Adirondack Mountains, and riding his bike to work. He took aerobics, karate, and yoga classes. He loved college football on Saturday, the New York Times on Sunday, and books every day of the week. He loved Tony Bennett, Frank Sinatra, and Harry Belafonte. He loved his back-porch and watching birds at the feeder. He loved sunsets on Cape Cod and the local taverns of Connecticut. He loved angel hair pasta and Gallo Hearty Burgundy wine. He was insatiably curious, he was a prolific academic, a kind man, a sincere man, a friend to anyone and everyone, and an unintentional comic force.

Frank A. Revetta, 96

Potsdam

POTSDAM - Frank A. Revetta was born June 18, 1928 in Monongahela, Pennsylvania. The son of a machinist (Andrew) and a housewife (Anna), Frank was the eldest brother to Eugene "Dean" and Andrew, both of whom preceded him in death.

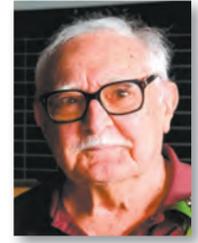

Frank graduated from Monongahela High school in 1946 before working at Combustion Engineering Corp. On a whim, he took the college entrance exam and was accepted to the University of Pittsburgh, graduating in 1953 with a degree in Geology.

Always the absentminded scientist, Frank was drafted to the Army in 1954 after forgetting to register his draft card. He earned the rank of specialist first class as a laboratory technician and was stationed in Metz, France. Frank described his time in the military as, "the best years of my life" having spent two years touring Germany, Italy, and Spain. Following his discharge, he earned a master's degree in geophysics at the University of Indiana and a PhD from the University of Rochester. He was the first of his family to hold a college degree.

In 1959 he met Joann Affinito and was welcomed into her large and loving family. Joann would become the love of his life and the mother to his two daughters, Lisa (Ismail) Orabi and Mia (John) Wicke. For 63 years of marriage, Joann was a faithful homemaker, ardent supporter, and feisty sparring partner. Together they traveled thousands of miles by car, enjoyed countless mornings at McCarthy's Restaurant, and thrived off their love for their grandchildren, Abraham (Noha) and Ismail.

For 50 years, Frank was a faculty member of the Geology Department at SUNY Potsdam and for 50 years, teaching was his obsession. His presence at SUNY Potsdam was immense. He taught thousands of undergraduates, graduates, grade schoolers, retirees, and prisoners in earth science, geophysics, and astronomy. He gave countless planetarium shows to anyone who would listen and located ground water for anyone who needed it. He did these things passionately and always for free. He ran and operated seismology stations across the North Country and became known locally as "the earthquake man."

Frank A. Revetta

Frank was a man of immeasurable passions and hobbies. He loved running the country roads of Potsdam, hiking the Adirondack Mountains, and riding his bike to work. He took aerobics, karate, and yoga classes. He loved college football on Saturday, the New York Times on Sunday, and books every day of the week. He loved Tony Bennett, Frank Sinatra, and Harry Belafonte. He loved his back-porch and watching birds at the feeder. He loved sunsets on Cape Cod and the local taverns of Connecticut. He loved angel hair pasta and Gallo Harty Burgundy wine. He was insatiably curious, he was a prolific academic, a kind man, a sincere man, a friend to anyone and everyone, and an unintentional comic force.

Breeze Air passengers can fly to Florida beginning in November

BY JIMMY LAWTON
North Country This Week

OGDENSBURG -- Breeze Airways is set to offer flights to Washington D.C. in October, but those looking to go further south will have a new route to Florida in November.

Ogdensburg Airport Manager Charlie Garrelts said Breeze flights from Ogdensburg to Dulles will be able to connect to Provo Airport in Utah October 1. On Nov. 8, connecting flights can be made to South Bend Airport in Indiana and on Nov. 21 flights from Dulles will take passengers to Vero Beach, Florida.

Those connections will be welcome additions to the $45 flights from Ogdensburg to Dulles. Garrelts said expects flights to Vero Beach to start at $99.

Breeze Air was recently awarded the Essential Air Service contract, which is a federal subsidy that allows rural airports like Ogdensburg to get air service that would otherwise be cost prohibitive.

Airline officials said that the Ogdensburg flights will provide a low cost option for Canadian residents looking to visit Washington D.C. and provide St. Lawrence County residents with a flight to a major hub.

One weakness of the Breeze Airways flights is that they do not have interline agreements with other airlines at this time. That can make it difficult for those looking to make connections to other flights.

Essentially it means that passengers would need to book any flights out of Dulles separately. This means claiming and rebooking luggage and removes flight connection guarantees.

Garrelts said that Breeze is still working to secure interline agreements and said that he is expecting they'll have some arrangements in place by the end of the year.

As for strengths, the larger jet planes tend to be more palatable for some fliers and the planes will include Wifi and options of three levels of seating ranging from general to first class.

Ogdensburg Bridge and Port Authority officials said the Breeze flights fit well with their vision of making the city airport a regional hub.

Breeze Airways proposal provides a 137-passenger jet with one daily round trip flight from Ogdensburg to Washington D.C. Breeze currently offers that service in Plattsburgh and says market data suggests that such flights could be profitable in Ogdensburg, despite being ineligible for federal subsidies.

Hamilton Street residents want water runoff from parking lots redirected away from yards

BY ADAM ATKINSON
North Country This Week

POTSDAM — Residents living behind North Country Savings Bank on Hamilton Street are asking the village to consider some storm sewer drainage work in their section of the village as the municipality is researching future stormwater management options.

Greg Kie of Hamilton St. asked the village to take a closer look at drainage issues on the street and about six or so residences there.

"There's a lot of parking lots back there and the way it's graded, all the water runs off those parking lots into our backyards," Kie told the village board at their meeting Monday, Sept. 23, during public comment.

Kie told the board that even before the recent hurricane-influenced weather and flooding event, the residents in Hamilton usually have standing water in their backyards.

Kie said one his neighbors even built a dry creek to reroute standing water away from their residence. He said there is a sewer grate and drain near the lots and the residences, but it seems to not be working properly. "We think it might be insufficient or clogged. It's very small," Kie said. The Hamilton Street man suggested that the village add additional drainage to help alleviate the problem. "We know you are in the process of looking at the sewer systems and upgrading them and we just wanted to get on that list," Kie said. He said anytime there is substantial rain or in the spring, the residences in that area basically have a swamp in their yards.

Hamilton Street resident Meg Milan said her residence is especially inundated by standing water when the rains come. She said between her property and Kie's, near the existing sewer drain, there is a sinkhole.

"And my concern is that this village drain is not functioning. And, hopefully when you guys are taking

Keeping in touch with the ties that bind

A tribute to those we don't see often enough

You never really have friends quite like your cousins. They are people you often spend very little time with and yet are closer to than many of your best friends despite the distance.

Editor's Notebook

Jimmy Lawton

When I was a kid most of my extended family lived in Lisbon, while I lived all the way across the country in Washington State. Every year or two we'd come up to visit our grandparents, aunts, uncles and cousins.

Extended family is kind of a bizarre thing to experience. There are these people you know who share the same relatives as you, but you don't live with them, you don't always grow up with them and yet there is a kinship between you that exists in a meaningful way.

My cousins are some of my favorite people in the world and they were even when I barely knew them. I'm not really sure how you explain that sort of thing, but it's true.

In Washington I lived in the valley on the outskirts of Spokane. It was a much more urban setting and quite different from the farms we visited in the summer trips to New York. When we came I often felt out of place as my cousins introduced me to tractors and livestock and we'd play hide and seek in fields outside at night among the fireflies at my grandparents house. Flashlight tag hits different in places without street lights after all.

Until I moved here when I was nearing 12 years old I'd only spent a few days of my life with many of them and yet that didn't matter much at all as we still formed strong bonds. It was always special to see where I came from and those who came from the same place. It's something that stays with you forever.

Once my family moved back to New York, I spent time with some of them more and others less, but I'd always happy to see them at family gatherings or surprise encounters.

Some of my cousins I was fortunate enough to live next door to, those ones were more like siblings, if truth be told. Working on the farm together is another entirely unique experience of its own.

As years went by we all got older. Some moved away, some came back, some were born, some had kids. In time, our grandparents died.

Grandparents are that special shared host with whom everyone has a bond and their lives are often the glue that keeps the larger family together. When they pass, gatherings tend to be less frequent.

And while it's never been easier to keep track of each other's successes and struggles via electronic communication, it's not the same as sharing a meal, a beer or a story by the fireside.

Sadly, such gatherings later in our lives tend to coincide with funerals and on some occasions weddings. It becomes our job as the next generation to make sure we out part to keep those gatherings from disappearing all together.

This summer was a special one for me. I had family from both sides drop in to visit from Alabama, Texas, Colorado, Plattsburgh, Rochester, Glenville, Buffalo and other areas I'm sure I'm forgetting during the same week.

With a kid on the way and an exceedingly hot summer we spent a week trying to spend as much time with our visiting family as we could. We did our best to see everyone despite the toll it took on the little guys and ourselves because to me, that stuff matters.

It had been a long time since I'd seen some of them. In some cases close to a decade. And it was the first time my children were able to meet some of their cousins as well. I suspect they were already forming those special bonds that I spoke of earlier and I suspect they'll be excited to see them again, whenever that may be.

I wonder if this time my kids will be the ones introducing their cousins to fireflies and fields. I can only hope they enjoy it as much as I did.

American politics and God's Law

I don't understand. How do people claim to believe in Jesus Christ but not a word that He preached? What kind of mental wizardry conjures this odd specter: spiritual welfare for those who want Christianity's rewards while dismissing Christ's Testament and the work it demands?

Reverting to the Old Testament is equally baffling. If God thought the Old Testament accurately reflected His True Will, why did He send Jesus to preach a New Testament that so obviously contradicts parts of the old? "You have heard it said an eye for an eye, but I say turn the other cheek." Everyone believes the I speaking is Christ, the Son of God, but some choose to ignore the words themselves. Why? Do they know better than Jesus what God wants?

"If you do not live by My Laws in this world, you will not get to the Father in the next." Everyone believes Christ is speaking but some completely ignore, even revel, in contradicting His Warning. How does anyone pretend Hate and Violence is the same as Christ's Love and Peace? How does a decent person pervert helping the least among us as Jesus commanded into insulting, debasing, and attacking the most vulnerable? What is the bizarre moral schizophrenia that allows this?

How much arrogance and lack of humility before God does it take for adults to attack children and still pretend they're God-righteous? How do people who claim to believe in an all-seeing God and the Ten Commandments think bearing false witness over and over again is okay? Are American Politics exempt from God's Laws? I have met so many Christians in my lifetime who spend their entire lives striving to uphold Christ's commandments. These people are honorable, thoughtful, caring, kind, and generous, not just with material goods, but mostly with their hearts and minds. And I have also seen the Screaming Moralists who spew lies and venom, hysteria and hyperbole as if they were gods themselves: judging, damning, throwing thunderbolts like Zeus from Mt. Olympus! One of the greatest sins of pride in Christianity is construing God in one's own image. This is blasphemous because it is a form of idolatry. It negates God's mercy and delights in cruelty to others. So which Christianity is true? Christ's version or the Screaming Moralists'?

Which version do people think contributed to America's original greatness? And which version do they think is going to make America great again?

Pickleball Club says thank you

North Country Pickleball Club extends our heartfelt thanks to our sponsors, everyone that donated money and gift baskets, volunteers, and participants that made the Fire-fighter's Fall Fundraiser a success.

This event raised $20,000 for the Potsdam, West Potsdam, West Stockholm, Hannawa Falls, and Norwood Volunteer Fire Departments. We are grateful that the community came out to support this day that was full of activities. Thank you to all of the runners that ran in the 5K, the kickball players, the pickleball players, and most importantly thank you to all of the firefighters that shared their day with us.

The 9/11 ceremony was incredibly special and a reminder of how important each of you are to our communities. Your dedication, courage, and commitment to our vil-lages is a gift to all of us and we are honored that we were able to have had this fundraiser for your depart-ments.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Stefanik's support for fiscal responsibility

Our nation's debt is one of the biggest issues our government and the people face. Over the years the Federal government has acquired more than 35 trillion dollars in debt. The number is increasing steadily creating a steeper financial pit for future generations. Those in government like Joe Biden, Kamala Harris, and Democrats in Congress believe in a system in which they can spend recklessly because they have the American people to cover the tab.

While Americans battle inflation in prices for their groceries and fuel Kamala Harris suggests taxing the rich and controlling the prices of food with the power of the federal government. Government spending is the single biggest factor damaging our economy today as those in Washington repeatedly bite off more than they can chew year after year.

For us in the North Country, we have the help of some key Republican figures like President Donald Trump and Congresswoman Elise Stefanik, who vow to combat inflation and lower spending. Elise comes from a family who owned and operated their own business, and she understands through her family the importance of financial responsibility and placing attention on the issues that need to be addressed. If you wish to see ideals of fiscal responsibility back in Washington, vote for Republican candidates who understand that money does not grow on trees.

Legislature Republicans endorse Stefanik

The Republican Caucus of the St. Lawrence County Legislature would like to endorse our friend and advocate in the U.S. House of Representatives, Congresswoman Elise Stefanik for reelection.

Many of us have known Elise for over a decade since she began her career.

Over those years, we have watched with pride as she has fought for our region in Washington, standing up for our interests and earning a well-deserved reputation as one of our nation's leading voices for rural America. Whether she's fighting for Fort Drum, border security, lower taxes, our dairy industry or bringing common sense to the federal bureaucracy, Elise has become a respected, national leader who stands up for the people of our 21st Congressional District.

As New York State's Senior Republican in our congressional delegation and the House of Representatives GOP Caucus Chair, she has moved up the ranks into the top leadership in our nation's capital.

As a leader in Congress, she is uniquely positioned to fight for the needs of St. Lawrence County, one of the largest counties east of the Mississippi.

Over her 10-years of public service, we have worked closely with her and her staff who are always available when we need help in Washington.

We appreciate everything Elise has done for our constituents and the sacrifices she has made on our behalf. We urge the people of St. Lawrence County and Northern New York to join us in voting to reelect her in November.

This letter was submitted on behalf of the St. Lawrence County Republican caucus which includes James E. Reagan, District 1, Rick Perkins, District 7, David Forsythe, District 2, Benjamin Hull, District 8, Joseph Lightfoot, District 3, Glenn Webster, District 11, William Sheridan, District 4, John Gennett, District 13, Harry Smithers, District 5, Rita Curran, District 15, Larry Denesha, District 6.

ONNY thanks North Country This Week

The Orchestra of Northern New York recently distributed its 2024 Report to the Community as an insert in North Country This Week. Today I wish to publicly thank Bill Shumway, Publisher, John Basham, Marketing Manager, and Cathy Whalen, Production Manager, for creating such a wonderful publication for ONNY.

They took articles in WORD and a batch of photos, added headlines that were captivating, and created a layout that is easy to read. And they did all this within a week! Their patience with our proofreading and last minute changes was much appreciated. John Basham was an excellent agent between the production team and ONNY staff.

A special thanks to Bill Shumway, Publisher, for his generous in-kind donation and sponsorship of the report. ONNY is also grateful to Stewart's Shops for its major sponsorship of the publication.

To all those who may be interested in spreading the word about their organization, an insert in North Country This Week is a great way to accomplish that. The expert NCTW staff is professional, courteous, and fast!

Again, thanks to all involved in producing our 2024 Report to the Community.

Thanks for great Fight Hunger Fair

GardenShare would like to extend a hearty thank you to everyone who participated in our 3rd Annual Fight Hunger Fair in the Canton Village Green on Sunday, September 15th! With the generous support of our event sponsors, and all of you amazing 5K and Veggie Adventure Run fundraisers, we were able to raise over $12,000 to support our programs to ensure food security for all St. Lawrence County residents.

We wouldn't be able to do this without all of you so thank you, once again, for reminding us how important this organization is to our community.

A special thanks to everyone that helped make this event happen, including our 5K participants and fair attendees, dedicated volunteers, and sponsors. In addition, we would like to acknowledge the Big Spoon Kitchen one more time as the recipient of the 2024 Growing Community Award for their work with Cornell Cooperative Extension and the Harvest Kitchen on the Farm-to-School Program, and their immense impact in the local culinary scene.

Let's talk about poo

Nobody in their 20s, 30s, or 40s gets colorectal cancer, right? Wrong! The truth is that colon cancer is on the rise in young adults. There's an uptick of colorectal cancer in younger people as young as age 20. Millennials, GenZ's, and the rest of us need to be aware of the signs.

Talking about one's bowel habits has never been a popular conversation, but it just might save your life. If you have poo with ridges, or curled or pencil thin, changes in frequency of your bowel movements, or changes in the noise of your movements, it's worth a conversation with your healthcare provider.

You can ask your practitioner for a "FIT" or fecal immunochemical test. Cologuard is one brand of the FIT. The beauty of the test is that a box is sent to your home, you "do" your business, bring the box to UPS, and a few days later your doctor or nurse practitioner will have the results.

(FIT) is a stool test that screens for colon cancer by looking for blood from your lower intestine. A positive result means blood was found in your stool, but it doesn't necessarily mean you have cancer. A negative result means no blood was found, but it doesn't completely rule out cancer.

A colonoscopy is the best screening available to patients for colon cancer.

Why is the North Country community having trouble getting preventative screenings for their colons?

From my own experience, staff turnover leads to repeated cancellations of appointments and forces patients into an endless cycle of being a "new patient." This cycle deprives patients of deeper relationships with their practitioner and from getting their preventative health screenings. Further, St. Lawrence Health practitioners fail to provide patients with the full portfolio of health services available to them through Rochester Health.

For instance, there's a state-of-the-art women's health center in Pittsford and there are seven gastrointestinal clinics with colonoscopy appointments generally available two to three weeks out.

I've also come to realize that there are myths and misinformation about colorectal cancer such as, "it's a guy thing", "it's a gay men's thing", "it's an old people thing", "it's for people who exist on a diet of red meat". These attitudes prevent us from thinking that colon cancer is something that we might experience.

Healthcare practitioners need to have earnest conversations with their patients about colon health and the need for early and regular colonoscopies, as well as, the ability to schedule gastrointestinal appointments through Rochester Health.

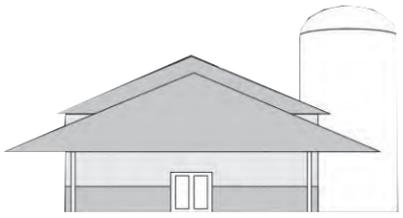

It's time to begin talking about poo. We all need to have conversations about our colon health.

For additional information about the rise in colorectal cancer read, "Colorectal Cancer: What Millennials and Gen Zers Need to Know."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Why Trump disavows Project 2025

Former President Trump disavows connection to the 2025 Presidential Transition Project, or “Project 2025,” an over 900 page blueprint penned specifically for a 2025 Republican U.S. presidential administration by the conservative Heritage Foundation.

Rep. Elise Stefanik is “mum” on the document.

Trump has no connection to this project? Then it is odd that about two-thirds (23/36) of those authoring the plan do have connections to him, having served both in his administration and transition team. (p. xv)

Trump has no connection to this project? Curious, because the introduction to “Project 2025,” states, “one set of eyes reading these passages will be those of the 47th President of the United States....”(p. xiii)

So why would Trump wish to distance himself from Project 2025? Could it be that many proposals might be unpopular with voters? We'll let you decide for yourself:

p. 4-5 Purge all federal regulations, laws, etc of at least 13 terms like diversity, equity, inclusion (DEI), sexual orientation, reproductive rights, etc

p. 5 Educators, librarians classified as sex offenders for offering books deemed pornographic (by whom?) to children

p. 6 Ending Roe v Wade “is just the beginning”

p. 302 Remove regulations on baby formula

p. 319 Eliminate Dept. of Education which mandates and funds remedial reading/math and special education classes to >60% of America's schools, etc

p. 450 human life at conception, affecting IVF. “Abortion and euthanasia are not health care.”

p. 455 Monitor all abortions, miscarriages b/c “liberal states (are) sanctuaries for abortion tourism”

p. 458 Rescind approval of abortion drugs, prohibit mailing of them across state lines

p. 465 Repeal ability of Medicare to negotiate drug prices

p. 471 Planned Parenthood loses Medicaid funding

p. 472 No Medicaid funds for states requiring insurance to cover abortion

p. 482 Eliminate Head Start

p. 595 Allow dangerous work for youths

p. 605 Repeal Davis Bacon Act, requires workers on federal projects be paid at least prevailing wages and benefits.

p. 664 Dismantle NOAA

p. 676 Dismantle the office that tracks hurricanes due to “climate alarmism”

p. 750 Eliminate aid for families and businesses rebuilding after a storm by repealing SBA Direct Lending. (Like Hurricane Debbie aftermath assistance??)

There's more.....

Concerned by this? Stefanik supports this; her Democratic opponent, Paula Collins, doesn't. Vote blue up and down your ballot in November.

Mike Zagrobelny, Chair, St. Lawrence County Democratic Committee
Ginger Storey-Welch, Vice-Chair, St. Lawrence County Democratic Committee

Unfair to remove Paige from office

As many people know by now, Potsdam Town Board Member Christine Paige commented on a Facebook post responding to the attempted assassination of Donald Trump. This began when someone posted a joke about the assassination attempt, to which another FB account responded, stating that Trump is a human being, and political violence is wrong.

Paige responded to this commenter stating that she does not see him as a human, and perhaps there is something she wasn't seeing that proved such – a sarcastic jest. Regardless, the latter section, “his assassination would be akin to putting down a rabid dog”, was drawn out of context. Paige wasn't attempting to incite political violence here, but rather making a comment about Trump's person.

Some believe that Christine Paige's status as an elected official makes her comment professionally inappropriate. Yet, it was made on a personal account, and nowhere did she declare her status as an official, therefore she was not speaking on behalf of the people of Potsdam, just herself.

Moreover, Trump in no way has the moral high ground for he has publicly announced many controversial opinions and said many questionable things about other people, such as, but not limited to: comparing women to dogs, “grab her by the p*ssy” by way of making women conform to men's will, and lastly, calling upon his fan base to storm the white house on January 6th - a former president effectively inciting violence because he was horribly afflicted by his loss in the 2020 election.

The leaders of a country set the precedent, so if Trump has set that standard, and the people have allowed it, Paige's comment is the least of anyone's worries.

Considering all of this, I think it unfair to forcibly remove Christine

Paige from the Town Board given that the subject of all this controversy is not himself without his faults – he just isn't held accountable for them. Many Americans run to defend the topic of free speech, and yet so many people in St. Lawrence County have taken the hypocritical stance of trying to punish Paige for her opinion by ripping away her career. If the standard response is to repress and punish people for their opinions when they do not manifest into negative action against others, nor are they intended to – then there you have a budding dictatorship.

Debbie Morgan | NCTV

Last week's question

Do you feel cell phones should be banned in all St. Lawrence County classrooms?

GOV. KATHY HOCHUL said she will likely submit a bill later this year to ban smartphones in New York schools in an effort to keep children safe and make sure their attention is on learning. If the bill is submitted, lawmakers can vote on it in next year's legislative session. In a survey of the United Federation of Teachers, two-thirds of educators said they support a student cell phone ban – but with conditions. Cellphone lockers, with the cost covered by the Department of Education are the preferred method of keeping devices out of classrooms, according to the survey. Right now, cell phone usage in public schools is on a school-by-school policy. Do you feel cell phones should be banned in all St. Lawrence County classrooms?

THIS WEEK'S QUESTION: Sen. Chuck

Schumer visited the North Country earlier this month to discuss combating Eastern Equine Encephalitis and West Nile in St. Lawrence County. To date, five horses have been infected with EEE, while another horse has been identified to have tested positive for West Nile. Schumer said while there is no commercially available vaccine for EEEV or WNV, the best protection is to prevent mosquito bites. Public Health officials suggest using products with Deet in them, wear long sleeve shirts and pants when possible, and to avoid being out during the early evening hours, as mosquitos are most likely to be active during those hours. Have you sprayed pesticides to combat mosquitoes on your property this year?

Let's talk about novas, water, perception

Clarkson University Sets Science Cafés for Fall in Potsdam

POTSDAM -- University professors and scientists will once again take to the stage starting Oct. 2 for Clarkson University's Science Cafés.

Science Cafés bring together local university and college professors and townspeople in relaxed, informal settings.

The speaker makes a short presentation about a topic in his or her field and then opens up the floor to discussion.

Again this semester, the Science Caf? will be held in Potsdam in the Potsdam Civic Center Community Room at 2 Park Street at 7:15 p.m.

Here's a rundown of this fall's topics and speakers:

Nova of T Coronae Borealis of 2024 or 2025
Wednesday, Oct. 2

A nova is expected in 2024 or 2025 in the binary star T Coronae Borealis (the 'Blaze Star' in the constellation Corona Borealis), located 2900 LY away. It last had a nova outburst in 1946 and eighty years before that, putting it on an eighty-year period.

Elaine Fortin, Solar System Ambassador of the NASA Jet Propulsion Laboratory and Adirondack Sky Center and Observatory, will discuss the understanding of novae, a form of astronomical transient, before and since the surprising knowledge learned from NASA's Fermi Gamma-ray telescope launched in 2008.

About 10 to 15 novae (maybe even double that!) happen in our galaxy each year. Records of novae have only been kept since telescopes have been powerful enough to capture them. It is expected that many stars are recurrent, possibly every thousand years or so but T Coronae Borealis is special because this will be another of its outbursts seen and studied by modern-day astronomers. It is hoped to be visible to the naked eye but expected to last only a few days before it returns to its quiescent state.

Things in water: how can electrochemical processes separate good and bad?
Wednesday, Oct. 16

Water contains numerous substances, some of which need to be removed from drinking water for human health or wastewater for the environment. While removing large objects is straightforward, separating small things, such as dissolved ions, present significant challenges. Are good things always good and bad things always bad? It depends and evolves as we learn more about them.

Join Assistant Professor of Chemical & Biomolecular Engineering at Clarkson University's Institute for a Sustainable Environment Taeyoung Kim in a discussion of how electrochemical processes can be used to either remove unwanted things from water or turn wasted resources into value-added products.

Embracing the Dynamic Nature of Person Perception
Wednesday, Oct. 30

In our social interactions, we constantly form judgments about others across various contexts. These judgments, from identities to personality traits, are the basis of our emotional and behavioral responses toward others. In this talk, the dominant paradigms in the study of person perception will be discussed, as well as an exciting new complementary approach that Jiang has proposed.

St. Lawrence University Assistant Psychology Professor Shu Jiang will discuss three critical aspects of person perception: assimilation (i.e., Do perceivers view different targets in a similar manner?), consensus (i.e., Is a target perceived consistently by different perceivers?) and self-other agreement (i.e., Do others view us as we perceive ourselves?).

Finally, there will be a discussion of how this new dynamic approach of person perception will offer a more comprehensive understanding of how we perceive others.

Identifying Interactions in Complex Networked Dynamical Systems through a Causation Principle
Wednesday, Nov. 13

Understanding cause and effect underpins so many of our most basic scientific questions. Inferring the coupling structure of complex systems from time series data in general by means of statistical and information-theoretic techniques is a challenging problem in "data-enabled science."

Clarkson University's W Jon Harrington Professor of Mathematics, Professor of Electrical & Computer Engineering, and Director of the Clarkson Center for Complex Systems Science Erik Bollt will discuss an information theoretic approach, but to do so he will first present a bit of the underpinnings of information theory. This will allow Bollt to present optimal causation entropy (oCSE) principle to identify the coupling of a complex system from measured data.

He will include examples such as the functional brain network as inferred by fMRI, structural health monitoring of structures such as bridges, and inferring who is interacting with whom in collective behavior problems that include animals as well as humans.

Hidden Hazards: A Simple Test to Detect Lead and Chromium, two highly toxic metals, in your drinking water
Wednesday, Dec. 4

The discovery of "Lead" in Flint Michigan's drinking water, as well as in some schools in the district, drew renewed attention to the health risks posed by this toxic metal. Exposure to "Lead" is a serious health concern that has been linked to various neurological disorders and diseases, particularly in young children whose developing brain acts like a sponge.

In this presentation, titled "Hidden Hazards: A Simple Test to Detect Lead and Chromium, two highly toxic metals, in your drinking water", SUNY Potsdam Chemistry Professor Fadi Bou-Abdallah will discuss a simple and inexpensive test that he has recently developed in his laboratory.

His test is based on gold nanoparticles which change color only in the presence of either lead or chromium. Such color change is visible by the naked eye down to 20 parts per billion (ppb). Considering that the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) and the WHO (World Health Organization) recommended the level of these toxins in our drinking water at 15 ppb for lead, and 50 ppb for total chromium, his test offers an easy solution for a simple, quick, and inexpensive method to test drinking water at home, and help address water insecurity in at-risk communities.

Volunteer Makaya Barrett, helps her father, Josh, owner of Glow Party Trailer, set up lights for the upcoming annual Tri-Town Haunted Hayrides in Brasher Falls.

Annual Tri-Town Haunted Hayride set up to scare

BRASHER — The forest came alive over the past couple of weekends in preparation for the Annual Tri-Town Chamber Haunted Hayride in Brasher Falls.

Many volunteer ghosts and goblins helped with electrical installation, prop set-up, wagon maintenance and dirt work in the woods. “The chamber is very excited this year that electrical outlets were added to the field, due to a commercial generator purchased by their fundraising efforts, skilled volunteers, and an electrical donation from Dow Electric,” said Ed Russell, Tri-Town Chamber of Commerce Vice President.

Among the decorating volunteers was 8 year old Makaya Barrett and her father, Josh, owner of Glow Party Trailer, who will set up all 6 nights of the hayride.

The Tri-Town Haunted Hayride will be held this year on September 27 & 28, October 4 & 5, and October 11 & 12 at 94 Leary Flint Rd, Brasher Falls.

Non-scary rides start at 5:30 p.m. until dusk, and scary rides start at dusk approximately 7:30 p.m.

“The decision to keep the low admission fee of $5 per person will allow all residents and surrounding community members to enjoy a low cost spooktacular event,” said Russell.

The haunted hayride benefits the Tri-Town communities of Brasher, Stockholm and Lawrence.

DANC hosting household hazardous waste collection day Sept. 28 in Canton

The Development Authority of the North Country, in cooperation with its regional county partners and the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation, will be sponsoring three free household hazardous waste collection day in Canton on September 28.

The event will take place at the St. Lawrence County Human Services Building, 80 State Highway 310.

Items such as leftover solvents, pesticides, pool chemicals, oil-based paints, latex paints, and aerosol cans that still have product in them will be accepted, as well as fluorescent light tubes. Empty aerosol cans, motor oil, asbestos, tires, construction debris and explosives will not be accepted.

Electronic waste (televisions, computers) will not be accepted, as it can be recycled at most county transfer stations.

Leftover paint, both latex and oil-based, will be accepted and recycled. If you don't want to wait for a collection event, residents can now recycle their unwanted paint year-round through a non-profit organization called PaintCare.

Through the PaintCare program, several paint retailers — although not all — in the tri-county area will accept leftover paint for recycling. Check www.paintcare.org for details and locations. Empty paint cans of either type should be dried out and disposed of in the trash.

In addition, unwanted or unused prescription and over-the-counter medications from residential households only will be collected by law enforcement at the Canton and Watertown events.

The collection events are open to residential households only; waste will not be accepted from businesses, schools, farms or municipalities.

For a complete listing of what will and will not be accepted at the Household Hazardous Waste Collection Days, please visit <https://www.northcountryrecycles.org/HouseholdHazardousWaste>. There you can also find tips on how to dispose of items that will not be accepted at the events.

SITCOMS..

"I was 16 and afraid. When I came up for freshman orientation I felt at ease. Potsdam was a safe space to be a foolish young man," Lorre said.

Fallback plan wasn't an option

Lorre said he first hoped to pursue a career in music but soon learned that it may not be in the cards for him after seeing world class musicians in concert.

"I wish I was more self aware and reflective as a young man. I was very focused on music for a career path. My mind just didn't work that way," he said.

He said his parents had always told him to have a backup plan, such as teaching.

But Lorre said that was never an option for him.

"I was told to have a fallback plan, like teaching. There was no fallback plan for me. In hindsight, it was incredibly naive to think but it worked to my advantage. I knew if I had a fallback position I'd likely fall back," Lorre said.

Though it worked out well for him, Lorre suggested that it may not be the best plan for others.

"There's great strength in being naive. I didn't believe the doubters. There is power in ignorance, in a way. I was a fairly self-obsessed young man but I refused to believe it couldn't be done," he said.

Failure is a teacher

Decades after moving to Hollywood Lorre continued to build upon his successful run as the "King of Sitcoms" with the ever popular "The Big Bang Theory."

But it wasn't a stunning success at first, Lorre said.

He said a first pilot was filmed a year prior to the show's debut, noting it was a "stunning failure" that he learned from.

"The core was there, Sheldon and Leonard were in the first pilot but we didn't have the full supporting case," he said.

A year later, CBS called and asked Lorre if he wanted to take a shot at "The Big Bang Theory" again.

"Of course we said yes. The first pilot just didn't work, so we were excited to have a second shot at it," he said.

Despite a second shot at the show, Lorre said the writer's strike complicated matters as they filmed the first season.

It wasn't until he and the cast attended Comic Con later that year that he understood the cultural impact the show would have.

"I told everyone in the cast 'Don't worry if there are only 11 people there'. We were just excited to be there," Lorre said.

He and the cast were met with a sold-out, standing room only reception.

Lorre detailed an autograph session later that day in which he saw a young fan crying as she met actor Jim Parsons, who played Sheldon on the show.

"That's when I understood just what an impact the show had on people. No one ever cried when they met Charlie Sheen," Lorre joked.

Lorre said the show offered outcasts a safe space to be themselves, a place to find a family of sorts.

"It's a show that people can relate to, those who are on the outside or who may feel like outcasts. There is something about the show they can relate to that maybe they can't with other shows," Lorre said.

Learning from characters

During a Q&A segment Lorre touched on his schedule as a showrunner and how he viewed his work as a writer.

"Every character is a learning opportunity as you write them," he said.

Though many would think the series Lorre has created were planned months in advance, he said that was not at all the case.

"We planned two weeks ahead, maybe. We didn't have a master plan for these things," he said.

Lorre said "The Big Bang Theory" was also a learning experience in other ways.

He touched on the physics of the show, saying he and his producing partner wanted the show to be authentic in that manner. But neither of them were physicists.

"I told him, 'Look, we can sit here forever but we're never going to be physicists,'" he joked.

So Lorre brought in a physicist from UCLA to assist on the production.

"Everything on the boards was accurate. We had physicists on set, Nobel Prize winners, you name it," he said.

Lorre said in his time as a showrunner he has learned many skills, one of which is to learn to delegate to others and trust them.

At the time "The Big Bang Theory" went live, Lorre was already three seasons into "Two and a Half Men." Two shows seemed like too much to handle, so Lorre sought the advice of another famous showrunner.

"So I called Norman Lear. Not a bad person to speak to. I told him I didn't know how to run two shows and his response was 'I can give you some advice but I don't think you're going to like it,'" Lorre said.

Lear then told Lorre that at his peak he was running seven shows at once, including smash hits "All in the Family," "Maude," "Sanford and Son," "One Day at a Time," "The Jeffersons," and "Good Times."

"You're right, I don't want to hear that," Lorre said.

He said Lear gave him a great piece of advice he still uses today.

"Go where the fire is burning brightest and try to put it out," Lorre said.

Laughter as a motivator

Now in his fifth decade in Hollywood, Lorre said his greatest motivator is the desire to make others laugh.

"I want to make people laugh, that's my motivation. If you lose sight of that, you've failed," he said.

Lorre spoke of his time as a child and his desire to spend time with his father, saying he had one night per week.

"Every Sunday I would watch the Ed Sullivan show with my father. That was our time," he said.

Lorre said it was through the Ed Sullivan show and the plethora of comedians that started on the show that he learned how important comedy could be.

Ever a student of the process, Lorre said he learned long ago that a pause, space and silence lend themselves to a great joke.

"It makes the comedy more accurate," he said.

Lorre commented that despite the best efforts of a writer, it can be difficult to correct a joke that doesn't land well. In order to do so, one must have humility, he said.

"The audience is huge. I know what's funny to me, so I start there. I only know what's funny to me but that's a good place to start," he said.

Lorre spoke to shows he would watch to learn from as well, including "Cheers" and "Everybody Loves Raymond."

"I would watch 'Cheers' and study it. How they did certain things, the joke structure. Look at 'Everybody Loves Raymond' as well. It's a show that mostly takes place on a couch and in a bedroom and it's hilarious," Lorre said.

Inspiration can be taken from many places and many mentors, he said.

"There are mentors everywhere, you just have to be open to them," he said.

Million dollar donation

Before the event wrapped up, Lorre had a surprise for Dr. Smith and the university.

Lorre commented that he has been approached many times over the last 15 years to speak at the school but continually turned down the opportunity.

"I always felt a little awkward about it, honestly. I didn't graduate, I was a drop out. That was kind of embarrassing," he said.

Lorre was awarded a Doctor of Humane Letters degree in 2009, when he also served as the keynote speaker at the graduation ceremony as well.

"But nobody calls me doctor," he joked.

But Lorre said he finally took school officials up on their offer after rethinking matters recently.

"I came back to say thank you because the two years I was here, 1970 to 1972...this was a safe environment to be a foolish young man," Lorre commented.

"I didn't, I didn't take advantage of what was offered. So, you know, it was hard coming back but I have a chance to speak to you students today. There's a great educational opportunity here. Take advantage of it. There's still plenty of time to make a mess of your lives after you graduate," Lorre said.

Lorre said he "didn't have the good, common sense" at the time he attended to recognize the opportunities SUNY Potsdam provided for him. That's why he wanted to participate with the university to provide opportunities for future generations.

"One of the things Jason (Ladouceur, Senior Director of College Advancement) came to me about was participating financially in the institution. Now, you can't cash this at the bank but here is a check for $1 million for the university," Lorre said.

The moment drew a standing ovation from the hundreds of faculty, staff, students, alumni and local residents who packed into Hosmer Hall for the momentous occasion.

EXPANSION...

paid for by Rochester Regional, is the largest and most visible demonstration of SLH's integration with the downstate healthcare provider in 2021, and potentially gives the local hospital the capacity to grow with more advanced care.

The new building will provide 60 private, single occupancy inpatient rooms that are 28% larger, as well as accommodations for family, where medically appropriate.

Eleven additional patient emergency department treatment rooms (for a total of 28 rooms) are also part of the new layout.

According to the health system's numbers, the project has impacted the regional economy with more than $56,369,000 of the $79,860,000 project spent by hiring local subcontractors between Syracuse and the North Country.

More than $45,000 is estimated to have been spent in local restaurants during construction and there more than 800 stays at local hotels by contractors, hospital officials said.

Employee feedback

The new floors and new spaces have given the health system a clean slate and options with how care can be set up and provided there, and much of that has been influenced directly by feedback from the hospital's practitioners, nurses and employees, the president said.

McGregor said it was important during construction for the administration and engineers to engage with the hospital's stakeholders, like its hospitalist, nurses and other employees to fine tune designs as things were being constructed.

One change that resulted from the feedback is that with the hospital's ICU remaining in the same space, the second and third floors of the new addition were reworked from initial plans to make patient transitions from ICU smoother and more efficient.

"Our nurses were instrumental with providing feedback as the project was evolving," McGregor said.

The staff also provided feedback on patient comfort issues, art work and room staging to make it easier for patients to be cared for. McGregor said getting staff input was crucial.

McGregor said hospital staff were "excited to be able to have more space."

The president said the new layout will allow support staff like case managers and hospitalists to work nearby on the various units directly with the nursing staff.

"Just the ability to have them all there on the units allows us to have more comprehensive care," she said. The president said there will now be space for patient conferences and other collaborative care compared to before where some case managers were often working in the space of a closet.

Even more importantly McGregor said the new space provides more patient privacy for themselves and their families for recovery and important conversations regarding their treatment.

"It's just a better environment for everyone," the president said.

Trying to make the "way finding" in the hospital clear with more signage for employees and outside emergency personnel that may have to find their way around the building has been one of the priorities of the project, the president said.

"This regional care pavilion doubles the square footage of our campus," McGregor said. She said as employees take up residence in the new wing, there could be more changes to the hospital's interior signage, as staff get used to "living" in the building.

More to do

Construction on the new four-story building will continue after the official opening ceremony on Oct. 7.

The new bed tower's fourth floor, which will feature the maternity wing, will be completed in the "near future" McGregor said. The re-designing and reutilizing of the spaces CPH staff will vacate when they relocate to the care pavilion will also be a next step.

Outside of the remaining construction and relocations on the campus, the health system will be working to expand its services for patients at the facility and in the region.

"We are continuing to advance our care," the president said, adding that a new spine care clinic will soon be available at the hospital and that CPH now has a thoracic surgeon on site for patients.

McGregor said SLH will further develop more comprehensive telehealth services, with technology and expertise available through its integration with Rochester Regional Health.

The president said the local health system will continue to work towards more alignment with Rochester Regional to provide the best care it can locally.

"Our goal is to be a role model for rural health from a national perspective," McGregor said.

The president said she would like to see more vascular services be available at the hospital as well as urology care that can utilize CPH's new DaVinci surgical robot in the future.

Credits community

"It's pure joy," McGregor said at seeing the pavilion construction nearing completion.

"It's all about the community and to be able to have such a state-of-the-art facility to take care of our community, take care of our families. You know, you look around this hospital and the nurses that work here and the staff that work here are all members of this community, and it makes me so proud to have this project finished, that we have this state-of-the-art resource for years to come," McGregor said.

"We appreciate the community's continued support and look forward to growing our services to meet the needs of our communities," the president said.

"I'm so proud of what we've done to date and proud to think about the advancements on the horizon going forward."

"It's not about the building, it's about the community," she said. "It's what happens inside the building that makes the difference."

HOMELESS...

trying to handle it as carefully and diligently as possible.

"They began moving out Monday afternoon and they did it on their own," Dalton stated. "We made offers of help and provided them with resources."

Dalton said he and members of the village board have received several inquiries from the public regarding the matter.

"We were getting lots of complaints from the community worried about safety," he added.

A drive through the property last week showed a couple of tents in place with bags of clothes strewn about, disabled bicycles, and carts filled with miscellaneous items.

"We are working on getting them to move on, but since it's Village property it's a bit complicated. The police are well aware of the people involved and all of them refuse any help offered. Social Services are done with them because they won't follow program rules. They also aren't interested in the shelter in Ogdensburg," the mayor noted in a prepared statement.

The mayor said Friday morning the village now has signage in place in all village parks indicating "closed after dark" and "no camping." No loitering and no trespassing signs will also be visible within the confines of the 19 Miner Street property.

It's only been recently that this makeshift community has become visible to the general public. For some time now, a contingent of homeless people have allegedly been living in areas throughout the village.

"The Board has heard plenty about 19 Miner but most people don't know that these people have mostly remained hidden from view until now. Several property owners have refused to kick them out. We also think someone has been in the woods between the BIRP and Atlantic testing. Rumor even had one living under the Main Street bridge a few years ago," Dalton said.

Dalton also noted that the entire building is scheduled to be torn down but it's been slow going because of the terms of the grant, and the time it takes the State to answer our inquiries.

North Country reps: end 'Green Light Law'

BY JEFF CHUDZINSKI
North Country This Week

CANTON — The North Country's state representatives, St. Lawrence County Sheriff, District Attorney and other local police chiefs are calling on state legislators to pass legislation to exclude border counties from the "Green Light Law."

In an address to multiple news outlets, Senator Dan Stec called the Driver's License Access and Privacy Act, which is often referred to as the Green Light Law, passed in 2019, "simply moronic."

"There's a growing crisis on our northern border, and especially here in the Swanton Sector, specifically the North Country of New York," Stec said.

Stec pointed toward the Driver's License Access and Privacy Act as a large catalyst for ongoing communication issues for law enforcement agencies. He said that due in large part to the legislation over 18,000 illegal migrants have been apprehended since Oct. 2023 in the Swanton Sector, which is a border region that includes St. Lawrence County.

The sector covers the State of Vermont; Clinton, Essex, Franklin, St. Lawrence and Herkimer counties of New York; and Coos, Grafton and Carroll counties of New Hampshire.

Stec says the number of people coming through Swanton illegally far exceeds the next closest sector on the northern border.

"They have only had around 1,100 in the same timeframe. The Swanton Sector has seen more apprehensions than two sectors on the southern border now. One is in Texas, the other is in California. This is a very serious, growing problem," Stec said.

The Driver's License Access and Privacy Act was enacted on June 17, 2019 and took effect on Dec. 16, 2019. It allows all New Yorkers age 16 and older to apply for a standard, not-for-federal purpose, non-commercial driver license or learner permit regardless of their citizenship or lawful status in the United States.

Licenses issued under that law are not recognized at the federal level.

Assemblyman Scott Gray explained that the Green Light Laws restrict the sharing of information between local and federal agencies. He said they can't access driving records or criminal records, which can create a dangerous situation for border agents.

"One border patrol agent told me that unless they change this a border patrol agent could encounter a New York State resident with a murder warrant and not know it," he said.

Gray says the proposed changes would exempt border counties from the Green Light Laws, which would allow information sharing in counties like St. Lawrence County.

St. Lawrence County Sheriff Rick Engle also took a few minutes to raise his list of concerns, a list that continues to grow as lines of communication are still unusable under the existing "Green Light Law."

Engle, like a number of officers in local agencies, works as part of a federal task force and shares office space with federal agencies.

However, under the "Green Light Law," those local officers are not legally allowed to share information or access the same databases.

He said that conflict could be a violation of the law.

Stec, Gray and Assemblyman Ken Blankenbush all commented that they would continue to pick up the fight in Albany but commented that it would be a difficult fight with half of the state legislature coming from New York City.

Open-Air Market draws record crowd

MADRID — The St. Lawrence County Chamber of Commerce said that the Craft, Food & Wine Open-Air Market, held on Saturday, September 21, was a resounding success, drawing over 3,400 attendees — the highest number in the event's history.

Now in its 5th year, this event showcased more than 80 unique artisans and producers, surpassing previous participation levels.

"This year's market exceeded all our expectations," said Kathryn Puleo, tourism & events manager and event coordinator for the Chamber. "The turnout was extraordinary, highlighting our community's commitment to shopping local. Our vendors were delighted with their sales and the engagement they experienced, and we received overwhelmingly positive feedback from attendees and the museum staff alike. Many visitors praised the event layout, expressing appreciation for the improved flow and overall atmosphere."

Attendees enjoyed a vibrant atmosphere at the St. Lawrence Power & Equipment Museum, exploring an impressive range of local products against the backdrop of historic exhibits. Many visitors noted it was their first time at the museum, adding to the day's excitement.

Puleo highlighted the strong partnership between the Chamber and the museum, stating, "This collaboration is vital to our event's success and helps foster a sense of community pride."

The Chamber extends heartfelt gratitude to its Leadership Circle Members for their continued support: Alcoa, NBT Bank, St. Lawrence Health, St. Lawrence University, The Arc of Jefferson-St. Lawrence County, and United Helpers, along with complimentary waste removal services provided by Casella Waste Management and sponsorship from St. Lawrence Federal Credit Union.

Why autumn pruning is bad

BY PAUL HETZLER

When I was younger, an old-time arborist I knew used to say “The best time to prune trees is when the tools are sharp.”

This guy was beset with shoulder injuries and knee problems because he also believed “What doesn’t kill you makes you stronger. Sadly, both of these old saws are dangerous lies.

Although tree-care companies have year-round expenses and need income in all seasons, a truly professional arborist knows there are two times of the year when pruning should be avoided.

Late spring between bud-break and full leaf-out is one period of pruning abstinence, and the other is in the fall from the time leaves start to change colour until trees are entirely bare. There are a number of reasons to put away pruning tools at this time of year.

The Claw-Back Clause: As days get shorter, deciduous trees and shrubs start to make a waxy layer between each leaf base and the twig to which they’re attached.

The wax will eventually seal the vessels that moved water and nutrients into, and sugars out of, leaves all summer. This blockage is what breaks down green chlorophyll and unmasks the yellow and orange pigments.

Before the tubes are entirely blocked, though, trees “claw back” about half the nutrients from each leaf: nitrogen, iron, magnesium, manganese, and other essential elements. This is very important to the nutrient budget of woody plants.

Trees also move sugars, the product of a season’s worth of photosynthesis, from twigs and branches down to the root system for storage and later distribution. Pruning branches now will deprive trees of both nutrients and energy needed for the following year.

The Illness-Infestation Angle: All woody plants have internal defense systems that make special antifungal and antimicrobial compounds to fight infections at the site of injuries like pruning cuts. This “tree-mune response” becomes active in the early spring and is on high alert through the summer, after which it starts to shut down. Wounds made in the fall are more likely to be infected by what are called perennial cankers. Nectria and Eutypella are the two primary genera of pathogens, but there are others. In addition, the level of disease spores in the air is highest in the fall.

Even though pines and spruces only lose a small portion of their needles, the same principles hold true. Cutting evergreen branches in the summer will rob trees of a share of the nutrients and sugars they need, but it also attracts a type of moth called a pitch-mass borer to lay her eggs on fresh pruning cuts. When the eggs hatch, the grubs feed on the sap as they enlarge the wound. In the process, they trigger excess pitch production. If you’ve ever noticed unsightly, oozing pitch on the trunks of pines and spruces, that’s a result of summer pruning that invited pitch-mass borers to set up housekeeping.

The Moral Imperative: The last reason to stash the saw until trees are fully dormant is the danger of running into a self-righteous arborist who views fall pruning as a moral failure. They may give you the hairy eyeball, or worse yet, might try to make you feel guilty through “pruning shaming.” I’m not saying that I’ve ever engaged in this kind of behavior...

Prevent home electrical fires

Electrical fires are no joke. Older homes may be most vulnerable to electrical fires, as such structures were not designed to handle the demands of modern living. The insurance experts at Nationwide say half of all homes in the United States have electrical systems that were installed before garage door openers, high-tech coffee makers, and many computers became must-have items. And the Electrical Safety Foundation International says homes built before 1973 with overloaded electrical systems pose a number of safety threats.

Homeowners can take various steps to reduce the risk of electrical fires at home.

- Install arc fault circuit interrupters. AFCIs are special types of circuit breakers that help prevent fires caused by nicked or frayed wiring. An AFCI gets tripped and cuts off power when an electrical problem is detected before a fire can start.

- Conduct a home electrical inspection. All homes more than 40 years old should be inspected to ensure their electrical systems can handle modern demands, says Nationwide. A qualified electrician can make recommendations regarding replacing breakers and suggest other modifications to improve safety.

- Turn to automatic shut-offs. Homeowners can utilize appliances and additional devices that automatically shut off after a set period of time. This can reduce the risk of overheating.

- Rely on timers or smart devices. Timers and smart home devices can give homeowners control of electrical components like appliances or lights from a remote area. This enables users to turn an appliance on or off to reduce overheating or avoid additional risk factors for electrical fires.
